The Unofficial Guide...

Whether you pulled up with your mom and dad in a mini-van stuffed with all of your possessions you could possibly fit, or whether you drove yourself back to campus from the last summer you'd ever have as a college student, the gates you entered held a very different establishment than that you'd previously visited or spent three years running amok within. Over the past year, construction of the Barret Library was completed, and this colossal building is now the center of campus life, housing a coffee shop with Starbucks coffee and a 24 hour study and computer lounge. Java City has now become a smoothie bar. The biggest freshman class ever to enter our school has arrived, thus commuters and those with cars have grown amazingly creative in finding places to park their vehicles. The Lynx Card was demoted, and is now only used for meal plans and bookstore billing; grey electronic key fobs now provide access to buildings and dorms. At long last, our school was added to The Facebook, an Internet community connecting thousands of college students across the nation, and editing one's profile or changing one's Facebook picture took procrastination to a whole new level. We lost a beloved faculty member, yet gained many instructors eager to continue the tradition of excellence in education that Rhodes has perpetuated for the past 158 years.

Beginning with familiar landmarks...Continuing to forge new paths...This is Rhodes. Welcome.

RHODES

"There is always something exciting and fun to do on campus! Last year, during Rites to Play, I was handing out t-shirts to kids - every kid was able to have one free - and I was watching their faces and the faces of those around me...I felt that everyone around me was just so genuinely enthusiastic and so excited to be there, even on a Saturday morning...it shows how special and unique we are, here, compared to other schools...I couldn't imagine being anywhere else!" Current Events

The biggest event to rock Rhodes and the country was devastating Hurricane Katrina. Katrina hit the Gulf Coast with fury, wiping out thousands of homes and severely debilitating towns and cities, most notably New Orleans. Nearby Baton Rouge doubled in population, and other cities welcomed evacuees and collected supplies and donations to help those in need. Rhodes College heartily welcomed a number of students from Tulane University while their home is being rebuilt, and students also selflessly visited the Gulf Coast during holidays and in May to assist with repairs.

Other notable occurrences from this school year included...

Rosa Parks, civil rights activist, died at the age of 92. - The conflict in Iraq continues, with American soldiers still remaining overseas to help the country hold elections and construct a new government. - Ashton Kutcher and Demi Moore officially tied the knot. - Coretta Scott King passed away on January 31, 2006. - Brokeback Mountain gained popularity for Heath Ledger's laudable performance and for its controversial content. - The top five selling albums of 2005 were: The Emancipation of Mimi, Mariah Carey; The Massacre, 50 Cent; Breakaway, Kelly Clarkson; American Idiot, Green Day; and Monkey Business, The Black Eyed Peas. - Overhauling Social Security was and continues to be a primary concern of President Bush. - Controversy over preserving the life of brain-damaged Terri Schiavo involved a reconsideration moral issues regarding the preservation and quality of life. - A major earthquake with a magnitude of 7.6 struck Pakistan in October. - Former Rites of Spring performers Three Six Mafia won an Academy Award for "It's Hard Out Here for a Pimp," featured in Hustle and Flow, a motion picture which was filmed in Memphis. The film's remarkable success over the past year skyrocketed local filmmaker Craig Brewer to national fame. - Also in October, both House majority leader Tom DeLay and Vice President Cheney's chief of staff I. Lewis Libby were indicted. - In March, Rhodes changed the operating hours of the Lynx Lair, forcing students to either quench their hunger pains with Rat fare at 4:30, or hover idly for thirty minutes until meal plan began at 5:00.

While on a Katrina relief trip over Fall Break, a group of students pauses for a group picture amidst the mass destruction in Ocean Springs, Mississippi. In the wake of the storm, many boats were left stranded on dry land.

Ellie Hahn '08, a member of the relief trip team, said, "I really appreciate that we got to see the destruction in Mississippi. New Orleans received most of the attention, so I feel like Mississippi was overlooked. Even though we didn't actually work there, we saw the need and were able to spread the word to our fellow students."

In Camp McCain, Mississippi, Tiane Leonard '07 gathers with her Military Science class at the Fall Field Tactical Exercise training as a part of the ROTC program. Regarding the war in Iraq, Marian Pernell '08 said, "Coming from a military family, I believe that we should support the president and our troops no matter what the situation is. Since this is our mess and we started it, we should stay until the country is fixed. I don't like it, but that's where we are."

On the ski slopes in Colorado, Ginger Thompson '08 celebrates a successful run. Thompson said, "I'm sorry to say I didn't really watch the Olympics due to so much homework! But if I were to watch, I enjoy the downhill skiing, hence I was trying to emulate the skills of the Olympians in the mountains of Colorado."

While vacationing in Beaver Creek, Colorado over Christmas Break with Rhodes friends, Molly Smith '08 takes a pause after a run snowboarding. Smith said, "I didn't watch a lot of the Olympics, but while I was out in Colorado I was able to watch the Olympic qualifying trails for moguls and freestyle jumping in Steamboat, CO. That was really cool. I really liked watching the mogul runs." The 2006 winter Olympics were held in February in Torino, Italy. With 29 medals, the United States landed second place behind Germany's 29.

The freshman experience, of course, wouldn't be complete without Williford and Glassell. Whether you actually lived in one of these dorms or not didn't matter - as a freshman, you're guaranteed to take part in some covert partying or crash on a friend's futon on a number of occasions. Maria Cowley and Margot Tiernan, both '09, have enjoyed their experience navigating the maze of Williford. "Having a semi-private hall [in the quad setup] gave us the opportunity to have six friends automatically," Tiernan said. She and Cowley aren't roommates, but became fast friends and are nearly inseparable now. Some aspects of dorm life they weren't too thrilled with include the fact that the dorm is a single sex dorm, and were somewhat jealous that some of their friends had sinks in their room, but do find it nice that they don't have to clean their bathrooms. Above all, though...you're only a freshman once, and those that made it through know that what happened within those four walls that year made lasting memories (some of which you might wish you could forget) of that unforgettable first year!

Roommates Whitney Duval '08 and Christine Zhu '08 gather with a group of friends in Williford before going to the Pike Halloween party. Duval said, "I love living in Williford and hanging out in people's rooms. I've noticed that Williford has the most eclectic bunch of girls, and I have friends on all floors. And it's been great getting to know and hang out with the girls."

"I like Willi [Williford Hall] because the quad-style living has allowed me to get to know a group of girls really well. It has also been fun to be with all freshmen girls and to get together for movie nights and to watch Gilmore Girls on Tuesday nights."
-Laura Cross '09

"I've really enjoyed living on second floor Trezevant because the hall is a mix of freshmen and sophomores. My big sis lives two doors down from me."
-Caroline Cook '09

Leslie Bailey '09, Lauren '09, and Jennifer Carter '09 prepare to go out just after returning for spring semester. Bailey said, "We don't know what it's like to have a hall bathroom since we're freshmen, but we really love having the suite-style room in Robinson. It's so nice to have our own bathroom."

A variety of cardio machines are offered to students in the weight room, including stationary bicycles, ellipticals, and treadmills. Most of the sports teams at Rhodes participate in daily workouts.

Lizzie Wright '09 joins Kendra McColloch '08 for a game of racquetball. McColloch said, "I use the facilities several times a week."

Though the Bryan Campus Life Center has been eclipsed in size and is no longer the biggest building on campus, visiting the BCLC often at least daily is a crucial part of a Rhodes student's life. It's great to take a break from studying and play basketball for fun with friends or competing in intramurals, or maybe run on the elliptical machine while watching television to catch up on the day's news.

The BCLC also provides opportunities for local celebrity sightings. The Memphis Grizzlies honed their NBA skills on the courts of Mallory Gym, and refinished its floors, all while the FedEx Forum, their future home, was completing construction.

Crystal Jessee, '07, spends a great deal of her time in the BCLC, for both work-study and sports practices. Jessee said, "Working there is pretty nice. The football coaches are hysterical; every Friday before games we listen to Johnny Cash. I feel like I spend as much time in the BCLC as I do in class, between work study and practice! Now that I've moved off campus, I guess you could call it my on-campus home, since I practically live there."

Jane Wells, Rhodes alum and head field hockey coach, agreed, remarking that the BCLC is where a "community/neighborhood feel" is established. Wells also said that there are preliminary plans and consideration going into adding a rock climbing wall in the future.

Upperclass Residence Halls

When spring rolls around, upperclassmen know it's time for housing selection and its impending anxiety. To stay within the campus gates, or to move across the street? Or, if you're a junior or senior, to stay on campus or to move off campus in a house or apartment? Naturally one's luck in the housing lottery is partly a factor; regardless, living in both locations each have unique benefits.

Claire Tonore, '08, chose to live in Bellingrath and has been more than pleased with her experience. She and her friends from freshman year, including their RA, all live together on the same floor. Tonore elaborated, "It's wonderful and so convenient that two of my good friends live next to me and that the wall we share is right by my bed so I can just hit it or scream to them whenever I want them to come over. Also, another major benefit of living in Belli is that it is next to the Rat. I never eat at the Lair anymore, and I'm not even kidding." Matt Lovett, '07, took a different route and has been equally as content. After fulfilling his two year requirement of staying on campus, he packed up his things as quickly as possible and chose to live nearby in a duplex with an upperclassman friend. When asked what he enjoyed most, Lovett immediately replied, "Privacy." It's fun to have friends a few steps away, but he greatly enjoys no longer being subjected to squeaky bunk beds belonging to upstairs neighbors. Either choice is equally as valid, for how many other schools can boast that in 2006's edition of the Princeton Review's annual college survey they ranked #7 out of 361 top colleges in the nation as having the overall "best quality of life," #7 for "most beautiful campus," and #17 for "dorms like palaces"?

But you have to walk to Stewart to do your laundry, and walking across the street to class in the rain can be a drag."

Drew Batey '07 and Chrissie Hendrickson '06 gather with a group of friends in East Village to watch The OC, an event that is vital to many students' weekly regiments.

Undoubtedly, one of the highlights of one's day is visiting the Burrow Refectory. "The Rat" boasts a plentiful array of tasty delights, and judging by the line consistently present outside its doors each day, especially on Fried Chicken Friday, evidently students continue to be satisfied with what the Rat provides. Last year the Rat introduced take out boxes, so students without a long break between classes or those who lived off campus were able to have a nutritious meal to eat at their convenience. This year smaller meal plans were introduced for those living off campus, so they weren't left without their Rat fix. Certainly the best part of the Rat is that dinner is served beginning at 4:30. Instead of biding time by playing online poker as one's stomach rumbles, waiting for night to fall, one can simply loiter after class and feast upon as much hummus or Rattlesnake Stew as one pleases.

"Homecoming was the biggest crowd I have seen at a Rhodes football game yet!" Jessica Graham, '06, remarked. "Everyone seemed to be dressed up and energized with Lynx spirit." Homecoming took place the weekend of October 7-9, and while the football game s Rose-Hulman had not-so-positive results, the sun was shining and the weather couldn't have been better for an outside affair. Every fraternity house hosted tailgates, and the Pi Kappa Alpha and Sigma Alpha Epsilon houses each hosted live bands. Alumni were dazzled by the expansive Barret Library. Despite the sad move to the BCLC, Rites of Spring 2006 was another big hit for RAB. This year's concerts included Ari Hest, The Bravery, and local jam bands. Festivities and celebration swept over the campus for three days which kicked off with Pi Kappa Alpha Beach Party on Thursday night. The sand and live band at the Pike house set the mood for Rhodes student's to kick off their shoes, put away their books, and celebrate the arrival of the spring season. Festivities continued until Sunday with back to back concerts in the BCLC and multiple parties on frat row. Students also gave back to the community that weekend with its annual Rites to Play. Children from the Memphis community poured onto campus to enjoy carnival activities such as face painting, cotton candy, and a dunking booth. Although the weather provided rain and clouds, Rhodes students persevered and celebrated Rites of Spring 2K6.

Graduation

After four long and happy years, the senior class of 2006 received their much earned diplomas on Saturday, May 13th. The last year at Rhodes was just that- a year of "lasts." Seniors enjoyed last times from eating on campus to turning in their last final. Senior Week also celebrated "lasts" with activities such as a trip to Tunica and a party at the Yacht Club. Seniors toasted memories, exchanged stories, and captured moments during their last week at Rhodes College. As their senior week t-shirt exclaims, "Respect Your Elders," many seniors felt just that- a sense of age and experience. Senior Catherine Scott describes, "It's great to be a senior, but it's also really sad. We're all getting old!" Although it was surreal and exciting to walk across the stage wearing the famous cap and gown, many will reflect on their years at Rhodes with a smile, a laugh, and even a tear.

Student Government

Student Governance groups all continued to work together to uphold the great amount of responsibility required for councils which are completely student-run. They also each made strides to make themselves more visible and more available.

The Honor Council visited Search and Life classes this year to reinforce to first-years the ideals that Rhodes upholds in its code of ethics. Members also hosted a community day for freshmen during orientation, during which they held open question and answer sessions. SRC President Ashley Carver said, "The Social Regulations Council has really enjoyed working with the Honor Council this year reevaluating the judicial system at Rhodes and learning how we can better represent the students."

For Rites of Spring, RAB successfully brought the campus together with musical headliners The Bravery and Murphy Lee. They also hosted the annual Rites to Play Harder on the BCLC lawn, bringing back the much-enjoyed Slip 'n Slide.

ResVoice and Residence Life co-hosted a movie event with Kinney, offering tickets to the Broadway to big screen success Rent.

RSG compiled Curriculum Committee Reports, the result of meetings between representatives and academic chairs, to better acquaint students with the upcoming changes that will result from the new curriculum. RSG also worked to acquire more space for student organizations in the Burrow Library. Lastly, RSG has worked to revive Lynx TV, which hosts information and upcoming events, as well as student-produced programming, and in the near future, weather reports.

Kinney, Rhodes' premier community service organization, hosted many firsts this year: Peace and Justice Week in October, Paint Your Box Day with Earth Justice (encouraging recycling), Rhodes' First Earth Day Earth Fair with a Captain Planet Theme, and the highly successful Halloween "Costumes for a Cause: Trick or Treat for Hunger" food drive which will assuredly become an annual occurrence. Kinney also launched their website, www.kinneyprogram.com. Recurring events were equally as successful. These included the 3rd Annual Midtown Service Day in which first-years get acquainted with local Memphis efforts, and Hunger and Homelessness Week which involved a Bread for the World letter writing campaign to local congresspersons. Souper Contact, the student-run soup kitchen, was able to relocate into a newly renovated facility at St. John's UMC in December.

Religious

Rhodes hosts many student groups which embrace spirituality and fellowship, and those which intellectually challenge the realm of spirituality and its impact upon society. Catholic Student Association Fall President Jessica Graham, '06, and Spring President Therese Rapski, '07 worked toward "expanding the CSA's activities and developing a stronger sense of fellowship amongst its members," Rapski said. Other accomplishments Rapski mentioned include monthly on-campus Mass and Confession, fellowship dinner speakers, Wing Night, bowling at Imperial Lanes, a fall retreat with RCF, and a new larger leadership team. Greek Fellowship member Callie Brooks, '06, told of her recent experiences in the organization: "I have been involved all four years here and the friends I have found have been life-long ones. They are my support and encouragement in times of need. They are the ones I can be completely real with and share my deepest struggles with, but they are also the ones I can goof off with and be completely ridiculous with because I know they'll love me no matter how silly I act. While at GF, I may laugh, I may cry, I may search the deepest parts of my heart, but I always leave refreshed and in love with God, friends and the life I've been given."

Dave Huntzinger, '08, RAF Interim President, shared, "One of the highlights this year was the lecture and Q&A session Dr. Olsen (Biology) and Dr. Saxe (History). Their concurrent talks about the Scopes Monkey Trial and evolution/natural selection were very well received by the fully packed audience. Also, the RAF/RCF debate did fairly well in terms of student attendance and participation. The subject was "Can we be good without God?" and while some complained that the debaters referred to philosophers unfamiliar to the audience, I thought it was, in general, a successful endeavor."

Canterbury member Jenny Phillips, '09, said, "We're looking forward to beginning Complaine, a nighttime worship service, on Wednesday nights from 8-9." The Episcopalian group has spent recent months becoming better organized in preparation for more prominence on campus in upcoming semesters.

Philip Krause, '06, mentioned that he and other JSO members enjoyed the musical performance of Hasidic rapper Matisyahu this spring at Austin's SXSW festival.

Arts

Fine Arts groups allow Rhodes students to showcase individual talents, using their voices both dramatically and musically.

CUP continued to entertain the campus by hosting their usual variety of late-night performances in McCoy, including one whose title spoofed the Vagina Monologues.

Lipstick on Your Collar singer Caroline Ferrari, '06, recounted many fond memories of performances: "It was great to be able to sing in Hardie Auditorium once again after not being able to use it last school year. AOII Fall fest was fun because we came dressed in our Halloween costumes to perform at night. Singing at the Dixon was a great experience. It was a pleasant surprise for all of the people who came to the open house to look at the art work. Vocal Valentines are always fun. We look forward to catching people by surprise in their dorm rooms and singing mushy love songs to make them feel embarrassed, but at the same time very loved."

The ten Woolsocks, according to Toney Walsh, '09, had a busy fall semester: "We performed at All Sing, sang at the class of 1965 reunion, went caroling downtown at Will Tyler's office and surrounding businesses, and gave a Christmas concert in December. We had t-shirts made and sold them along with our new CD that came out last fall. We've had a lot of fun learning songs that are new to everyone, not just the new guys." An endeavor in which the group is currently involved is the creation of a Woolsocks

Multicultural

Multicultural organizations hosted grand events at Rhodes, with the intention of involving the whole campus and making students aware of national and international issues and experiences.

BSA member Andrea Bell, '09, remarked, "For me, the planning and follow-through with the Black History Month events were most important this year. A lot went into each event, and we were able to educate those who did attend about black culture in a variety of interesting and exciting ways." Leonard Curry, '07, added, "I am especially proud of our co-sponsorship with African American Studies, IFC, NPHC, and NPC to bring Dr. Tamara Brown to campus. My personal favorite moment comes from the spoken word night, "Shout It Out", during Black History Month. The turnout was great and the cultural sharing was wonderful."

HOLA co-sponsored two salsa nights and hosted a Dia de Los Muertos event on November 2. Celebrating the "Day of the Dead" involved traditional pan de muertos (dead bread), hot chocolate, an informative video, and decorative altars celebrating those who have passed (including Rosa Parks and various Hispanic authors). Special Interest

Most Rhodes students, as is commonly known, are involved in some sort of community service. Special Interest organizations contributed to this spirit, and while doing so, fostered closer relationships amongst their members.

BACCHUS at Rhodes President Tara Daniel noted the following highlights: "This year, we hosted the Relationship Workshop in the fall and the Sex Olympics in the spring, and new this year, sold condom roses on Valentine's Day. We have hosted late night events such as midnight ice cream sundaes and Conga Night."

FOSTER members brought a little sparkle to Rites festivities by appearing, as they annually do, as Condom Fairies. They also implemented a sophisticated website, which hosts useful contact information, events, and open forums to encourage discussion.

Jason Jordan, '07, said, "GROUP does a lot of different things like having bowling nights, laser tag, and zoo visits. I think being in it lets me form a closer relationship with friends."

College Republicans Treasurer Brittany Austin, '08, recounted, "At Christmas we bought lots of toys for the Toys for Tots. Close to Valentine's Day we asked members to buy a stuffed bear to donate and they would be given to children at St. Jude." College Republicans also sold red koozies that said "The Best Party on Campus."

Publications

Rhodes' publications all recently underwent noticeable changes. The Sou'wester underwent aesthetic alterations, including utilizing a thicker-grade newsprint and spicing up the overall layout. To premiere the new implementations, the staff hosted an event in January which featured visiting staff members from the Memphis Flyer. Jeff Knowles, '06, commented, "The resident assistant program, new curriculum, and change in alcohol policy were hotly debated issues this year."

Another printed publication, the Southwestern Review, increased its content to 80 pages from 64, allowing more space for talented writers. The Publications Board was involved with this, and also contributed to the reintroduction of Lynx TV.

The Yearbook staff, headed by editor Madoline Markham, '08, utilized a new web-based design program. "It's great because the staff can work on everything from any computer with internet access. Also, we don't have to ship anything; it's all done over the internet," said Markham.

Alpha Kappa Alpha was an organization of presence and spirit this year. The ladies joined forces with Sigma Gamma Rho and other Greek organizations to raise money for Hurricane Katrina victims in the fall and were honored at the Greek Awards later that year. With their help of the initiation of NPHC Council on campus, Alpha Kappa Alpha has succeeded in strengthening and growing as an organization on campus.

The year was bound to be a success after Alpha Omicron Pi's success recruitment of a large pledge class, an achievement they deserved from well chosen and performed Recruitment songs and friendly smiles. Their success carried on into the winter with such honors at the Greek Awards for their academic success and outstanding campus involvement. Their philanthropy events including Stick-Up-for-Arthritis during Halloween and their annual Softball tournament in the spring raised an impressive amount of money for their charity as well. Their outstanding chapter growth this year and strong involvement in non-Greek organizations supports the thought that this year could have been the Year of the Panda...

"Always Chi-Omega..." is sung with a smile as it floats out of the house during Recruitment each fall. This year has been a successful year for Chi Omega beginning with their successful recruitment of a pledge class for 2005-2006. As the year progressed, the chapter performed a charismatic series of dances for All-Sing and in February, swept the Greek Awards and was honored for their academic achievements not only among Greek women, but on Rhodes campus as well.

The chapter proved that "Love doesn't have anything to do with it" at the Kappa Delta All-Sing competition and won first place for their performance with such songs as "Ring of Fire" and "Runaround Sue." The ladies kept going strong and raised the most money for Up-till-Dawn fundraiser for their philanthropy, St. Jude Children's Hospital and were awarded with multiple honors at the Greek Awards such as Chapter President and Chapter Advisor of the Year.

Each year, Kappa Delta contributes traditions that are both a highlight and enjoyment of the Greek year. Their All-Sing competition was yet another success with its theme of "What's Love Got to do With It" and their Mr. Shamrock competition in their Spring was well-attended as Greek and non-Greek students gathered to judge Rhodes men and raise money for Kappa Delta's national philanthropy. Kappa Delta was also honored at the Greek Awards for their academic achievements. As the largest sorority on the row, Kappa Delta has again shown their year that their house will always be "Sweet home Kappa Delta..."

Eddie Davis '06 works hard on a reading assignment in a group-study room.

Barret, the largest building on campus, opened in the fall with over 100,000 square feet. The building was built with a price tag of $42 million, a majority of which was donated by alum Paul Barret, Junior. The music library has moved from Hassell and now hides downstairs where students can find media, including current DVDs, available for checkout at a price 1/3 that of Blockbuster. In addition, the computer labs moved from Buckman to 1st and 2nd floor Barret. Work-study workers find that they are treated exceptionally well as exemplified by the treat bags they receive for finals and every holiday. Many may not realize that more employees in the library are Rhodes alums than non-alums.

Buckman Hall, the newest academic building on campus, houses the international studies, political science, economics, and business departments. Despite its young age, the building looks and feels like it has been around just as long as some of the older buildings, in keeping with the architectural code. Many of its classrooms are "smart," meaning that they have the latest audio and visual technologies that many professors use for presentations. The national championship mock trial team practices in the court room on the third floor. Each February, the Vagina Monologues are read in Blount auditorium. Just outside the main entrance, a piece of the Berlin Wall that the college president brought back from Germany is encased and on display.

Clough

Clough (or "Cluff") is the academic building name most likely to be mispronounced. Many of the classes students take here are inspired by the "Let's go to Clough and talk about our feelings!" Facebook group because it hosts the psychology, anthropology-sociology, philosophy and other humanities-heavy departments. The building also houses the art department and the Clough-Hanson on-campus art gallery, which features exhibits from both on and off campus artists. It is also unique in its rebellious architecture, with clear windows instead of the stained glass that is part of the architectural code, as art students need the natural light.

To most students, FJ is best known for its heavy doors with odd hinges that are nearly impossible to open, its large window that is constantly painted with announcements for upcoming events, and its giant dinosaur in the "Dino Lounge." Science majors spend a particularly great amount of time here as it houses all labs and is home to the biology department. ARO tour guides find that the building is probably most interesting to prospective students and their parents, as they can describe how it is underground due to its large size and to promote energy conservation. In addition, it connects to the basements of the physics and math buildings, displays a rose garden in its courtyard, and its amphitheater entrance is home to the annual Rites of Spring festivities (rain permitting, as 2006 demonstrate).

Kennedy is now home to the chemistry department, but when Rhodes first moved to Memphis in 1925, it was home of all the sciences. Climbing the geodesic dome, the large structure in front of the building, is a late-night fun-filled activity. The south entrance was the set for scenes for As the World Turns in 2002. McCoy

As the year ended, the freshmen are sighing a relief that construction of additions to McCoy are nearing completion. With the new addition, the building will double in size and allow all the theatre department to be housed in one building. The building was originally the Zeta Tau Alpha house but was transformed into a McCoy with the black box stage, which allows for many production types. This year the theatre produced The Tempest, Pastorela, Tongue of a Bird, and Ubu Roi and was home to the practices and productions of the popular student improv-comedy troupe, CUP. Devotion to the theatre extends beyond its productions: more students can fit inside the fountain out front than one might think, and the theatre's symbol is tattooed on the truly devoted.

Ohlendorf

Ohlendorf houses the offices, classrooms and computer labs for the math and computer science department. The second floor is home to a library that students find as a secret haven for quiet study space with its large windows that allow a lot of sunlight. Math Help, a student tutor group meets in this library; here, math majors provide help for their peers taking math classes to fulfill general education requirements. Also, AfterMath gathers here to enjoy math-related movies and other activities, including an annual Pi Day celebration on March 14.

Palmer

As the oldest academic building on campus, Palmer is home to many traditions, offices, and the English department. Be on your best behavior: it hosts offices of the President and Deans as well as the Bursar and Registrar. Freshmen have to be careful to get in the habit of walking around the seal in the center of the first floor, as tradition holds that walking across it prevents you from graduating in four years. Students can find information on study abroad in its office on the second floor. Also on this floor are classrooms that are home to desk graffiti that is sure to provide a semester's worth of entertainment. This year one classroom was renovated and wooden desks with graffiti were replaced with new cushion-backed chairs with wheels and white walls were painted shades of tan. Lining the wall of the hallway is the Hall of Fame, displaying the faces of students from years past. This year's inductees were Ben Carroll, Erin Chlum, Laura Dallas, Julia Dobbins, Carrie Osbourne, and Rebecca Saleska'06.

Rhodes Tower

Rhodes Tower is home of physics and modern language offices. At the end lengthy stair climb sits the astronomy lab with its telescope domes where students take what is probably the most popular science. The building also features the ability to collect sunlight through an optical tracker on the roof and routing it to classrooms and laboratories on lower floors for spectroscopy and other experiments. The Society of Physics Students hosts the popular yearly egg and pumpkin drop competitions off the roof.

Women's Cross Country Captain May King, '06, said, "This season was probably my most challenging but most rewarding season so far in college. As captain, I've watched the members of this team work hard and change from ordinary runners into real runners and true conference competitors. I'm so proud to be a part of this great group of girls!" The XC team was smaller than those of years past, which made competitions against rivals more demanding, but the girls rose to the occasion. Remarkable moments were placing 5th in the SCAC Championships and two weeks later, defeating Centre and Southwestern in the Regional Meet. Katy Buckner, '07, reflected, "I have never had more passion for the sport than I did this past fall! It doesn't get any better than when we beat Centre and Sewanee in the same weekend for the first time in many years. Next year we are going for it all: a conference championship and an NCAA D3 tournament bid!"

According to John Harrison, '06, "After a slow start, the Men's XC team had their most successful year ever." They placed 3rd at the SCAC Championships, where Harrison, Nick Lewis, '08, and Heath Henderson, '06, each broke previous Rhodes SCAC XC records. Colin Strickland, '06, and Mark Handelman, '09, both came in at one second behind the previous SCAC record.

Another laudable moment of the season included a 2nd place win at the NCAA Regional Championships, where the top five runners' average time was the fastest at a regional championship in Rhodes' history. Harrison, Lewis, Henderson, Strickland, and Handelman were also each named All-Region.

Soccer

First-year coach Bobby Lessentine, awarded SCAC Coach of the Year, led Women's Soccer through an amazing and highly successful season. The team was exemplary in their academic discipline: the girls earned the NSCAA Team Academic Award and Katy Buckner, '07, earned a place on the 2005 NSCAA/adidas College Women All-America Team. Buckner is only the 2nd player in Rhodes' history to be awarded with this national honor. Four Rhodes women were also named to the All-SCAC team: Buckner, Caroline Voelkel, '08, Jessica Devitt, '06, and Molly Buss, '09.

Rachel Haggerty, '06, reflected upon the season: "This past season was a leap for the Rhodes Women's Soccer Program. I am proud to be an alum of this team; they will go further than any team before. They are great players, dedicated, and hardworking. And under Bobby's leadership, there isn't anything they can't do."

Class of 2006

"Freshman year was the best year! Everyone was so carefree and excited about everything."
-Tiffany Burch

We came in August of 2002. We remember driving down the road in front of Briggs. We selected from food from individual stations in Servery B, including (generally rather spicy) noodle bowls. We went through informal rush. We lived in Williford when the RA wasn't one of our four roommates smack in the middle of the quad. We partied in the townhouses before Campus Safety moved in. We stayed up hunting for hot guys (and prank calling) using the printed book of Faces. We remember buildings named Austin and Tuthill. We climbed the giant hill of dirt. We experienced a massive snow...snow that actually stuck to the ground. The "Unofficial Guide," you say? Well, we know the real secrets. The paths off the beaten paths. We're the class of 2006.

"Incoming freshmen, don't be fooled. Fashions and trends on this campus don't dictate your lifestyle, and this is not, I repeat, not, the real world in which real people conduct real business."
-Will Corvey

"I feel confident leaving the gates of Rhodes that I am a well-rounded woman walking into a world of opportunity."
-Jessica Graham

"If I could do one thing over again at Rhodes I would party twice as hard and study five times harder."
-Christian Leve

"I'll never forget the Kappa Sigma Formal in my junior year when I thought I was about to get attacked by a pack of wolves... that was intense."

"Rhodes has taught me to step outside of my comfort zone in order to understand others' perspectives. Similarly, those same experiences helped me to become even more convicted about my morals and my religious beliefs. At times it was very discouraging when it was me against the class, but it's made me stronger and that's something that I thank Rhodes for."

"Try to take advantage of what Rhodes and the surrounding community has to offer. You only get to go to college once, so make it count!"

"After four years in college, the one thing that I will carry for the rest of my life from my college experience is how important it is to live in the present moment because time goes by really fast and if you can't enjoy where you are at that moment, the past and the future are meaningless."

"Go to as many lectures and workshops as you can. No matter how random they might seem, you will always learn something unique and you don't even have to take a class to do it. Some of the most interesting lessons come in forms you'd never have expected." - Erin McGhee

"Never undervalue a good professor. Really they can make or break a class, and so can your response to them. If you think your professor is awesome, let them know by being actively engaged in what they are trying to teach you. As a result everyone will get more out of it." - Paige Carpenter

"Don't come to college expecting to be changed. If you truly want to become an educated, mature individual you have to actively seek out situations that will challenge you; push your limitations. In closing, some directional advice from those with experience:

"Since I stepped on this campus freshman year, I have not wanted to leave. Being a senior I still feel the exact same way. So don't take anything for granted during your four years because Rhodes will inevitably shape who you are and you'll want to remember that forever." -Chrissie Hendrickson, '06

"Make friends with RAs and Campus Safety...oh, and the nurses in the Moore Moore. When God chooses to overlook all the good you've done, it's nice to see a familiar face." -Chelsea Ashworth, '06

"When I was a freshman, my friend Jenny and I decided to go to the gym together. She got on a treadmill and I was using a machine a few feet away from her. We had been there maybe about 10 minutes when I turned around to say something to her, and she suddenly flew off the treadmill. Not many people saw it and she quickly recovered, but the expression on her face as she sat on the ground and tried to get back up was priceless." -Meaghan Hines

"Once, Professor Bremer was discussing what he thought 'Memphis' meant. He said that in Memphis, you really get a feel for music and what surrounds you is part of what influences you. So, he talks about what kind of music that comes out of Memphis and how you can drive around and see people who don't have air conditioning sitting out on their porches in the summertime to stay cool and you can get a feel for the struggle that the poor have to endure to get by. With a straight face, he says that 'you can really feel the pain of their lifestyle and it gets you in the mood to write inspiring music where you can feel it, you get into it.' With a huge smile on his face, he threw his hand up and down in the air, screaming 'Whoop That Trick!!'" -Eric Montesi

"As long as I live I will never forget the happy days of my sophomore year at Rhodes College and the friendships that made that joy possible." -Jonathan Croft

The Bridge Builder

An old man, going a lone highway,
Came at the evening, cold and gray,
To a chasm vast and deep and wide;
The old man crossed in twilight dim,
The sullen stream had no fear for him;
But he turned when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.
"Old man," said a fellow pilgrim near,
"You are wasting your strength with building, here;
Your journey will end with the ending day,
You never again will pass this way;
You've crossed the chasm deep and wide;
Why build this bridge at evening tide?"
The builder lifted his old gray head—
"Good friend, in the path I have come," he said,
"There followeth after me today,
A youth whose feet must pass this way;
The chasm that has be naught to me
That fair-haired youth may pitfall be;
He, too, must cross in twilight dim—
Good friend, I am building this bridge for him"

As discovered throughout these pages, looking at Rhodes is one thing - but actually experiencing the campus and recognizing yourself as part of it is quite another. Within your four years, you'll come to be acquainted with the city block between North Parkway and Jackson as not just an institution, but a home to which you belong. Through this Unofficial Guide, gaze at photos of yourself being ridiculous, of professors who became companions rather than mere instructors, of those awkwardly kissed at sorority formals or those who will stand next to you on your wedding day, or maybe that you'll just call on a rainy Sunday afternoon to catch up with in years to come. All of these people and events are landmarks in the journey of who you once were and who you're still becoming. Celebrate and cherish these memorable moments and traditions of which you were a part - those that make Rhodes your alma mater.

COLOPHON

Walsworth Publishing Company, located in Brookfield, Missouri, published the 2006 Lynx. The press run was 1200 copies. The book was printed on 80 pound legend gloss paper with a Smyth-sewn soft cover. The cost to students was included in the student activity fee paid with tuition, from which the Allocations Board, under Rhodes Student Government, determined the funding for the publication. The book was produced in the publications office, room 306, in Briggs Student Center, phone number 901-843-3971, using Walsworth's Online Design on two Dell OptiPlex GX240 computers as well as various staff members' personal computers. Stroud Photography photographed and processed all student portraits; other pictures were photographed by staff members or submitted by students or faculty. The Lynx is under the guidance of the Publications Board headed by Ellen Whitten '06.

The cover was designed by Jamie Chambers of Walsworth Publishing Company, with the guidance of Madoline Markham and Logan Jones. Cover copy was written by Sara Ash, and cover photographs were taken by Hai-Ching Chang and Lydia Jackson. The front features the new Paul Barret, Jr. Library as well as Halliburton Tower, Kennedy Hall, and the new labyrinth in Oak Alley; the back features students in front of the lynx statue, on a bench in the quad, and in the Middle Ground in the Barret Library.

From the Editor:

Logan Jones and I chose the theme "A Guide to Rhodes" as an embodiment of this year. The campus was forever changed by the addition of the Barret Library, and we thought this theme would display not only the new but also the old with its many traditions. Once again, we have run the class pictures through the book in an effort to make the most of our pages, allowing more room for candid pictures and text that will hopefully provide a record for you, our fellow students, as you look back at your life in 2006 at Rhodes College.

There are numerous people that I would like to thank without whose help shaped this book: Johnny Cole, our Walsworth sales representative for his helping us with getting the most out of our budget; Karen Johnson, also from Walsworth for her assistance in setting us up with Online Design; Barb Tsachannen, our customer service representative for processing our pages and keeping in contact with the status of things; all the computer support staff who alleviated many headaches with Online Design; our advisor Carol Casey for guidance in business aspects and overall support for building our staff and publication; Ellen Whitten and the Publications Board and the supporting role they serve; Justin Entzinger and the Communications Department for the help with photographs; all the other students, faculty, and staff who contributed photos, quotes, and information; and last but not least the staff and the editors for all their work in making all the details come together, even when it meant sacrificing sleep and other things late at night.

Established in 1848, Rhodes College has flourished as one of the South's leading liberal arts colleges. Now 157 years later, Rhodes students experienced a year of change while creating memories of a lifetime. 2005 began with Rhodes opening its gates to aide the victims of Hurricane Katrina. While walking around campus, you could witness the importance of community service within the student body as Rhodes was decorated with flyers announcing the latest relief event for the multiple natural disasters occurring as the year progressed. You could also enjoy the latest coffee drink or find a quiet place to study in the new Paul Barret Jr. Library, the social and academic center for Rhodes students this year. If you are more of an outdoors person, the landscape of Rhodes College is famous for its old trees and on a nice day, students could be seen relaxing on the lawns with friends while studying. Regardless of what kind of person you are, during 2005 Rhodes offered you the opportunity to make new friends and solidify old friendships, expand your intellect, and make a change on a local and national level.
