PRE-CENTENNIAL CAMPAIGN FOR COLLEGE BUILDING AND ENDOWMENT IS LAUNCHED

FIRST MILLION DOLLARS TO COME FROM OUTSIDE OF MEMPHIS

WALKER WELLFORD, JR., '29

Walker Wellford, Jr., a graduate of the class of 1929, at Southwestern, has been appointed chairman of the alumni committee for the Pre-Centennial Building and Endowment Fund campaign. His selection is announced by T. Walker Lewis, general chairman.

Mr. Wellford, secretary of Chickasaw Wood Products Co., and president of Southwestern Alumni Association for two terms, said in accepting the appointment: "This is a great opportunity for Southwestern to establish itself more firmly than ever. I realize that it is a big undertaking, but I am willing to accept this appointment to help accomplish the purpose of the appeal. I am confident that every alumnus throughout the Mid-South and the nation will want to do all he can to help make this fund a reality at the earliest possible date.

The general plan of organization to be carried out preparatory to Building and Endowment Fund campaign will be outlined at meetings of the 16 Presbyteries and four Synods of the Presbyterian Church in Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee, T. W. Lewis, general chairman, has announced.

Chairmen among laymen and ministers are being appointed in each of the four synods and they in turn will name their chairmen and committee members in each of the 16 Presbyteries and in the local churches throughout the area.

The General Education Board, New York, has generously offered $500,000 to Southwestern at Memphis upon condition that $2,000,000 additional be secured by December, 1946—$2,000,000 for endowment and $500,000 for buildings.

This is a long-sought, golden opportunity for Christian Education in the Mid-South. It is a thrilling challenge not only to the faith and loyalty of the people of the churches of the four controlling Synods of Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Tennessee, but to the people throughout the entire General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, to the Alumni of Southwestern, and to all citizens who are interested in the maintenance and development of higher, liberal arts education, under the support and direction of the Church.

It is planned first to secure from people outside of Memphis—alumni, church members, and friends of Southwestern, one-half of the needed $2,000,000, and then to ask Memphis citizens to contribute the other half.

Southwestern's long record of usefulness, its emphasis on quality in education, its high standing, its present strategic location, its future of unbounded possibilities—all unite in making gifts to Southwestern now a unique investment for the long future of the Christian Church and society.

Southwestern's "products"—its graduates, are the best reasons why gifts to this Fund are the soundest investment which can be made for the present and the future.

In the ministry, teaching, law and medical professions, hundreds of Southwestern alumni are serving with marked distinction. In the fields of business, industry, science, manufacturing, and commerce other hundreds are investing their lives with unselfish devotion to the development of better living for America and the world. In social service, journalism and public service many others are making their contributions to the development of finer social, economic, civic and religious life for the nation and the world.

More than 4,000 alumni and former students are filling important places in their respective communities through their activities with churches, civic, social and business groups.

Someone has said that the offices of a friend are: "To relieve the overburdened heart, to clear up and correct a confused understanding, and to open up for us a career worthy of our best powers." That is what Southwestern seeks to be and to do for every student who crosses its threshold.

SCHOLARSHIP

In America we have often substituted education for scholarship, just as there is a tendency to consider religious education as equivalent to religion.

The most famous American definition of education is "learning to think for oneself and to live with and for others." This Instrumentalist view which considers learning as in no sense an end has produced the serio-comic attitude which calmly grades the average American mind as eighth-grade and then carefully polls that same mind on all subjects from color-preferences to the fate of Europe. Academically it has produced a multiplicity of ad-hoc courses designed to adjust the eighth-grade mind to the vicissitudes of Main Street. Such education is being tested today in a world revolution for which, obviously, ad hoc courses are impossible.

There is in physics a puzzling and apparently instructive practice of light-interference—one series of light waves breaks across another. Light is used to study other light. There may be an analogy—truth-interference. One series of truths may break across another. If so, the present war may reveal facts that bring out certain significances in the nature of man and God which will vitalize that ideal which marches under the banner of the Liberal Arts.

The fallacy of idealism is to assume that an ideal, just because it is an ideal, is valid. The greatest tragedy is to die for a false ideal. Academic ideals are not exempt from this threat. Perhaps this fact lies behind the doctrine of Total Depravity. Even our thinking needs redeeming.

In the past the ideal of the Liberal Arts has been partially conceived and thereby caused much labor and sorrow.

First we have the ideal of the Scholar-Gypsy—to use Matthew Arnold's term. The medieval goliard reappears on the American campus as the student who works his way through college. That ideal produced such men as Wyclif and Luther. And in our own times a very powerful contingent of professional men and social and religious leaders. (See John Buchan's autobiography.) However, in many a case, due to failure to convert that ideal to the actualities of life, it has made out of the life of a scholar a farcical tragedy. To reduce the ideal of the scholar to "education for leisure" is almost sure to ensure its defeat by utilitarianism. And it is in that needless paradox or artificial contrast between culture and utility that many a soul has been wrecked. Obviously when the Master said, "Man cannot live by bread alone" He did not mean man needs no bread. In fact, as we know, He fed them.

The second phase of the ideal has also caused trouble. In this—a seventeenth century concept—the aim was to produce a walking encyclopedia. America has added many an anemic bookworm to the list of futile scholars. The romantic fallacy of art for art's sake we have changed into scholarship for scholarship's sake. Recognizing learning as an end we have sinned when we made it the end. This has led to an intense and conscious narrowing of the mind and its interests.

It is here that the war may produce to a really important instance of "truth-interference." We will probably see a vast expansion of linguistic, literary, humanistic studies due to scattering the alumni and students of our colleges over the globe. I haven't the slightest doubt that many of our own men and women have been in places which they had never heard of when they entered Southwestern.

But it will not result merely in another Royal Asiatic Society as during the expansion of the British empire: it will mean the setting up of techniques and aims for the new role of the United States in a new world. The colleges that dodge that task will have committed the sin of the Great Refusal.

The most degenerate type of the ideal is produced when the teacher imagines that character is produced by discipline—the academic version of the legalism which St. Paul exposed in Galatians, showing how the substituting of means for ends is the surest method of failing to attain one's ends. This modern academic version may be called a Faith in Boredom.

Remembering that all teachers live in glass houses, still I venture to suggest that the mania for collegiate diversions from 1918-1941 is certain proof that all was not well in the classrooms. Whatever the methods of education in the future may be, the general principle of finding true happiness in work still holds as it did in the days of an Aristotle or in the experience of a Paul or in the theory of a Calvin. Perhaps this war will re-reveal this truth to a generation whose predecessors seemed always looking for the way out which entailed no work.

Boredom is undoubtedly due to conceiving work as the end—work for work's sake. That is the inversion of thought in the de-consecrated soul. The new American, we hope and believe, is discovering the real meaning of the objectified self. If he is, we may be stepping up towards the Kingdom of God on Earth rather than exploring Utopia or settling down in Laputa.

The scholar of the future should be a step nearer the ideal scholar. And the ideal scholar—to reconstruct him from the fragments I have found—is a mystic still, to whom education is a great adventure, who finds not just an interest in some phase of reality, but genuine meaning in some part of the whole; whose mind is led by his work, in college and out of college, into a fuller knowledge of the wealth of the grace of God—to whom education is not an escape from the city of, but as preparation for the everlasting war for Man's Soul.

THE RELATION OF TRADITION TO CREATIVE EXPERIENCE

The Function of Tradition

Ideas, like coins, may be lost—go out of currency. It is the business of a tradition to prevent such loss. The most genuine attacks on tradition are made not because it preserves ideas but because it may harden about a few ideas and resist others. A tradition that goes to sleep cannot help living men. We have become accustomed to condemn lifeless, rigid traditionalism, and we shall shrivel and stagnate if we cease this practice. But the scorn of this decadent sort has led to a popular denunciation of all tradition. Of course, this has played into the hands of an easy superficiality which dislikes the disciplines tradition may impose.

Vital Tradition

Vital tradition embodies and keeps alive ideas. It provides a context for behavior which makes action significant. The people of Edinburgh, Scotland, not only see daily the imposing, rugged Edinburgh Castle, but in some sense their actions are an extension of the history it represents. This is not mere living in the past, for there is no desire among the Scots to restore a separate political state; but the independence of spirit symbolized there is alive, pervading the atmosphere like the fog. For some Scots the tradition is total, embracing all human interests. These are conscious of standing in a succession of men devoted not alone to civil liberties but also to ideals of religious freedom, ideals to which their covenanting forbears at old Greyfriars pledged their blood. This spirit is not limited to a commemoration of an event lying three hundred and eight years in the past; it is a present reality like the vital energy in the blood stream. And it is one important reason why the Nazi in 1940 did not succeed in storming British shores.

Degrees in Tradition

A tradition may be good or poor depending on the breadth of truth it embodies. Every tradition carries some truth, though it may be very limited. It may be concerned with physical phenomena only; with means of human livelihood, or it may embrace wider areas of activity. At its lower levels it is hardly worthy of the name, although men are never found without some socially operative idea. The barrenness of a very restricted notion may be seen from a description of the social experience of certain so-called primitive people who have no written language and no literature:

"Natural desires are about as far as the savage goes in his outreach. He is of necessity so occupied in the material and physical that no other needs are felt. Enough for himself and his family to eat, care of his animals, protection against his enemies, the satisfaction of his primary impulses—these are about all he thinks about. His needs are simple and crude and can never become more complex and refined so long as he continues to live this life. He is not awake to himself and the latent possibilities of his deeper nature. Spiritual attainment is denied him because he has never felt any aspiration after the things of the spirit. This condition is not accidental, it is inevitable so long as people remain on this level. We are dealing, then, with man not at his best, but man undeveloped and curtailed and cramped and dwarfed. He is a man, to be sure, but a man without the touch which lifts him out of the purely natural into the sphere of the spirit."¹

The Dominant American Tradition

It is agreed by many American and foreign observers that the dominant American tradition is tied closely to technological expertness. The technical ingenuity and capacity for mass production of Americans is unequalled in the world. But this very talent carries with it the danger that we may too readily restrict ourselves to a tradition of techniques for getting things done on the material level. John Erskine refers to Jose Rodo, a South American observer of ours, who in Ariel, published in 1900, considered that "the modern world has so much necessary work to do that it may, through spiritual weariness, be content to do its tasks well without reflecting upon them, without asking what they mean, without discriminating between the profound and the shallow. The modern world, he warns, is in danger of becoming Calban by devoting itself exclusively to utilitarian occupations. The United States, being further advanced in mechanical skills and most preoccupied with utilitarian values, is in the greatest danger."²

Our Traditions Within Our Tradition

Along with the ability of Americans to do things is the need for a comprehensive understanding of the purposes of the things men do. This is why it is so important that there are, within our nation, institutions and groups that cultivate a rich tradition of insight into all truth, including the highest knowledge, the vision of God. The importance of these institutions and movements rests on the expectation that they will create a ferment which will stir and enrich the whole. At a time when the nations of the world are at war, a nation with highly developed technologies may play a major role. But if it is to avoid playing a tragic, blind-though-powerful part in a post-war world, a more complete tradition is needed. How shall Americans aid in a re-educational program for peoples too long misled unless there is among us a cultivation of the truths that liberate men? Engineering techniques and industrial arts enslave those who do not understand and control them. Education in a total sense will be needed to free men. This involves an understanding of the intellectual arts, and above all of our Christian heritage and its relation to the complex life of our times, if we are to escape from confusion and secularism and achieve the first freedom on which all others hinge. Among the institutions helping toward the enrichment of our American tradition, none is more effective than the best of our Christian colleges. The Christian college that fulfills its purposes challenges the limitations of our national tradition and seeks to provide an intelligent and unifying view that alone can deliver men from the tyrannies of wrong thinking and wrong living.

FRATERNITIES

Everyone seems to think that every phase of college life will be different after the war, but just how different no one seems to know. Certainly those interested in our colleges are deeply concerned with what these changes will be, and are anxious to be ready for them when they come lest they find the pre-war college an antiquated institution no longer capable of service in a changed world.

It is not surprising, therefore, that fraternities and sororities are anxious to know just what effect the impending changes will have on them, for they realize that their very existence in the post-war colleges depends on their ability to adjust themselves, and to be ready for a new life under changed conditions.

As Dean of Men, I have been asked many questions by anxious alumni and serious-minded students, which it has been impossible for me to answer satisfactorily. Will the fraternities survive the war? Will Southwestern continue to look favorably on fraternities after the war? Will fraternities be able to serve any useful purpose in the changed colleges?

The answer to all of these questions, it seems to me, will depend on the fraternities themselves. Now is the time, therefore, and not after the changes have already come, for the fraternities to be considering seriously how they can get rid of the "bad" and how they can increase the "good" in their organizations, that they may be ready to render invaluable service to the post-war colleges.

Surely the fact as to whether or not the fraternities will survive the war will depend on whether or not they can continue to perform a useful service in college life. And whether or not Southwestern will encourage the existence of fraternities will depend on the readiness of the fraternities to co-operate with the college in carrying out its educational ideals.

As we all know, in the past the fraternity, instead of thinking of itself as an extra-curricula organization, has all too often considered itself an extra-college organization. It has sometimes held to a "laissez-faire" policy, meaning that the college should not "interfere" with the fraternity but that the fraternity should "interfere" with the college whenever necessary to obtain benefits which the college might bestow. If, on the other hand, it does think of itself as an extra-curricula activity, it has sometimes interpreted extra-curricula to mean anti-curricula, and has discouraged, or at least considered it none of its business to encourage, study among its members.

The tendency at Southwestern, at any rate, within the past years has been steadily in the opposite direction. The fraternities have been, on the whole, more and more co-operative, and I see no reason why they should not be able to serve a most useful purpose in the post-war college. The point I am trying to bring out is this: that just as the colleges themselves will be greatly changed in order to survive in the post-war world, so will the fraternities be greatly changed to survive in the post-war colleges.

The colleges are now busily studying just where they have failed in their academic responsibilities in the past, how they may get rid of the useless and the bad, and how they may be ready to perform an indispensable service in post-war America. The fraternities, it seems to me, should do likewise if they expect to survive. There will be no place for intellectual snobbery and self-complacency in the colleges of the future. There will be no place for social snobbery and self-complacency in the fraternity of the future. As an agency of the college, the ideals and standards of the college must become the ideals and standards of the fraternity. The fraternity must think much less of self and its own members and much more of the college and the entire student body. Already the idea that mere membership in a fraternity gives a student any sort of social superiority or privilege has largely disappeared from our better fraternities, but the further idea that no man can be a good fraternity member unless he is first of all a good student needs much greater emphasis than it has had in the past.

It is true that the social life of the college has, to a great extent, been left to the fraternities and sororities, and it is here perhaps that they have rendered their greatest service to the college, yet that service becomes a disservice when the fraternity over-emphasizes the social life and places the cart before the horse in college life. The fraternities of the future, it would seem, will have to accept the ideals of the college and will have to co-operate in providing the desired social life for all the students of the college and not merely for their own members if they hope to be of service to their college.

It would seem to me that now at least if never before the students, alumni, college administrators and all others interested in the preservation of the fraternities should realize that co-operation is essential; that cut-throat competition among the fraternities on the same campus is suicidal; and that the failure of the fraternities to co-operate with the college administrators in carrying out the ideals of the college, and the failure of the college to discuss frankly with the fraternities what these ideals are and how the fraternities may be of aid to the college will be a serious mistake.

The play days of the fraternities are over. They can, I think, make themselves invaluable to the colleges of post-war days, but whether they will or not depends chiefly, it seems to me, on the seriousness with which the present undergraduates attempt to get their fraternities ready for this change. Surely, without a change, there will be little or no place for fraternities in the college of the post-war world.

RESIDENT OF CHINA ADDRESSES FORUM ON CHINESE-AMERICAN RELATIONSHIPS

FORUM V

The fifth Forum in the College series on United States foreign policy was held on February 17 in Hardie Auditorium, Southwestern Campus. The subject, "American Relations with China," was discussed by Dr. T. S. Hill and Professor D. M. Amacker. The Reverend Roy L. Davis acted as moderator.

Dr. Hill, who is director of the Gailor Memorial Psychiatric Hospital in Memphis, had taught for four years in Peiping Union Medical College and thus has had unusual opportunity for observing Chinese character and psychology. A summary of his address follows:

"The Chinese are an ancient but not a primitive people, who possess a rich cultural heritage of which they are duly conscious. Any intimate knowledge of their personal characteristics, the greatness of their past, or their racial origin should emphatically dispel any idea that they, as orientals of the Far East, are like their aggressive neighbors, the Japanese.

"They are not to be conceived of as a sly, cunning, scheming, feuding, mysterious people impossible to understand by our standards. In fact, they are found to be thoroughly human and understandable once their manner of speech and the influence of their cultural background is comprehended. There exist among them good and bad characters dispersed throughout their populace in proportions similar to those found in our own.

"Their intelligence is the equal of the Westerner and in no wise inferior. They, in fact, exhibit a superiority in their student bodies, taken as a whole, in mathematical ability and rote memory.

"Morally and ethically they are no better but certainly no worse than we are when judged by an approach which is unbiased. They are possessed of a saving sense of humor, are fond of fun, manifest a patience which is often beyond the occidental's power easily to comprehend and have as a group a better developed mastery over their emotions than is in general true of the Westerner. They have the capacity to blend appropriately their characteristic realism with idealism. Although individualists, they do not lack the capacity to submerge personal interests to the welfare of the group. Their evident sincerity stands in contrast to the slyness of the Japanese.

"To understand the Chinese and their national aspirations it is well that we do so with the heart as well as with the mind."

Professor Amacker said in part:

"The American people by an odd instinct have sought to avoid involvement in European politics, but have never hesitated to muscle into Asia. The irrational taboo on Europe has simply not applied to the Pacific, though the Asian nations are two or three times as far away. Like the pioneers, we face toward the setting sun. We proclaimed the Open Door in China; we ended the Russo-Japanese War lest the balance of power in Asia be upset; we scotched Japan's bid for sovereignty in China through her Twenty-One Demands; we limited the Japanese navy in the Washington Disarmament Conference of 1922, pressured Japan into restoring Shantung to China, isolated Japan from her British ally and marshalled the Nine Powers to promise the integrity of China, thereby blocking Japan's ambition there; we refused to admit Japan's claims to privileges based on a pretended "special position" in Asia; and after 1931 by the Stimson Doctrine we declined to recognize her title to Manchuria.

"Yet while thus intervening diplomatically with resolution and a certain effectiveness, we deliberately, through tragic intellectual foginess, refused to assemble the military and naval power to back up these interventions. We began to retire from the Philippines, agreed not to fortify properly Dutch Harbor, Guam, Manila; and disarmed our own and our friends' navies. We let the Japanese fortify the island screens they had promised to leave unfortified. As a people we could vote dry to salve conscience and drink wet to please palate; but we could not in the past and cannot in the future, without disaster, talk war and act peace. If we mean to maintain our national power position in the Pacific as in the Atlantic—and we should in the measure of the possible—then, for an indefinite time, we must be quite ready to use both firm words and a very big stick. Doesn't this mean not only immense armed might and requisite bases but alliances, or at least military understandings, with all our friends in Europe and in Asia who are in the same boat?"

COLLEGE OF MUSIC SHOWS GOOD GROWTH IN WARTIME

Dr. Burnet C. Tuthill Elected to National Office for Twentieth Year of Service

Ever since SOUTHWESTERN and the Memphis College of Music were amalgamated on August 1, 1943, the music program has assumed a new importance in the life of the Campus. This is the continuation and development of a combined program which had already been in existence for five years through the educational affiliation of the two schools. The College of Music was moved last summer from its home of ten years at 1216 Union Avenue to the magnificent Galloway Mansion at 1822 Overton Park Avenue, within comfortable walking distance of the main campus. The enrollment of candidates for degrees in music at the beginning of the current academic year was about 40% greater than during the preceding season.

The Southwestern Singers are at the moment the most active musical organization. The Army having drafted so many of our men students, it was found advisable after the Christmas Holidays to make the Singers a women's organization in order that our normal high standard of performance be maintained. The Singers now consist of about forty young women with unusually fine voices. In addition to the usual local appearances in the SOUTHWESTERN Vesper Services, at the luncheon clubs and other gatherings, the Singers will make a three-day trip into north Mississippi on April 16th, 17th and 18th, during which time they will appear at Camp McCain at Grenada and at the Air Field at Greenville. The Singers will also assist at church services in Clarksdale and Greenville and will appear in several high schools en route.

On their return the Singers will take part in the second of two concerts forming a festival of American music at the Memphis College of Music. The balance of the two programs will be made up of American Chamber Music performed by members of the College of Music faculty. All alumni are cordially invited to attend these programs. The first will be at the College of Music on Saturday evening, April 22nd, at 8:30; the second on Sunday afternoon, the 23rd, at 4:00 o'clock at Hardie Auditorium.

The College of Music is also presenting the San Carlo Opera Company in three performances at the Ellis Auditorium on April 12th and 13th. All alumni are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to hear "Carmen" on the evening of the 12th; "La Traviata" on the afternoon of the 13th, and "Aida" the same evening. Any profits will be used to secure additional equipment for the College of Music.

While the red-coated Southwestern Band has been absent from the campus and Main Street since January of 1943, because of the lack of men students on the campus, activity of this nature is continuing through a band made up of members of the 13th College Training Detachment of the United States Army Air Force. From the 250 Cadets, 25 to 30 men are found who have had band experience in high school and through their playing provide martial music for the Retreat Formations held three or four afternoons a week on the Parade Ground in front of Palmer Hall.

The Memphis Symphony Orchestra, in spite of the difficulties of changing personnel, continues with its usual program of four Symphony Concerts each season, presented at the Ellis Auditorium. Many faculty members and students are included in the roster of members of the orchestra, and distinguished soloists are engaged to lend glamour to each program. The orchestra will give the regular final concert of the season on May 2nd, and it is planned to add a popular concert in the Shell at Overton Park during the week of June 18th.

All these activities proceed under the direction of Dr. Burnet C. Tuthill, Professor of Music at SOUTHWESTERN and Director of the Memphis College of Music. Dr. Tuthill has just been re-elected Secretary of the National Association of Schools of Music for his twentieth year of service in that capacity.

ENDOWMENT

Southwestern is a "going" concern. 1948 will mark its one hundredth anniversary. It has lived through three major wars. It will survive the present war. Nearly 1,000 of its alumni are serving in the armed forces of the Nation and over half of these have commissioned rank.

Southwestern, now representing a capital investment of more than $2,000,000, has no debt. It is recognized in the educational world as one of the nation's outstanding colleges.

Thoughtful men and women are in accord that the salvation of a war-torn world rests and depends upon the Christian Church. Wherever there is a nation that has discarded religion there is found an unhappy, war-like people who worship at the feet of the god of Hate. We think of the peace-loving nations as those whose people are devoted to the worship and service of God and to the Brotherhood of Man.

How long our country will remain in the forefront of the world's peace-loving nations depends upon the kind of leadership made available to our people. In the past this leadership has been conspicuously characterized by a deep-rooted, spiritual conviction that the Christian ideals of brotherhood and freedom shall not be surrendered or compromised. These are the ideals to which Southwestern is dedicated and devotes herself.

The vigorous continuance of the Church and her educational institutions, which have always contributed a large part of the leadership needed by our country to meet every challenge, is essential. Colleges like Southwestern must be maintained at full strength and vigor because, in their strength, lies—in great measure—the future not only of American Democracy but also the future of the Christian Church.

T. W. Lewis, President, Lewis Supply Company of Memphis, prominent Churchman and Chairman of the Board of Directors of Southwestern, has—at the urgent request of the Executive Committee—accepted the General Chairmanship of the Campaign Committee of the PRE-CENTENNIAL BUILDING AND ENDOWMENT FUND to raise this $2,000,000 needed to claim the generous gift of the General Education Board.

Mr. Lewis is now at work securing acceptances of leaders to project this appeal among members of the Presbyterian church in the four supporting synods and throughout the General Assembly, alumni, citizens of Memphis and friends everywhere throughout the country. The campaign will be carried forward just as rapidly as possible to assure the raising of these funds so that Southwestern's finances will be established on a sound basis for the years ahead and to provide the money for some of the more pressing building needs such as library, dormitories, student union, gymnasium, and others.

Hundreds of volunteers are needed to present this cause to all those to whose attention it should be brought. Thousands of contributors will be required to make this Fund a reality. Subscriptions can be paid over a period between now and December, 1946, either in cash, war bonds or approved securities. It is obvious, however, that the sooner the funds are in hand the sooner the conditional gift can be claimed, and the earlier the money will be available for endowment fund income and to permit construction on new buildings when war-time restrictions are removed.

This is probably the greatest opportunity that will ever confront the present generation to put Southwestern on the sound financial basis which it so richly deserves.

IT CAN BE DONE! IT MUST BE DONE!! IT WILL BE DONE!!!

NECROLOGY

The Reverend William McFaddin Alexander, 82, for nine years pastor of Alabama Street Presbyterian Church, Memphis, before the merger with First Presbyterian church, died recently in Touro Infirmary, New Orleans.

In 1936 he was specially honored by Southwestern for completing his thirty-fifth year of continuous service as a member of the board of directors.

Native of West Virginia, Dr. Alexander was graduated from Union Theological Seminary in 1887, and received the doctor of divinity degree in 1898 from Washington and Lee University, which he had also attended in the early 1880's.

Following his ordination in the Presbyterian ministry in 1887, he served as pastor of the Bainbridge, Georgia, Presbyterian church before coming to the Alabama Street Presbyterian church, where he made many friends in Memphis. He was called to the Prytania Street Presbyterian church, New Orleans, in 1899.

Dr. Alexander was elected moderator of the national general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States for 1915. In 1892 he served as commissioner to the Pan Presbyterian council in Toronto, and was a member of the same council at the Washington meeting in 1907. In addition to his connection with Southwestern, he was a trustee of the Austin Theological Seminary.

John Franklin Coutts, '08, a member of the law firm of Bennet, House & Coutts of 44 Wall Street, died in his home, 466 Highland Avenue, Orange, N. J., February 14, 1944. He graduated from Columbia University Law School in 1917. Since that time he was a member of several law firms until Bennet, House & Coutts was formed in 1937. While at Southwestern, he was a member of SAE fraternity.

The Rev. Brooks Irving Dickey, D.D., '99 B.D. of San Antonio, Texas, died February 14, 1944, at Port Lacaca, Texas, where he had been supplying the pulpit for the absent pastor the previous evening. He served many pastorates in Texas. At the time of his death he was superintendent of home missions, Western Texas Presbytery.

Edward S. (Ned) Dodds, who attended Southwestern from 1927 to 1931, died October 7, 1943, in Washington, D. C., of a heart attack following the flu. At that time he was on the Washington, D. C., headquarters staff of Commodities Planning, O.P.A.

Miss Myrtle Claudia James who received her B.A. degree from Southwestern in 1933 died February 7, 1944 at Sweetman, Miss. She was a missionary to Mexico for fourteen years.

Henry B. McGee, who attended Southwestern 1915-16, died January 5, 1944. At the time of his death he was a planter in Tchula, Mississippi.

The Rev. Phillip Augustus Lotterhos, who graduated from Southwestern Presbyterian University in 1901, died December 7, 1943, at his home in Crystal Springs, Miss. He was graduated from Kentucky Theological Seminary in 1910 and received the B.D. degree from the San Francisco Theological Seminary in 1921. He also received the M.A. degree from the University of Pennsylvania. He served for several years as colporteur for the American Bible Society among immigrants at Morristown, N. J. He served as missionary among the Indians in Arizona and as a mission worker in Texas, as well as pastor of churches in Pennsylvania and Maryland. At the time of his death he was living in Crystal Springs, Miss.

Franklin P. Ramsey, Jr., who attended Southwestern from 1907 until 1908, died December 24, 1943. At the time of his death he was a teacher of English at the new Utrecht High School, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The Rev. Robert Eugene Telford, retired, of Sebring, Fla., died February 12, 1944. He graduated from Southwestern Presbyterian University in 1891 with a Bachelor of Divinity. He served as pastor of churches in Georgia, South Carolina, Oklahoma and Florida. Mr. Telford retired in 1936. He was born in Belton, S. C., June 7, 1863.

The Rev. David N. Yarbrow, who graduated from Southwestern Presbyterian University in 1891, died the first week in January, 1944, at his home in Chatham, Va. Mr. Yarbrow was born in Paducah, Ky. After graduation from Southwestern, he attended Princeton Theological Seminary and was ordained April 8, 1892. Before his retirement in 1941 he served in churches in Texas, Alabama, Tennessee, Georgia and Virginia. At the time of his retirement he was preaching in the Roanoke Presbytery.

Miss Helen Gordon, assistant Dean of Women, returned to the campus Monday after a month's travel in the interest of Southwestern. During her trip through West Tennessee, Southwest Arkansas, the Mississippi Delta and Northern Louisiana, she talked with high school faculties, senior students, parents, pastors, and alumni of Southwestern.

After her extensive tour to forty high schools, Miss Gordon said, "I feel that we can look forward to a fine enrollment next fall, particularly among women students. However, there are some boys of sixteen who may be able to get in a year of college who appeared interested in our school."

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITYDr. Henry H. Sweets

There came to the hearts of all the members of our Presbyterian Family a thrill of joy and of gratitude to God when they learned of the unusual offer made to Southwestern by the General Education Board of a gift of $500,000 on condition that $2,000,000 additional be raised by December 31st, 1946, for endowment and buildings.

Southwestern has sent out a great company of cultured citizens whose minds and hearts have been developed for unselfish service to the home, the church, the state and the world. The college has reached a high point of effectiveness; has a devoted administrative staff of trained, consecrated, Christian teachers; and equipment and buildings that are the pride of the Church.

The members of the Presbyterian Church in the United States will surely meet this challenge and secure this added equipment and endowment for this worthy institution at once enabling the college to render ever larger service to our own and future generations.

WORTHY OF OUR BESTPaul Tudor Jones

Southwestern has an honored past. From her "stately cloister'd halls" where "characters grow genuine" there has come through the years a steady stream of capable men and women to take their places of leadership in Church and State. Southwestern has equipped them with the sound learning and the Christian philosophy of life which has fitted them for the highest forms of service to God and man.

Now the opportunity is before us to assure, to underwrite, Southwestern's future; to make it a certainty that this splendid institution shall continue its same high service in the years that lie ahead. The offer of the General Education Board to make a grant of $500,000 to Southwestern on the condition that $2,000,000 be raised now—must be claimed. We cannot afford to let slip from us this opportunity to insure Southwestern's future.

A SIGNIFICANT HOURDunbar H. Ogden, D.D.

In the life of an individual and in that of an organization there are certain hours more deeply significant than ordinary days or even years. In the history of Southwestern such an hour has now struck.

Despite her splendid campus, and buildings, her freedom from debt and the fine loyalty of many friends, this college is greatly handicapped by lack of adequate endowment.

The present offer of $500,000.00 upon condition of raising $2,000,000.00 is a challenge to the city of Memphis and to the four controlling Synods that must be met. The task that confronts us is not easy but is entirely possible, provided there be a widespread spirit of loyalty and devotion.

Our Church and this entire section of our country need Southwestern. It is the imperative duty of the Presbyteries in Louisiana and in the other associated Synods to establish this institution on a firm financial basis.

New Orleans.

SOUTHWESTERN AND HIGHER EDUCATION

Southwestern has a splendid reputation among southern institutions. It has developed a somewhat unique program which has attracted the attention of educators throughout the region. All those concerned with the progress of higher education in the South will be interested in the success of this campaign. There are too few strong liberal arts colleges in the southern area. If Southwestern can secure the endowment which it now seeks it will take its place among the strongest of the liberal arts colleges in this region.

The Presbyterian Church has great pride in this institution. It is proud of the record of achievement which it has made, and of the service which it is rendering not only to the Church, but to the South and to the Nation. Through the gift of the General Education Board a rare opportunity is presented to stabilize and to make secure the foundations of this excellent college. No finer investment can be made than in such an institution.

Who then should support the campaign to secure $2,000,000.00?

(1) All those who believe in the importance of maintaining privately supported colleges and universities as well as tax supported institutions.

(2) All those who believe in, are interested in, and are concerned about the progress of southern education.

(3) All Presbyterians must have a special interest in the campaign, since it is for the support of one of its own institutions.

O. C. Carmichael,

Chancellor of Vanderbilt University

March 27, 1944.

"HORSE SENSE"Ansley C. Moore

"Horse sense," someone has said pungently "is that type of stable thinking which keeps a horse from betting on the human race." If the Church will do a little stable thinking along the line of making the human race worth betting on, it will become increasingly clear that we must meet the conditions of the General Education Board and thus secure the $500,000 which they are offering Southwestern. We have 117 acres at Memphis with fine buildings erected and equipped. Our investment in the Southwestern campus must be protected but far more than that, the opportunity for Christian education in the great valley of the Mississippi must be met.

It will be a terrible day indeed for education generally when the state-supported institutions are unchecked by Christian education. That day is fast approaching as the dwindling incomes of our Church-supported institutions witness, and that great and terrible day can only be averted by a magnificent response on the part of the Church to such opportunities as this one affords.

"I'd put bigger things up to the Church," said an aged minister to Dr. Sweets some time ago. "The aristocrat," said Winston Churchill, "is the man who accepts the responsibility which the common man disavows." Our beloved Church, which is aristocratic in the best sense of the word, will accept this great task as a glorious opportunity, I am convinced, and under God, the blow will be struck which will win the day.

Wise and loyal indeed will be the alumni of Southwestern who seize this opportunity to put Southwestern on her feet once and for all. When this campaign for Two and One-half Million Dollars has been successfully concluded every one who has had a sacrificial share in it will have an unfailing source of joy through the coming years. When the day of victory comes it will be because every one of us does his best. Here is a job in which no one of us must assume the attitude, "Let George do it." I do not believe any loyal alumnus of this institution can be happy if such an attitude as that prevails.

Success in this campaign means much to the future leadership of Presbyterianism in this vast Mississippi Valley area. The future years ought to see tremendous forward strides in the development of the Presbyterian Church and if that takes place we must prepare an adequate leadership. Southwestern is the hope of securing that leadership in this area. Let the Presbyterians then arise in faith, united prayer and sacrificial giving until this opportunity is improved to the fullest.

THE FUTURE

America has a great basic belief in individual worth. Our self-directing democracy was founded in that belief. Our need for strong and wise individuals to maintain that democracy is certainly as great now as at any time in the history of our Nation. Totalitarian governments, cutting and stamping the young to the pattern of their dictators or leaders, are deliberately suppressing the individual to make their own personal power more secure.

As never before, America needs today to preserve the pioneer spirit that made her what she is. She needs as many responsible, independent citizens as she can train. SHE WILL NEED THEM EVEN MORE SO IN THE POST-WAR YEARS.

And America needs colleges which will cultivate to the utmost in our young people the ability to solve problems, face facts and work fearlessly and independently in a world which is being fiercely challenged with the right of men to be free in spirit, mind and body. Actually the good state and the good life go hand in hand. Genuinely cultured and understanding human beings live well together, tolerantly and kindly.

In America state educational systems and institutions are generally free from manipulation or purposes of propaganda. Education free from political control is safe-guarded by the independent colleges and universities. So long as Southwestern and similar institutions hold to that ideal American higher education—state supported as well as independent—will never seriously or permanently violate such ideals.

Higher education as conducted by truly independent, Christian colleges is the best safeguard against political domination and interference in state supported educational institutions as well as in the private and independent colleges. THESE INDEPENDENT CHRISTIAN COLLEGES ARE THE REAL GUARDIANS OF A FREE EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM. SO LONG AS THEY FUNCTION ALONG THE LINES OF THE GREAT AMERICAN TRADITION THE STATE SUPPORTED SYSTEM CAN NEVER BECOME ENTIRELY SUBJECTED TO THE WHIM OR CAPRICE OF ANY PASSING POLITICAL GROUP OR TREND.

THE NEED IS GREATER THAN EVER

America's future is in the hands of her young men and women. Today they are more concerned about our nation's destiny and are engaged in winning the war no matter what the cost or sacrifice, either as members of the armed forces or in essential war jobs.

The time will come, however, when these millions of young people will return to civilian life, many of them coming back to college campuses to complete preparation for their life's work. Then the colleges must be ready.

During these difficult war days the need is greater than ever. Hundreds of America's colleges have helped, and many are still helping, to train thousands of young men for the Army and Navy.

Southwestern has welcomed the opportunity of training the Thirteenth College Training Detachment (Aircrew), and is glad to make this direct contribution to the war effort.

Facilities, buildings, laboratories, standards, scholarships, endowments—all must be maintained and strengthened not only for today, but also to be ready to take a large part of the responsibility of helping returning young soldiers, sailors and marines, as well as young women, to make their adjustments in the future from war to peace-time living and plans; to help them prepare themselves for places of useful leadership in the ministry, law, medicine, business, commerce, industry, community, church and home.

Southwestern's friends now have a long-sought, golden opportunity to put its finances on a stronger basis than ever before in its history, so that as it faces its 100th anniversary in 1948 it can meet that event with in-lubitable proof of having weathered every emergency, and face the future centuries with a certainty that as long as there is a United States of America there will always be a Southwestern.

UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY

Dr. J. R. McCain, President of Agnes Scott College; Dr. O. C. Carmichael, Chancellor of Vanderbilt University; Dr. Felix B. Gear, Pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, Memphis; S. Clay Williams, prominent layman and business leader; Dr. Guy E. Snively, Executive Secretary of the Association of American Colleges, and Dr. Henry H. Sweets, Consultant of the Department of Christian Education, Presbyterian Church, U. S., constitute "The Committee on Unifying the Educational Work of the Presbyterian Church in the United States."

When the $500,000 conditional gift from the General Education Board to Southwestern was brought to the attention of this Committee the members unanimously passed the following resolution:

"The Committee is much impressed with the unique opportunity now facing Southwestern at Memphis, Tennessee. This institution has long been recognized as outstanding in our denomination. It has emphasized quality in education and in character building.

"For many years Southwestern has faced a difficult time each year in balancing its budget and has found it necessary to make annual appeals to its constituency for assistance. Through a very generous and unusual offer from the General Education Board of New York, Southwestern now has an opportunity to launch a campaign for endowment and buildings which, if successful, will meet its most pressing immediate needs.

"The Committee feels that this is a campaign which involves more than the local interest of Memphis or the cooperation of the supporting Synods. It is a movement which should enlist the interest and support of our entire denomination. It is hoped that people throughout the entire General Assembly will realize the unique opportunity and will cooperate to make the movement a great success."

Mr. Lewis said it is planned to conduct the campaign in the Synods outside of Memphis before Summer, so the appeal can be made later in the year to the citizens of Memphis for their support. Among those who have accepted membership on the General Campaign Committee to date in the several Synods are the following:
