

“The Conflict in the Middle East: A Report from the Field”

Ethan Bronner

New York Times Bureau Chief in Jerusalem

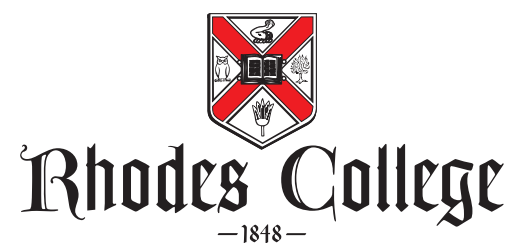

Ethan Bronner will provide an insider's view of the conflicts in the Middle-East. Bronner's articles appear several times each week in the NY Times. He deals with issues related to the broader concerns in Middle Eastern politics and culture, with a specific interest in the Palestinians and the Jewish state of Israel. As a journalist who writes about Middle East politics and social issues, he is a sought after speaker at conferences and college campuses. The lecture at Rhodes will provide our campus with an opportunity to have a beneficial conversation about religion, politics, and social issues in this vitally important region of the world.

Sponsored by: Rhodes Student Lecture Board, Religious Studies Department, Search Program, History Department, International Studies Department, Political Science Department, and the Archaeology Program

Wednesday, March 2, 2011, 7:30 p.m.
McCallum Ballroom, BCLC

The lecture is free and open to the public.
Reception following

COMING Wednesday, March 30, 2011

“The Arab Revolutions of 2011: their causes, trajectories and possible consequences”

ROGER OWEN

Professor of Middle East History, Harvard University

