Heard is Commencement speaker

Southwestern to award six honorary degrees

George Alexander Heard, Chancellor of Vanderbilt University and one of the country's foremost educators, will deliver the commencement address at Southwestern's 126th Commencement services on Saturday, May 31.

The graduation ceremonies will begin at 10 a.m. in the Hubert F. Fisher Memorial Garden. Baccalaureate services will be at 3:30 p.m. May 30 in Second Presbyterian Church.

During the ceremonies diplomas will be awarded to approximately 205 seniors, and six persons will receive honorary degrees recognizing distinguished achievement.

Chancellor Heard, who will speak on "One Educational World," will receive an honorary Doctor of Letters degree. He has been Chancellor and professor of political science at Vanderbilt since 1963. He is a native of Savannah, Ga., and a graduate of the University of North Carolina, and holds M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Columbia University.

Dr. Heard has held appointments under three U.S. presidents. He was appointed by President Nixon as a member of the Commission on White House Fellows from 1969 to 1971 and a member of the Task Force on Priorities in Higher Education in 1969, and in 1970 served as Special Advisor to the President.

President Johnson named Heard to the National Citizens' Committee for Community Relations in 1964, to the U.S. Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations from 1967 to 1969, and to the President's Task Force on Education from 1966 to 1967. In 1961-62 he served as chairman of the President's Commission on Campaign Costs by appointment of President Kennedy.

Chancellor Heard also has been a member of the Ford Foundation board of trustees since 1967 and chairman of the board since 1972. He is a member of the board of directors of Time Inc. and chairman of the Task Force on Southern Rural Development of the Southern Regional Council.

Also receiving honorary degrees during Commencement will be Albert R. Erskine III, Doctor of Letters; Mrs. C. M. Gooch, Doctor of Humanities; W. Robert Martin Jr., Doctor of Divinity; the Rev. Robert Boynton Smith, Doctor of Divinity; and Hollis F. Price, Doctor of Humanities.

Albert R. Erskine III

Erskine, a member of Southwestern's Class of '32, is vice president and editorial director at Random House Inc. Erskine's work and his professional associations have been the subject of many articles in such publications as "The New York Times Book Review," "The New Republic" and "Publisher's Weekly."

During his career with the publishing house he has served as editor for some of America's best known and most outstanding authors, including William Faulkner.

He has been Robert Penn Warren's editor since 1948, James Michener's since 1953 and John O'Hara's from 1955 until the author's death in 1970. Erskine has completed three posthumous O'Hara volumes and another is scheduled for publication this summer. Erskine also is editor for Eudora Welty, Karl Shapiro and Ralph Ellison, and recently has begun work with two new authors—Tennessean Cormac McCarthy and Michael Mewshaw. Among books on which he currently is working are At Random: The Reminiscences of Bennett Cerf and The O'Hara Concern.

Erskine was born in Memphis. After graduating from Southwestern, he earned a master's degree from Vanderbilt University, and continued his studies on a fellowship at Louisiana State University.

Mrs. C. M. Gooch

Mrs. C. M. Gooch, one of the South's leading horticulturists, has been active in many philanthropic concerns, particularly in the field of education. She and her husband, whose Memphis-based lumber company grew from modest beginnings to one of the largest firms of its kind in the South, have helped thousands of students through scholarship aid. Mr. Gooch died in 1969.

Mr. and Mrs. Gooch donated 10 acres of land to the City of Memphis for a park. In 1949 they received the citizenship award of the Newspaper Guild of Memphis, and in 1954 they

Bone named to library post

Larry Earl Bone, Assistant Director of the public library system in Memphis, will join Southwestern Sept. 1 as Director of Burrow Library and Associate Professor of Bibliography.

Bone will assume his duties after the retirement of Albert M. Johnson in August. Johnson has headed the Southwestern library since 1957.

The new library director has been with the Memphis public library sys-

Seidman, Ohlendorf named ODK members

P. K. Seidman of Memphis and Harold Ohlendorf of Osceola, Ark., have been selected as honorary members of Omicron Delta Kappa national leadership fraternity.

Seidman, a Certified Public Accountant, is a partner and policy group chairman with the accounting firm of Seidman and Seidman. He is a member of the President's Council of Southwestern and serves on the Planned Giving Sponsoring Committee.

He is a member of several state and national accounting organizations, the American and Tennessee Bar Associations and the Estate Planning Council of Memphis, of which he served as 1974 president. He is chairman for culture and the arts of Future Memphis Inc. and serves on a number of civic and religious groups.

He is president and a faculty member of the Memphis College of Accountancy and is co-author of four volumes dealing with federal income and excess profits tax laws. He was named the Greater Memphis State Educator of the Year in 1974. Other honors include the Award of Merit presented by the City of Memphis in 1970 and selection this year as Citizen of the Year by the Newspaper Guild of Memphis.

Harold Ohlendorf, a 1931 graduate of Southwestern, has for years been a major force in the economic development of the Osceola area.

He is head of a major agricultural organization which includes several thousand acres of land, a ginning company and a milling company. He also is president of the Ohlendorf Investment Corp., the Osceola Broadcasting

P. K. Seidman

Corp., Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. of Arkansas, Arkansas Plant Food Co., Arkansas Casualty Investment Corp. and other organizations.

Ohlendorf also serves as a director for a variety of concerns, including insurance companies, banks in Osceola and West Memphis, a ginning company, Delta Products Co., Southwestern

Harold Ohlendorf

Bell Telephone Co. and others.

He has been active in numerous civic, social and business groups in Tennessee and Arkansas, and has been instrumental in developing hospital, library and educational facilities in Osceola and the surrounding area. His work often has been on the state or national level, particularly in the field of education.

ODK taps two students

Senior Frank J. Wills and junior Robin Lee Rice were initiated into Omicron Delta Kappa national leadership fraternity last month at a meeting of the ODK Association of Memphis.

Wills is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Wills Jr. of Little Rock, Ark. He is majoring in philosophy and political science.

He is an Honor Roll student and a representative to the Board of Trustees, and has been active in the Social Regulations Commission, the Men's Undergraduate Board and the Dilemma symposium series, as well as numerous other campus activities.

Robin Rice, son of Mr. and Mrs. George L. Rice Jr. of Memphis, is a biology major. Rice has been involved in the Social Commission at Southwestern and is a member of the Student Government Association.

State commission to meet at SW

The Tennessee Higher Education Commission will meet at Southwestern on May 23, marking the first time the group has met on the campus of a private college.

Walter P. Armstrong Jr., a member of the Board of Trustees, is chairman of the Commission. Both the incoming and the outgoing executive directors of the group will be present for the meeting. Dr. Wayne Brown, Vice President for Academic Affairs at Union University, Jackson, will become executive director on May 24, succeeding Dr. John Folger.

tem since 1970. He is a 1954 Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Southwestern and holds a Master of Science degree in library science from Western Reserve University (now Case Western Reserve University) in Cleveland, Ohio.

Bone's background includes positions in several library systems and a number of teaching assignments in library schools. He has edited two books dealing with library education and has published numerous articles on library-related topics.

"Larry Bone is a nationally recognized authority in his profession," President James H. Daughdrill Jr. said in announcing the appointment. "The college is very fortunate to have a man of his caliber as the new Burrow Library Director."

Bone said he is happy to be returning to his alma mater. "Southwestern is a very special place to me," he said. "I very much believe in the liberal-arts concept in education, and Southwestern is a college with a strong liberal-arts tradition."

Bone is a member of the American Library Association Council and has served in a number of offices with the Association. He also is a member of the Southeastern and Tennessee Library Associations and the Memphis Library Council.

He has been selected for inclusion in the 1975-76 edition of "Who's Who in the South and Southwest," and last year was chosen to receive the Ford Foundation's Council on Library Resources Fellowship. Last fall, under the auspices of the grant, he completed a three-month study of the goals and objectives of libraries across the country in light of the rapid changes which are taking place in the library and educational fields.

After receiving his master's degree in 1955, Bone worked as assistant Reference Librarian at San Francisco State College during the summer, then served as Branch Librarian for the Memphis Public Library from 1955 to 1957. He later worked in the Library of Congress, at George Mason College of the University of Virginia and with the public libraries of Avon Lake and Mentor, Ohio. From 1963 through 1966 he was County Librarian of Shelby County Libraries.

He joined the Graduate School of Library Science of the University of Illinois in 1966, serving as Assistant Director from 1966 to 1968 and Assistant Professor from 1968 to 1970.

Bone was Visiting Deputy Librarian with the American Library in Paris, France, in 1968-69. He has held visiting professorships at the University of Washington, the George Peabody School of Library Science and Columbia University, and last year was a visiting lecturer in Memphis State University's Department of Library Science.

were two of 15 persons in the U.S. cited for community service in the Encyclopedia Britannica Book of the Year.

Mrs. Gooch, a native Memphian, is a 1915 graduate of Vassar College. She has held various offices in the Memphis Garden Club, including the presidency, and is a nationally accredited camellia judge. She received the Distinguished Service Medal of the Garden Club of America in 1960 for outstanding achievement in horticulture.

W. Robert Martin Jr.

The Rev. W. Robert Martin Jr., born in Greenville, Miss., is executive director of The Fund for Theological Education Inc., Princeton, N.J. His career in the ministry has included positions at Union Theological Seminary in Richmond, Va., where he served as Dean of Students and as Assistant to the President.

He was ordained in 1960 at St. Giles Presbyterian Church, Richmond, Va., and later served as Senior Assistant Minister for St. Cuthbert's Parish Church in Edinburgh, Scotland. He was founding minister at Three Chopt Presbyterian Church in Richmond before joining Union Theological Seminary.

The Rev. Mr. Martin, a graduate of Davidson College, received a Bachelor of Divinity degree from Union Theological Seminary in 1960. He has lectured and preached at colleges, seminars, conferences and other programs across the country, and his writings have appeared in numerous religious publications.

Robert B. Smith

The Rev. Robert Boynton Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Midland, Tex., is an active leader in the Presbyterian Church, U.S.

He served as chairman of the Commission on the Minister and His Work in St. Andrew Presbytery from 1969 to 1972 and was chairman of the Presbyterian General Assembly's Permanent Committee on Inter-Church Relations. He currently heads the Mission Committee and the Nominating Committee of Tres Rios Presbytery.

The Rev. Mr. Smith holds a Bachelor of Arts degree from Presbyterian College in Clinton, S.C., and Bachelor of Divinity degree from Union Theological Seminary. He earned a Master of Theology degree from New Orleans Theological Seminary and also did graduate work at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

He was active on the General Assembly's Ad-Interim Committee on Union with the United Presbyterian Church, U.S.A., and on the Presbyterian Church, U.S., Delegation to the Consultation on Church Union, as well as other church organizations.

Hollis F. Price

Hollis F. Price, President Emeritus of LeMoyne-Owen College in Memphis, was the recipient this year of the Brotherhood Award given annually by the Memphis Round Table of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Dr. Price, who retired from the LeMoyne-Owen presidency in 1970, has been active in numerous areas, including church, education, the arts, and civil rights.

He is a member of the Southwestern President's Council, a member and past chairman of the Memphis Urban League Board of Directors, a life member of the N.A.A.C.P. and a member of the Tennessee Comprehensive Health Planning Council.

In 1964, on leave of absence from LeMoyne-Owen, he served as director of fund raising for the United Negro College Fund. He has been active in the work of the World Council of Churches and is a member and deacon of the Second Congregational Church in Memphis.

Dr. Price holds degrees from Amherst College and Columbia University, and honorary Doctor of Letters degrees from Amherst and Brandeis University.

The fathers of five Southwestern students will participate in the baccalaureate services on Friday afternoon. The Rev. Henry E. Acklen of Collierville, Tenn., will deliver the invocation. The Rev. Frank N. Butler, of St. Louis, will read from the Scriptures, and the Rev. Thomson Q. Johnson, of Columbus, Ga., will offer the prayer. The baccalaureate sermon will be given by the Rev. John Franklin Anderson Jr., minister with the First Presbyterian Church, Dallas. The Rev. Fred W. Neal, Professor of Religion at Southwestern, will deliver the benediction.

Manuscripts are a hit in California

Twenty-four rare manuscripts from the Clough-Hanson Collection returned to Burrow Library recently after winning public praise at a showing in California.

William J. Gravesmill, executive director of the Muckenthaler Cultural Center in Fullerton, Calif., said the display received an enthusiastic response, with more than 2,300 persons coming to view, study and photograph the manuscripts. He said the popularity of the display prompted its being held over the past originally scheduled closing date.

The manuscripts, which date from the 12th through 18th centuries, were featured at the gallery for two months. Loan of the manuscripts was arranged by Librarian Albert Johnson and Gravesmill, who is a former Southwestern faculty member. Gravesmill was a teacher in the Music Department from 1959 through 1961.

The collection displayed at the gallery includes musical notations from liturgical books, pages from Bibles and other manuscripts handprinted and decorated on handmade paper and vellum. Johnson said a number of manuscripts in the collection are on display in Burrow Library.

Composer dedicates work to SW Singers

Composer Noel Geomanne of Dallas, Tex., has dedicated one of his latest arrangements to the Southwestern Singers of Southwestern At Memphis and to the Singers' director, Tony Garner.

The piece is an arrangement of a traditional folk melody, "Come, Go With Me to That Land."

The Southwestern Singers performed a piece by the internationally known composer while on tour in spring 1974. Geomanne dedicated the folk arrangement to the Singers after receiving a copy of the 1974 tour recording.

Affiliation boosts course offerings

SW linked with research lab

Southwestern students interested in marine biology gained a substantial list of new options recently with approval of the college's affiliation with the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory at Ocean Springs, Miss.

Beginning this summer, students will be able to attend classes in the marine sciences at the facility and earn course credit at Southwestern.

According to Dr. Julian Darlington, Department Chairman and campus coordinator for the laboratory, one of the attractive aspects of the arrangement is its lack of red tape. A student interested in taking a course at the laboratory first must obtain approval from Darlington. The student then pays fees and registers for the course through the Southwestern Registrar's office, just as if the course were being taught on campus.

The laboratory, which has a professional staff of about 110 persons engaged in research the year round, offers its courses in a 12-week program con-

Blueprint for the future

Trustees adopt Master Plan

Southwestern's Ten-Year Master Plan became the college's official statement of its approach to the future with adoption of the document last month by the Board of Trustees.

The final form of the Master Plan, revised from the draft which was printed in the November 1974 edition of Today, represents the consideration and effort of all segments of the Southwestern community.

The Master Plan originated with a study undertaken by the Board in the fall of 1972. By the following spring, the study had developed into a coordinated nine-step long-range planning process covering two years.

A special Long Range Planning Team was charged with organizing and drafting the document as goals and priorities were identified, and after studying and editing the first draft, the plan was presented to the Board of Trustees, faculty members, administrators, student body, alumni and friends of the college. Final suggestions then were incorporated into the plan, and it was presented to the Board for ap-

The Board's adoption of the Master Plan "culminates the hard work and serious thought of many dedicated people," President James H. Daughdrill Jr. said after the meeting. "More importantly, it is an exciting venture to strengthen Southwestern's educational program. As we come to the 50th anniversary of Southwestern At Memphis, we enter the future with a strong sense of direction, purpose and enthusiasm for the challenges ahead."

Last month's Board meeting also saw the retirement of trustees C. Bennett Harrison and John H. Stennis.

Harrison, who recently became chairman of the board of Volunteer-State Bank in Knoxville, formerly was chairman of the board of Union Planters National Bank of Memphis. He holds a bachelor's degree from Davidson College and did graduate work at Vanderbilt University.

He was elected to the Board in March 1971 and was named second vice chairman in 1972. Harrison is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and Scabbard and Blade honorary fraternities.

Stennis is a partner in the Jackson, Miss., law firm of Watkins, Pyle, Ludlam, Winter and Stennis. He was elected to the Board from the Synod of Mississippi in 1970.

Stennis is a graduate of Princeton University and received his law degree from the University of Virginia. He is a member of the county, state and American Bar Associations, and has been a member of the Mississippi House of Representatives since 1969.

An elder of the Fondren Presbyterian Church, he served as general chairman of the Synod of Mississippi's Chamberlain-Hunt/Southwestern Capital Campaign.

In other action, the Board established a committee to suggest steps to implement the goal of strengthening the college's intercollegiate athletic program and steps to strengthen and broaden a program of intramurals, lifetime sports and physical education.

The Board's fall meeting was scheduled for October 16, 17 and 18 to coincide with the celebration of the 50th anniversary of Southwestern's move to Memphis.

DRESSED FOR SPRING—The Hubert F. Fisher Memorial Garden, traditional site of Southwestern's commencement exercises, burst into full bloom as Term 3 got under way last month. This student found it a perfect setting for a peaceful session of required reading.

Stage is set for Renaissance

Costumes, props, players and programs are poised and waiting for May 2, 3 and 4, the dates of Southwestern's second Renaissance Festival.

Each day's activities will begin at 10 a.m. with opening ceremonies, including a full-dress processional. The festivities will close at 5 p.m. daily.

Among the scheduled activities will be a masque produced by the Communication Arts Department, to be presented at 1:30 and 2:15 p.m. Friday and Saturday, May 2 and 3, and 1:30 Sunday.

The joust, a popular event at last year's Festival, will begin at 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

sisting of two terms. Students take one course each term, meeting eight hours per day, five days per week.

Students live and take meals on the 40-acre main campus, which also houses the principal research facilities.

Course offerings at the laboratory cover a range of marine sciences, including marine chemistry, zoology, fisheries management, microbiology, ecology, ichthyology and aquaculture.

Affiliations between small, inland colleges and coastal research operations are relatively new, Darlington explained. Until such arrangements came into being some 15 to 20 years ago, he said, only large colleges on the coast could offer the extensive facilities which are important in marine science instruction. Now a large number of coastal stations, through affiliation with colleges, make marine science a viable option for increasing numbers of students.

Darlington, Dr. Ken Wagner and about 20 students visited the Gulf Coast Laboratory for the first time about two years ago as part of Darlington's study of the feasibility of an affiliation between Southwestern and a coastal station. "We were favorably impressed with it," Darlington said, and after further consideration the arrangement was formally approved.

One of the important functions of the new course offerings, Darlington said, will be to give students a more complete and accurate picture of the field of marine biology. "Many people, when they think of marine biology, think of Jacques Cousteau," he said, adding that the exploits of the famous researcher represent only a tiny segment of marine science.

Two students already have registered for courses at the laboratory this summer. Tim Haley and Curtis Hopper, both sophomores, have expressed an interest in specializing in marine biology, Wagner said. Both will be enrolled in the laboratory's introductory course in marine biology, Wagner said, "to find out if they really would like it."

Six seniors selected for Hall of Fame

Six seniors have been named to the Hall of Fame in recognition of their outstanding contributions to Southwestern. They are Wendy Jane Ashcroft, Samuel Lee Broffitt, Serena Ann Crawford, Mary Margaret (Peg) Falls, Henry Millard (Ike) Lee and Andrew Soule Scott III.

Miss Ashcroft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Ashcroft, Columbus, Ohio, is an honor student in psychology. She has served as Education Commissioner, secretary of the Educational Development Committee, and a member of the Community Life and Student Government Budget Committees. She has played on the tennis, volleyball and badminton varsity teams, served as vice president of her dormitory and sung with the Madrigal Singers. A member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority and Mortar Board, she was named to "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities." A Brownie Scout Leader, Miss Ashcroft is a Memphis delegate to the Tenn-Ark-Miss Girl Scout Council.

Broffitt, son of Mrs. Dorothy Broffitt, Mason, Tenn., a biology major and helped coordinate the Medical Symposium. He has been a member of the Honor Council for four straight years, and of the Social Regulations Council, the Intramural Athletics Board and the Black Student Association. A member of Omicron Delta Kappa, Broffitt was named to "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities."

Miss Crawford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy D. Crawford, Maryville, Tenn., is a political science major. She is spending Terms 2 and 3 at the American University in Washington, D.C., where she is serving an internship and completing an honors paper. She has served at Southwestern as a member of the Elections Commission, president of the Kinney Program, student representative to the Admissions Committee, and as finance chairman of Dilemma. She was named to Mortar Board and "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities," and is a Dean's List student.

Miss Falls, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Erskine Boyce Falls, Wynne, Ark., is a philosophy major. She has been a member of the Women's Athletic Association, the women's varsity basketball and badminton teams, the concert band and the Curriculum Committee. A student representative to the Board of Trustees and a president of the Honor Council, she was selected to Phi Beta Kappa, "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities," and Mortar Board.

Lee, son of Dr. and Mrs. Henry M.

Lee, West Point, Miss., is a philosophy major. He has been a member of the Southwestern Singers, the Southwestern student newspaper staff, and ODK. He has worked in the Kinney and Dilemma programs and has served as a dormitory president and as president of the Social Regulations Council. Lee was selected to "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities."

Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Soule Scott Jr., Laurel, Miss., is a political science major. He has been business manager of the Publications Board, editor of the Student Handbook and a member of the Spare Utilization Committee, Analytical Studies Committee and Board of Trustees Finance Committee. Scott has worked with the Kinney Program and has served as co-chairman of the Dilemma Steering Committee and a representative to the Honor Council. He was selected for "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities."

Orgills find unitrust an attractive option

Of the many forms of deferred giving, one of the most unusual is a relatively new plan called the "unitrust."

The attractiveness of the plan lies in the fact that it provides, in one package, financial benefits for the donor, for his or her immediate survivor and for a third and final beneficiary. The income varies with the annual value of the assets.

Among those who have found the unitrust a useful part of their estate planning are Edmund Orgill, Honorary Life Trustee of Southwestern, and his wife, Catherine. The Orgills, strong supporters of Southwestern for many years, added another $20,000 to their Southwestern unitrust in April. It was their fourth addition, and brings the face value of the unitrust to $132,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Orgill gave $67,000 in bonds to Southwestern to establish the charitable remainder unitrust in July 1972. Together the Orgills receive 5 per cent of the annual value of the assets in semiannual payments. So will the survivor, during his or her lifetime.

At the death of the surviving donor, all the assets go to Southwestern. Thus, the Orgills have a life income from their gift and have also provided for continuing support of the college.

Because the funds are irrevocably given into the unitrust and because Southwestern, a qualified educational institution, is the final beneficiary, there is an income tax deduction based on the life expectancy of the income beneficiaries. If the property given had increased in value since Mr. and Mrs. Orgill acquired it, there would have been no capital gains tax on the increase because of the college's tax-exempt status.

The Orgills are liable for income tax on their income from the unitrust, just as if the investments were still their own. Their unitrust is unusual, however, in that tax-exempt bonds were donated and remain invested; therefore, the income from the unitrust also is tax exempt.

Orgill has made a further provision for the college in his will. A part of the estate will go into another unitrust for Southwestern with a local bank as trustee. This will provide a continuation of income for the survivor and also will qualify for an estate tax deduction.

Planned giving is a way of life for the Edmund Orgills. "You don't have to be a millionaire to use planned giving to benefit an institution and save income taxes while doing so," Orgill said in discussing the unitrust concept.

The unitrust and a similar plan called the "charitable remainder trust," both created by the Tax Reform Act of 1969, provide useful options for many persons in planning their estates, said Park Moore, Director of Planned Giving. Persons interested in further information on these and other plans can write to Moore in the Office of Development or call (901) 276-2404.

SGA, class posts filled

Student Government Association commissioners and class executive secretaries were elected recently at Southwestern. Also chosen were class representatives to the Social Regulations Council.

The Athletic Commissioner will be Steven Wade, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Wade, Little Rock. Wade is a junior majoring in political science.

Lawrence G. Poppa

writing a security manual during his initial period at Southwestern.

He is a native of Columbus, Neb., and holds a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration from the University of Nebraska.

Michael Dowell, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Dowell Jr., Athens, Ala., was elected Publications Commissioner. Dowell, a junior majoring in communication arts and English, has been active in the New Southwestern Players, a student drama group, and in the Kinney Program, and this year is editor of the "Southwestern Journal."

The Social Commission will be headed by three students, Carl Hill, Gene New and Greg Sims. Hill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willie Hill of Memphis, is a psychology major. Hill served as the SGA vice president this year and also was elected senior class representative to the Social Regulations Council. New, son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. New, Lake Village, Ark., is a junior biology major. He is a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity. Sims, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Sims, the Netherlands, is a sophomore majoring in psychology.

John Weems Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. J. J. Weems, Memphis, was elected Town Student Commissioner. Weems is a sophomore majoring in biology.

The senior class executive secretary will be Raymond Fitzgerald, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Fitzgerald, Little Rock. Fitzgerald is majoring in economics and business administration. The junior class executive secretary will be Barbara Ashcroft, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Ashcroft, Columbus, Ohio. She is a member of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority and has been active in the Kinney Program. Bonnie Allen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Allen, Orlando, Fla., will serve as sophomore class secretary.

Two members from each class were elected as representatives to the Social Regulations Council. Representing the senior class with Carl Hill will be Anne Womack, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Womack, Stone Mountain, Ga.

Junior class representatives will be Robin Mattis and Shane O'Neill. Miss Mattis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David J. Mattis, Wheeling, W. Va., is a biology major. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority and has been active in intramural sports and the Dilemma student-sponsored symposium program. O'Neill, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. O'Neill, Rome, Ga., is a biology major. He has worked with the SRC this year and has helped with the Kinney Program and Dilemma.

Patty Dillahunt and Camille Gladney will represent the sophomore class. Miss Dillahunt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Dillahunt III, Little Rock, is a psychology major. Miss Gladney, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James F. Gladney, Homer, La., is a biology major.

Lawrence Poppa named to head security program

"I came aboard on March 18," said Lawrence G. Poppa in answer to a question about his new tour of duty at Southwestern.

Poppa has joined the college staff as Director of Campus Safety and Security. He recently retired from the Navy after 20 years of service.

His most recent duty was a four-year stint at the Naval Air Station at Millington, where he was head of security. Poppa's Navy career also has included experience as an administrative officer and an aviator.

Poppa (pronounced "Poppy") said he will be concerned primarily with internal organization, traffic control and

Heads top firm at 38

Bryan: Consolidated's leading man

Among the honors and activities credited to John H. Bryan Jr. during his student years at Southwestern, his selection to Omicron Delta Kappa leadership fraternity was especially prophetic. For at 38, Bryan heads one of the country's major corporations—the $2.4-billion Consolidated Foods Corp.

The role of corporation president is not an easy one in the best of times. In a time of recession, and of changes in the basic stance of the corporation, the presidency demands the utmost in leadership. Bryan sees it as "a rare opportunity. I'm enjoying it."

The job also demands a large dose of dedication. For the time being, his outside interests—including his active involvement as a trustee of Southwestern—have been put aside. "I told myself when I came here that the time had to be spent in the direction of the corporation—totally—and in a couple of years, if I'd done a decent job of it, I'd have time to begin to devote my attention, at least in part, to other activities," Bryan said in a telephone conversation from Consolidated's headquarters in Chicago.

He said he sees the work of the board as important both to himself and to the college, and looks forward to the time when he can resume a more active role.

Bryan's move to Chicago came in March 1974, when he left the presidency of Bryan Packing Co. in West Point, Miss., to become vice president-operations and a director of Consolidated Foods.

He was named president and chief operating officer the following October, and in February of this year he assumed full responsibility for the company as president and chief executive officer.

The scope of his duties is considerable, for Consolidated has grown from a grocery business in 1939 into a diversified corporation with facilities in 34 states and 12 foreign countries. Included in the operation are products with such familiar brand names as Electrolux, Shasta, Hollywood candy, Sara Lee, Popsicle, Fuller Brush, Gant and Robert Bruce and many others.

Now is a time of transition for the corporation. "We're going through a period of adjustment from being an acquiring company with a rather free-form kind of management—one of granting significant autonomy to the various units—to recognizing that we have to have greater operating capacity," Bryan said.

The job fits the man. "I didn't grow up in the entrepreneurial, wheeling-dealing type of environment," he said; "my background is classically operating—the fundamentals of running a business." He feels the time is right for that approach at Consolidated.

After graduating from Southwestern in 1958, Bryan studied for a year at the University of Virginia School of Business. He later completed work on an MBA degree at Mississippi State University after returning to West Point to join the family-run Bryan Packing Co., a specialty meat-packing firm. He became head of the company in 1968, the year Bryan Packing became a division of Consolidated Foods.

Nathan Cummings, founder and honorary chairman of Consolidated, met Bryan during a visit to the packing company several years ago and "reported back to our board that we had a young man there who was a future senior officer for the corporation," according to a recent article in Business Week magazine.

Cummings' assessment proved true, and soon Bryan and his wife, the former Neville Frierson ('58), and four children moved to the Chicago area and settled in Kenilworth, Ill.

Bryan feels his Southwestern experience has played a definite part in the course of his life, primarily in helping broaden his outlook through a liberal-arts education. "I think that probably the direction Southwestern gave me, the kind of education and value system that exist there, were as great an influence on me as any other one thing," he said.

"As opposed to being buried in a large university, for instance, I had an opportunity to participate fairly extensively in various activities. That alone probably helped me mature."

Determination and respect for others—two values that often seem incompatible—emerge as equally high priorities as Bryan discusses his approach to his work. Although he did not "chart a career," Bryan said he has "always had a rather significant amount of determination to do the best I can at anything I'm doing."

"I think, too, that having a genuine respect for the people who work with you is probably as vital in being able to lead people as anything I know."

CLASS IN THE SUN—Warm weather last month brought a flurry of activity to the tennis courts and lawns surrounding Memorial Gymnasium. Amid it all, this yoga class lured outside by the sun went placidly about its studies. The course is being offered for the first time this term.

Backed by grant program

Varied projects set for summer

Under the auspices of Southwestern Summer Research and Creative Activity Grants, students and professors will be engaged in activities as diverse as writing a book about the Memphis scene and investigating the enzymatic detection of opportunistic fungi in immunosuppressed animals.

Herbert W. Smith, associate professor of psychology and chairman of the Committee on Research and Creative Activity, explained that proposals for grants are evaluated on three criteria: scholarly merit, relevance to the Southwestern educational program and feasibility of the project. The program, now in its second decade, offers a maximum stipend of $1,500 to faculty members and $600 to students for the 10-week projects.

Anthropology Professor Jack Conrad's project, "Studies of the Memphis Scene," grew out of a course he teaches in research methods. Conrad explained that in the course students are encouraged "to pick a slice of Memphis that interests them." The students investigate the subject and, using anthropological techniques, write an ethnography—a detailed and exact account of their observations phrased in anthropological terms.

The ethnographies Dr. Conrad has received inspired the idea of putting them together in a book about Memphis.

Conrad's task this summer will be to edit the work and compile accompanying photographs. Dr. Conrad said the book will be composed of scenes that are distinctive aspects of Memphis, such as the music scene, the river scene, the cotton scene and others. Conrad's timetable calls for two thirds of the book to be finished by the end of summer, and the full book to be completed by the end of the following academic year.

In another project, Charles O. Warren Jr., associate professor of biology, will be working on an investigation of the regulation of growth in pathogenic fungi. He is concerned with the susceptibility of patients receiving chemotherapy to routine organisms that are contacted daily.

Student picked for Harvard fellowship

Roberta (Robbie) Tatum, who will graduate with honors in international studies this year, has been selected for a $5,690 fellowship for graduate work at Harvard University's Center for Middle Eastern Studies.

Miss Tatum is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Tatum of Lake Charles. She was one of 12 students nationwide selected to receive the fellowships.

Chemotherapy is the use of chemicals in the treatment of or control of disease. Many patients treated with chemicals have been found to have an impaired immunological response—that is, part of the body's normal defense system has become weakened. This weakened system results in their being more susceptible to "opportunistic" pathogens (a pathogen is a specific cause of a disease, like a bacterium or a virus). Warren explained, "By the time they (opportunistic pathogens) are detectable by standard, traditional microbiological methods, they can be lethal."

Warren will try to find detection mechanisms that will help detect the fungi early enough so that treatment can be started. He will be seeking a basic understanding of specific metabolic pathogens. Sophomore Bill Phelps received a summer grant to investigate enzymatic detection of the opportunistic fungi in immunosuppressed animals.

Another faculty-student investigation will be conducted by chemistry Professor Harold Lyons and junior Helen Broom. Lyons will be investigating new ways to separate and to analyze glycoproteins. Glycoproteins, molecules composed of sugars and protein, are found on the outermost part of the cell membrane. They help one cell to recognize another.

Students probe international politics

Teams cap fruitful U.N. year

By Cecilia Schardt ('75)

Today Staff Writer

Thirty Southwestern students studied world politics from the inside this year as participants in the Model United Nations program.

In the process, they earned kudos for their ability to unravel the complex relationships between countries and added another credit to the college's high reputation in international studies.

The idea behind the Model U.N. program, described by its sponsors as "role-playing" and "an exercise in international organization and politics," originated at Harvard University in 1921 with a Model League of Nations. The program continued until 1939, terminating with the actual League of Nations, and the Model U.N. was instituted in 1945. Other colleges across the country picked up the idea and began sponsoring their own programs.

The Harvard Model U.N. still is considered one of the two top programs (the other is the National Model U.N. in New York), and this year Southwestern finished its Model U.N. participation with a strong showing at Harvard. The delegation of eight students, representing Cameroon, received a Distinguished Delegation Award and finished fifth among the 90 groups participating.

About 650 delegates participated in the Harvard conference. Among the 40 persons receiving Distinguished Delegate awards for outstanding individual performances were three Southwestern delegates—juniors Oliver Cobb and Emmanuel Mbi and freshman Pamela Portwood.

The Model U.N. program is structured identically to the actual United Nations, Cobb explained, and each delegation plays the role of an assigned country's delegation. Assignments usually are made about six weeks in advance by the Model U.N. secretariat.

Sessions last two or three days, during which legislation is brought before the General Assembly and Security Council by different delegations. Thorough knowledge of the workings of the U.N. and of international politics in general is a must. "You have to know the rules of the Council," senior Jeff Hudgins said. "You can manipulate if you know the rules."

Hudgins estimated that "the average delegate has put in 20 hard hours of preparation." Mbi concurred, comparing the preparation involved to that of a 12-week course.

The Curriculum Committee apparently agrees with the assessment. At the instigation of Dr. David Likes, Chairman of the International Studies Department and faculty adviser to the Model U.N. delegations, the Committee has added the Model U.N. to the college curriculum. Next year students will receive one hour of credit in international studies for each Model U.N. attended, up to a maximum of four.

Likes said the Southwestern delegations have turned in consistently good performances in Model U.N. conferences. He estimated the delegations' average rankings have been in the top 5 per cent of participants. Considering the stiff competition from large colleges and universities, Likes said, the students can be justifiably proud of their record.

Southwestern began participating in the Model U.N. program in 1959. This year the college sent a total of 11 delegations to five Model U.N. sessions. This year's delegates found the program a rewarding and educational one, and are urging even greater participation next year.

Although the program holds a natural attraction for international studies majors, participation is open to students from all departments.

Mbi sees the program not only as an intensified study of international relations, but also as a lesson in seeing more than one side of complex issues and working out solutions to difficult problems.

In Mbi's case, the Model U.N. is tailor-made for his future plans. A native of Cameroon, he was part of the delegation representing that country at the Harvard session. Later, Mbi plans to enter the Cameroon foreign service en route to higher goals—one of which he hopes will be the presidency.

Baseball team falters in early going

Lack of experience, especially in the pitching staff, has made the baseball season so far "a coaching challenge," coach Frederick R. (Fritz) Stauffer said in mid-April.

Stauffer remains optimistic, despite the team's 0-5 record. "I feel confident and the guys feel that way," he said. "I think all they need is one victory."

Stauffer praised the players' "fine attitude" and enthusiasm, adding that "they're young, and are working out mistakes." There are no seniors and only three juniors on the team, but the players have hit well and shown speed running the bases.

"We stole more bases in the first four games than any team in the past eight years," he said.

Stauffer said the defense "has been scratchy but is coming along. Many players have been converted to new positions and are expected to continue to improve as they gain experience."

The coach welcomed all interested alumni to watch or participate in the alumni game, scheduled for 2 p.m. May 3 at Fargason Field.

Perkinson heads St. Andrews College

A. P. Perkinson Jr., former Director of Development at Southwestern, has been named to the presidency of St. Andrews Presbyterian College in Laurinburg, N.C., effective May 1.

Perkinson was at Southwestern from 1968 to 1972, when he left to become Director of Development and Public Relations at Millsaps College in Jackson, Miss. At St. Andrews Perkinson succeeds Dr. Donald J. Hart, who has resigned to return to teaching.

Two win fellowships for MBA program

Seniors Linda Brown and Vicki Gilmore have been awarded fellowships from the Consortium for Graduate Study in Management to pursue Master of Business Administration degrees at Washington University, St. Louis.

Both students are from Memphis and both are majoring in economic and business administration. Miss Brown is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brown, and Miss Gilmore is the daughter of Desota Gilmore.

Student Publications

1975-76 editors chosen

Editors have been selected by the Publications Board for the 1975-76 school year.

Jeff Strack, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Strack, Arkadelphia, Ark., was named editor of "The Sou'wester." Strack is a junior majoring in religion. He has been active in the Religious Commission.

Co-editors were selected for "Ginger," the literary magazine. They are Bob Donnell, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Charles L. Donnell, Decatur, Ga., and Mitch Wilds, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Murphey C. Wilds, Denton, Tex. Donnell, a junior, and Wilds, a sophomore, are art majors.

The new editor of the "SFA Newsletter" (Students-Faculty-Administration) is Ann Fair, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Fair, Charlottesville, Va. Miss Fair, a sophomore majoring in history, has been active in the Drama Club and is a member of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

The "Southwestern Journal," a publication of the best academic papers, will be edited by Tom Kibby, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Kibby, Richmond, Va. Kibby, a junior majoring in biology, has been active on the student newspaper staff and in the Kinney Program, and has been a Dean's List student.

Katherine Maddox, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Maddox, Memphis, was named editor of the "Student Handbook," a collection of general information sent each year to freshmen and transfer students to help acquaint them with the college. Miss Maddox, a sophomore majoring in economics and urban studies, has been active in the Student Government Association and the Kinney Program and is a member of Chi Omega sorority.

Steve Collins, son of the Rev. and Mrs. Robert R. Collins, Mexico, Mo., will serve as editor of "Student Directory and Faces." Collins served as co-editor this year.

The Memphis Press-Scimitar recently awarded news editor Luther Southworth a 50-year-pin for his services with the newspaper.

William Ritchie Morgan was featured in the Southern Regional Bulletin of the U.S. Post Office in its "Meet Your Sectional Center Managers" column. He was appointed postmaster and sectional center manager at Pine Bluff, Ark., in 1973, having previously been postmaster in Camden, Ark.

"Judith Augusta: A Daughter-In-Law of Charlemagne" is the subject of Allen Cabaniss' newest book, published by Vantage Press in New York. The book contains several other essays about minor ninth-century figures.

William D. Southworth, professor of educational administration at St. John's University in Jamaica, N.Y., has contributed chapters to "Education . . . beyond tomorrow," edited by Richard Hostrop, and "New Directions in Educational Leadership," edited by Erger and Israel. He also writes a quarterly column for "The Journal," published by the School Administrators Association of New York State.

The Library of Congress has appointed John C. Broderick Chief of its Manuscript Division. He joined the staff in 1964 as manuscript historian-specialist in American Cultural History in the Manuscript Division, and was appointed assistant chief of the division the following year. He is also Adjunct Professor and Consultant in Bibliography at George Washington University, having previously taught at the Universities of North Carolina, Texas, Virginia and Wake Forest. He received a fellowship from the Council of Library Resources in 1971 which took him to 22 U.S. educational institutions and libraries to study major collections of Americana.

Bill Byrd has moved to Eustis, Fla., where he is director of music at the First Presbyterian Church.

Mezzo soprano Mignon Dunn is slated as guest soloist with the Arkansas Symphony Orchestra, conducted by her husband Kurt Klippstatter, as part of the Memphis Beethoven Club's Artist Concert Series for 1975-76. They will close the club's American Bicentennial season on March 13, 1976. Mignon was awarded an honorary Doctor of Music degree from Southwestern last year.

'58

Roy D. Rainey is newly elected national vice president of the National Association of Home Builders. He will serve on the executive committee of the association and represent Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

Sara Jean Jackson, who has been with the Regional Medical Program in Memphis, moved to Jackson, Miss., in March to become associate director of the Medical Center Library.

'61

Teacher of English and humanities at Darlington School in Rome, Ga., George Awsumb has been presented the 1975 Distinguished Service Award for Excellence in Teaching by the Georgia Association of Independent Schools. He was elected by peer members of the association. On the Darlington faculty since 1962, he has also been named a district and city "Star Teacher," and was chosen as the 1969 Outstanding Young Educator for Rome and Floyd County by the Junior Chamber of Commerce. He and Betsy Breyspraak Awsumb ('63) are the parents of two daughters.

John Portwood has been named a senior trust officer at the Bank of Mississippi in Tupelo, where he will direct the Trust Department and continue to manage the trust investment assets.

Gwen Bell Riley teaches intellectually gifted children, ages 8-11, in the Huntsville school system and will receive her Alabama Special Education Certification this summer with an endorsement in the gifted and talented. Her husband is an engineer at NASA.

William and Lynette Humphreys

('63) Campbell live in Chapel Hill, N.C., where he is a lawyer and professor of Public Law and Government at the University of North Carolina.

'63

John and Maxine Mitchel ('66) Rice have moved from Memphis to Grand Prairie, Tex., where he is the new rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church. Former vicar of Holy Apostles Mission of the Church of the Holy Communion, John has been assistant rector of the Church of the Ascension in Knoxville, associate chaplain of the Eastern Tennessee State Mental Hospital, program director for a Memphis Police Department-sponsored camp for urban youths, and a member of the camp staff of DuBose Conference Center in Monteagle, Tenn.

James M. Johnston, who was promoted to major last November, works at the Air Force Military Personnel Center in San Antonio, Tex.

James Tobin is visiting scholar

Noted economist speaks at SW

"Turn the federal reserve policy around," economist James Tobin advocated in a recent address on the Southwestern campus. Tobin, chairman of the Department of Economics at Yale University, was a guest of the college under the auspices of the national Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar Program.

In a talk on "The Economics of Inflation and Recession," Tobin criticized the restrictive policies of the Federal Reserve Board and called for a lowering of interest rates in order to stimulate the flow of money.

The economist stressed the importance of a direct boost to spending through the federal budget, saying the tax cut is an effective way to increase consumer spending and inject new life into the economy.

The most important move in times of inflation and recession is to stimulate the economy "quickly and in a large dose," Tobin said. He urged that assistance be given to state and local governments whose expenses are increasing but whose tax revenue is dropping. "This is leading them to do wrong things like raising the sales tax," he said.

In response to a question concerning the federal budget, Tobin said the "deficits in the Ford budget are wholly the result of the recession. The deficits will go away only when the economy is well again."

In analyzing how the country's economy got into its present situation, Tobin criticized the Federal Reserve Board. "They did it. It's their recession," he said, citing a deliberate tightening of monetary policy as the chief cause of the recession.

As for the future of the economy, the economist said "no one can say a turnabout is in sight. The downward spiral feeds on itself." But a quick reversal of policies to a more expansionary fiscal approach would encourage increased spending by consumers and businesses, which would start the economy on its way to recovery from the slump, he said. "The confidence of consumers and businesses has been badly damaged," he noted.

Tobin's public lecture was one of several appearances during his stay on campus. Under the Visiting Scholar program, sponsored by the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, a visiting scholar spends two days on campus and takes full part in the academic life of the institution. In Tobin's case this included lectures to several classes and informal talks with students.

In addition to his Yale duties, Tobin is a consultant to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. In light of his criticism of the system, Tobin explained that his duties as consultant do not include helping formulate federal reserve policies. He has been on the Yale faculty since 1950 and the university's Sterling Professor of Economics since 1957.

Tobin is author or co-author of several books, including The American Business Creed, National Economic Policy, Essays in Economics, Financial Markets and Economic Activity and The New Economics One Decade Later.

New stress put on 'lifetime sports'

The Southwestern athletic program is putting increasing emphasis on "lifetime sports," those which can be continued by the student after he or she graduates, according to Athletic Director William Maybry.

The shift is evidenced by the number of new physical education courses being offered in Term 3. In addition to the traditional tennis course, classes are being offered in yoga, belly dancing, gymnastics, karate and first aid. "Everyone seems really happy with what we've added," Maybry said.

Most of the courses are being held on campus, but the gymnastics class, which includes both floor work and trampoline, is to be held at a neighborhood YMCA.

Plans to continue with varied courses prompted Maybry to petition the Curriculum Committee to implement half credits in physical education. Under the plan, a student will be able to enroll for a six-week gym course and receive a half credit. Different courses will be offered during the first and second halves of the 12-week term.

The advantage of the system, Maybry said, is more flexibility in scheduling, being able to carry over a course from the last six weeks of one term to the first six weeks of the next.

Instructors in the new courses are experienced in the various disciplines; many have their own studios and are involved with teaching other groups. Clarice Pechack is the yoga instructor, and karate is being taught by Don Owens, who has his own studio in Memphis. Gymnastics instructor Sheila Allen will be assisted by Bob Smith, a former national trampoline champion. The belly dancing class is being taught by Linda Kear and Eleanor Neal.

Both women have dance training and experience in the field. The first aid course is being offered in conjunction with the Memphis chapter of the American Red Cross.

of Governors, representing the Young Lawyers Section.

Teresa Johnson Ramahery and her two children live in Tananarive, Madagascar, where she teaches English at a Catholic school. They enjoyed a visit to the U.S. last fall.

Peter and Martha Overholser Whitney and their two children, Tyson, 5, and Vanna, 4, will be in Boston until June, when they will move to Brazil. Peter is an economist with the State Department, and last year he and the family returned to the U.S. after a two-year assignment in Japan.

Carol Wertz has just celebrated her eighth anniversary with Eastern Airlines. She works as a reservations agent and occasionally talks to Do Ann Johnson, who is employed by the New York ticket office. Carol lives in Metuchen, N.J., and enjoys tennis and skiing.

Duncan and Margaret Ellen Crawford live in Maryville, Tenn., where he practices law and is an instructor in business law at Maryville College.

Will Edington is assistant director of the Consolidated Federal Law Enforcement Officers Training Bureau in Washington. He has bought a house near the Capitol which he plans to restore.

Malcolm and Eleanor Jackson Edwards moved to San Francisco in June after her graduation from Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism, where she was winner of the Robert A. Curry Award for Editorial Writing. She is city hall reporter for the Pittsburg, Calif., Post-Dispatch. Malcolm is enrolled in a two-year pulmonary fellowship program at the University of California Medical School. Eleanor writes that they have bought and are slowly restoring a "pre-earthquake Victorian home."

Doug Post has accepted a postdoctoral fellowship at the Princeton University Plasma Physics Laboratory, where he'll work with a controlled fusion project. He received his Ph.D. from Stanford in January with a thesis on molecular physics. He and Susan, parents of a new baby, have bought a home south of Princeton.

Karen Gilmore is enjoying her fourth year in Germany as a recreation center director with the U.S. Army. Stationed at Harvey Barracks in Kitzingen, she helps provide a recreation program and information service for the entire military community.

Edward Wright, his wife (the former Eve-Marie Lacroix), and their two children, Donald and Marie-Louise, live in the Washington, D.C., area where Edward works for the federal government as a mathematician. He was assistant professor of mathematics at Notre Dame in 1973-74, where he also received his Ph.D. and published a mathematics paper.

Susan Lucas Updyke lives in Montgomery, Ala., where her husband, an Air Force captain, teaches at the Air University Allied Officer School for foreign officers being trained in the U.S.

Don and Cynthia Gladney ('70) Steele live in Hinton, W.Va., where he is pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. Cynthia is president of the Women of the Church and of the Arts Council, which is seeking to build a county library. Don, named to "Outstanding Young Men of America" for 1974, is on the synod mission council and is president of the county ministerial association. He'll receive his Doctor of Ministry degree from Union Theological Seminary in Richmond this spring.

Dan and Julia Maddox Mortenson live in Birmingham, Ala., where he is a management trainee at U.S. Steel and she was promoted recently to operations supervisor in the Social Security district office.

Sarah Spence Darden Williams (Mrs. Bruce Roger) is a pediatrics resident in the City of Memphis Hospitals.

Coby Smith is executive director of Spontaneity Inc. in Memphis. At the University of Massachusetts, where he earned his doctorate in education, he was an instructor and training coordinator at the Institute for Desegregation Resources. He has also served as Dean of the Navy Race Relations Schools in Key West and Memphis.

'69

Neil Arnold works for Holiday Inns Inc. in Memphis as a programmer/analyst in the information systems development department.

Donna Bishop Bugg (Mrs. Dale M.), who was married last May, works in the psychology department of Western State Hospital in Bolivar, Tenn.

John Howell is the "cultural attache" for Art-Rite magazine, published in New York, and will guest-edit two upcoming issues. He writes that he has a book review in the March-April edition of Art in America, is "rehearsing a performance for late spring and writing the fake memoirs of my grandfather and enjoying it all."

After a two-year rotating internship as a lieutenant in the U.S. Navy, Rascoe Rhea has opened a dental clinic in Selmer, Tenn. He and his wife Simms are the parents of David, age 2.

John L. Kennedy is employed in Washington, D.C., by the United Mine Workers of America, where he helps direct a respiratory diagnosis and treatment project for coal miners in eastern Tennessee and eastern Kentucky.

Gary Clark is associated with the English department of State University of New York at Buffalo, where he is working toward his Ph.D. and will soon publish a volume of poems entitled "Sanctions."

Cheryl Thornton is an employee development consultant in the Tennessee Department of Personnel Training Division. She was recently elected the first woman president of the Middle Tennessee Chapter of the American Society for Training and Development.

John Walker and Lauriann Lines Loyd live in Wichita, where he is serving his two-year obligation in the Air Force. She teaches music in the public schools and plays with the Wichita Symphony Orchestra. John entered the Air Force in 1973 after his graduation from dental school and completed a rotating internship last summer.

Maryet Swire Senterfit (Mrs. Stephen) and her husband are both computer systems designers at Martin Marietta in Orlando. They have two sons, ages 4 and 9.

James McCarty is an intern in internal medicine at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston. He will begin a year's postdoctoral fellowship in July to work with herpesvirus in the department of dermatology, and continues in 1976 with a three-year dermatology residency at Baylor.

'72

Karen Shaw, after traveling from Boston to Baja, has moved to Atlanta, where she works as a waitress at Houlihan's Old Place in Lenox Square and does counseling at the Rape Crisis Center.

Jackie Rudledge, enrolled in a six-year combined J.D.-M.D. program at Duke, completes his second year of medical school this spring and will spend a summer externship in Singapore. He is president of his class in medical school, and will enter the law school next fall.

Judith Warren, in Memphis recently for a visit, is doing graduate work in developmental psychology at the University of Washington. "Seattle is beautiful," she said, adding that when she isn't studying she spends time sailing and cross-country skiing.

Charles Wilson and family live in Memphis, where he teaches at the Naval Air Station in Millington and is pursuing a Ph.D. at MSU. He and his wife are the parents of a baby daughter and a 7-year-old son.

Lt. Chris Lyons is stationed in Okinawa as a rifle platoon commander with the Ninth Marines.

Elizabeth Lancaster will begin a 9-month residency with Good Samaritan Hospital in Portland, Ore., next September as part of her requirements for a master's degree in hospital administration. She and several other '73 alumni had a get-together in St. Louis recently. Present were Marcia Lyons, who is working on a master's degree at Washington University; John Sheehan, who is pursuing an M.B.A. and law degree at St. Louis University; Terry Dillon, a patients' account manager at a Newport, Ark., hospital; and Tom Jones, who plans to work in Colorado before entering graduate school.

Chip and Mac Turner Ramsey, who were married in February, live in New York City where Chip is employed by International Ore and Fertilizer Corp.

Susan Burnside Fleming is completing an internship with the Environmental Protection Agency in Durham, N.C., where she is a special assistant to the director of administration. She completed course requirements at the University of North Carolina last August for a master's degree in public administration.

Anthony Richardson works in Memphis as director of a halfway house for ex-prisoners.

Sarah Lodge works with the Shelby County Pre-Trial Release Program.

Coble Caperton is an investigator for the Memphis-Shelby County Pre-Trial Release program.

Tommy Cobb has been selected as one of Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Co.'s 1974 Freshman Five winners. An associate of the Memphis agency of Massachusetts Mutual and member of two top sales clubs, he earned his most recent award based on his over-all quality of performance as a first-year agent.

Larry and Beverly Turner Kranich live in Birmingham, where she is completing her second year at the Cumberland Law School of Samford University.

Gayle Schultz works in the Research and Child Development Center at the University of Kansas, Lawrence, as a visiting speech pathology instructor and clinic counselor. She and several undergraduates attended the Mid-South Speech and Hearing Convention in Memphis in March.
