Ten Science Majors Awarded Grants

The National Science Foundation has awarded a total of $6,250 to the school for undergraduate research projects in the fields of biology, chemistry and physics. Ten Southwestern science majors will receive such grants. Dr. Harold Lyons, a member of the faculty and professor of Analytical Chemistry, is supervisor of the project.

George McCormick and Ken Earker are the recipients of the biology grants. They will work on temperature effects on the developing embryo of the parasitic wasp.

John D. Hettinger, Dorothy Hicks, Harvey Anderson, and Tom McCory will be working under the guidance of Dr. Lyons and Dr. Vaughn. One project now planned for them is gas-liquid chromatography of fatty acids and methyl esters which is longhand for determining and analyzing compounds for the occurrence of these materials. Another is kinetic studies of the Friedel-Crafts reaction, a reaction in which a chain of carbon atoms may be attached to a molecule of benzene.

Tuthill to Direct Singers In Bach 'B Minor Mass'

To close his career of 24 years as Director of Music at Southwestern and conductor of the Southwestern Singers, Dr. Burnet C. Tuthill will direct the Choir and Orchestra of Southwestern in a complete performance of the Mass in B minor by Johann Sebastian Bach on Sunday afternoon and evening, May 3rd at the Evergreen Presbyterian Church across University Boulevard from the campus. Dr. Tuthill has chosen this work because he believes it to be the greatest musical work ever to have been composed, not alone because of its great musical quality but also because of its spiritual message. This performance may quite properly be called the Annual Spring Vesper Service.

The Bach Mass is a long work lasting about two and three-quarter hours. It is divided into two parts, the first of which will be given starting at five o'clock and ending at about 6:30. After an intermission for dinner, the second part will continue at eight in the evening. No tickets of admission will be required and all students as well as the general public are cordially invited to attend. A free-will offering will be taken in the hope that the expenses will be covered.

In addition to the 15 choral numbers in the work there are also nine solos and duets. To perform these numbers five Southwestern alumni have been invited to return to the campus, augmented by a single guest. Two of these were soloists when the Singers and Orchestra presented the Mass ten years ago at the Idlewild Presbyterian Church. They are Margaret Marshall Crutcher, '49 and Dorothea Bond, '50, both sopranos. The other soloists will be Marie Norment, former and present special student, William Akins, '51 and Billy Jon Woods, '57, tenor and bass respectively, and Lucille David, contralto of the faculty of the George Peabody College for Teachers in Nashville.

For this event the Southwestern Orchestra will also be augmented by a few players from the Memphis Sinfonietta, some of whom will assume the important instrumental obligato parts called for. These solo roles include two violin solos by Professor Derry (Continued on Page 3)

About Campus

by Bette Baumgarten

Dedicated this week to Pem Kremer, who after years of long duress, will never have to brave registration again.

"Into the mouth of death
Into the jaws of Hell
Rode the six-hundred!"

What better way to describe the fates of those who are now participating in the orgies of pre-registration? Oh, my sainted aunt! Have you been in that mad-house? First of all, after you've crossed the Styx to find your Faculty Advisor, you have to go through that regrettable jumble known as a Catalog to find all the courses that aren't being offered this year. Then comes the green sheet with classes on Monday-Wednesday or Wednesday-Monday, whichever you prefer. (I suppose you take them on Wednesday, but in case they don't meet on Wednesday you take them on Monday — a good sample of that Irish logic Dr. Wenger was talking of earlier this year.) I shall skip the procedure—and language — employed to fathom the green sheet and go on to the Sacred Room of the Classification Committee. All who enter are automatically damned.

Herein reside those nebulous and fearful souls that Approve The Schedule. They are seated in out-of-the-way corners and under tables and on chandeliers in order to be highly inaccessible. Their leader, the Rt. Hon. Paunchy P. is stationed half-way in a door (to make passage next to impossible) with a wad of legal-looking papers in his hand. Beware of him; he is evil. Once a student summons up enough courage to enter the door, he grasps his limp schedule in a shaking hand and begins to thread his way through the ever-increasing masses. (Alas, my countenance pales as I try to write this.) He finally finds a vacant chair-arm and manages to perch upon it. All around him are the forces of evil. He is in Chapel Perilous. The dragon awaits.

If he is of above-average courage and/or presence of mind, he will attempt some chat with the doomed ones about him. However, he isn't likely to get much response as most are scared or worried witless. Perhaps they realize the gravity of the situation better than he. "The loud laugh bespeaks the empty mind," you know.

Hours pass; the schedule grows limper, the ink begins to blur. All around him students are thrashing, weeping, screaming, madly thumbing the Catalog, and vainly attempting to gain the lair of one of the Approvers. And the Approvers, with gleeful malice cavort just out of the clutches of their future victims. Dante's Fourth Circle couldn't have been more terrifying.

Finally our hero spies an unwary Approver momentarily at rest. Hero careens madly over his classmates, gouging, kicking, stabbing — this sort of thing brings out the beast in one) and slumps into a chair.

"Here's my schedule, sir."
"Hmmp. Harff! Arrgh!"
Silence while the Approver runs a claw over each letter.

"Young man, you know good and well you can't take six subjects! Arrgh! Garff!"

"But, sir..."
"Growl! RRRoar! Go get a petition!"

The student, visibly shaken, staggers to his feet, passes a wet hand over his brow and begins his search for the Grail.

All manner of papers lie scattered about the Sacred Room. Long papers, short papers, blue papers, green papers, clean papers, dirty papers — which is the Holy Petition? Our hero (a staunch lad) throws himself into their midst and tries vainly to come up with one.

Organization is of no avail. It has been planned this way. Fortunately our student isn't a Calvinist or he would have given up by now, deciding he was simply of the Non-Elect. However, he bares onward and finally unearths a grastly piece of paper headed Petition. The Holy of Holies is found!

From here in it's a winning game. All the pre-ordained hurdles have been met and crossed. He recorners the Awful Approver, gets his illegible scribble and rushes to the Evil One at the door.

All papers pass into the Evil One's hand. Our hero stands shuddering a moment while they are eyed ominously. Then the Evil One fixes him with a stare and utters: "So you finished, eh? Grroar! Next time we'll bleed you dead before we let you go! Git!"

And so our hero passes out into the quiet solace of the Hall. He goes limp over the fountain and makes sweet moan. All is accomplished. Christian has completed his Progress.

Before I go let me urge you to

Your Student Council

by Carolyn Shettlesworth

At the meeting of your Student Council Tuesday night, a delegate and an alternate to the Southern Student Human Relations Seminar were elected, and revisions were made in the Student Council Handbook.

SSHRS will be held from August 1 through September at Illinois. The delegate will also be able to attend the NSA Congress, which meets at the same place, from August 20 through September 3. Lynn Finch is Southwestern's delegate; Bill Davidson is alternate.

The Student Council changed the activity points of the "S" Club president to 15 and those of cheerleaders to 15. It also removed all points from the Chairman of the Intramural Board. Several minor changes were also made.

There will also be judo matches the same week-end. The "S" Club met Thursday night to elect officers. Plans are being made to re-enact the Student Athletic Committee, chiefly to co-ordinate athletic events and the social calendar.

WUB will hold its first meeting next week, after all its members have been elected. It and the Sanhedrin will meet Friday afternoon at 4:00 to judge cheerleader try-outs.

Bette Baumgarten has been appointed head of the publicity committee for the coming year. Allen Reynolds had the WMPS program Wednesday night on the new Student Council; Jim Webb will have the one Wednesday; it will be on the TIAC Track Meet and the judo matches.

The training session for Seminar leaders was held at 6:00 Thursday night in the AEC. It was on Oedipus Rex and Queener's "How to Study;" and was led by Granville Davis and Kinney.

Allen Reynolds appointed the heads of the various committees. Bill Davidson is in charge of the ID cards. Lynn Finch will be responsible for question time. Jerry Duncan is the Intra-City Student Council co-ordinator. Ed Albright has been appointed chairman of the Student Center Committee. Ann Myers will be chairman of the Student Library Committee. 'Russian Journey' Illustrates Realistic View Of Soviets

by Robert Bloomer

When Mr. Douglas, the author of the now popular "Russian Journey," was beginning his trip into Russia, he had grave misgivings as to what the people and their government would be like. He had the idea as most of us do that Russians are mad scientists plotting to blow up the world and that members of the secret police lurk behind every tree.

New officers have also been announced by Alpha Tau Omega. They are Ronnie Holland, Worthy Master; Jim Pitts, Worthy Chaplain; John Alford, Worthy Keeper of Exchequer; Harvey Jenkins, Worthy Scribe; Birt Waite, Worthy Keeper of Annals; Bert Tuggle, Worthy Usher; and Bill Browder, Worthy Sentinel.

Monday night the Chi Omegas entertained members of Kappa Sigma with a dessert. The KD's entertained the Pikes with dessert, and the SAE's were invited to the AOPi house. Tuesday night a scholarship dinner was held at the Kappa Delta house. New initiates feted

Mr. Douglas' ideas were thoroughly changed when he began to find that Russians are very much like people in the United States. They are progressive, friendly, curious about the United States and, for the most part, are very poorly informed about this country. Russian people do not want war. They know that in another peaceful decade, they will have raised their standard of living to that of Western Europe.

The author brings out many interesting points concerning Russia's collective farms, her way of handling large industries.

The main idea that Mr. Douglas puts forth in his book is that we have no need to fear the Russian people themselves, but their leaders. The Russian people are too much like us for us to fear them.

Russian Journey is a book which should be read for insight on a subject that is relatively unknown to us. It is highly recommended as a very readable book on a subject that is going to affect us very much in the near future.

Tonight the Sigma Nu's are having an open house from 6:00-8:00 p.m. to present their new officers who were announced last week. The new fraternity sweetheart will also be announced. Immediately following, the Quartet-Sextet Sing will be held at 8:30 in Hardie. Each sorority and fraternity has entered selections, and trophies will be presented to the winners in each division.

Dear Ones, since the time when I must leave off you all for better (I hope) things, I feel nothing short of obligated to present the Annual Tennessee Awards for those who have earned them. In a word, I am now going to give column space to my favorite people.

First off—The Jawbone of an Ast to James Page, who being a Timmet, steeps frequently in the grass.

Next—A dead rich Aunt to Bob Watson, who needs the money.

After That—to Ross Pritchard, rising politico, a life-sized portrait of the late Theodore Bilbo.

And then—Wings and harps to Professors A. T. Johnson and J. H. Davis, who belong at the right hand of God.

Continuing — A Sad Guitar to Ralph Gore, who is widely reputed to be A Beast.

Next—A big kick in the pants to those females who wear tennis shoes with dresses—may be Ivy, but it looks horrible. Mrs. Winston Guest would cringe at the sight.

Finally—A brandy snifter full of Hennessey to Tennessee, who needs one after two ghastly years writing

Dr. Tuthill Concludes Last Year Of Distinguished Service to SW

by Susie Bracewell

Music majors as well as the rest of Southwestern's student body and faculty look on the retirement of Dr. Burnet Tuthill with regret. For not only has he served since 1935 as their distinguished director of Southwestern's college of music, but he has also served as their director, teacher, advisor and friend.

He was born in New York City, the son of the architect who designed Carnegie Hall, and received his A.B. and M.A. from Columbia University. He worked for several years in various businesses before realizing that music must be his profession. After making this decision, Dr. Tuthill attended the College of Music of Cincinnati where he received his Master of Music degree. He then moved to Memphis as director of music at Southwestern.

Recognized nationally as an outstanding musician and educator, Burnet Tuthill was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of music by the Chicago Musical College. In 1919 he founded the Society for the Publication of American Music and still serves as its vice president. Dr. Tuthill also called the first meeting of the National Association of Schools of Music and will become the Association's secretary emeritus at the same time he becomes professor emeritus here at Southwestern.

Now a well known and widely recognized composer and conductor, he began his real activity as a composer in 1932. His compositions now number over 50 and have been performed by outstanding symphonies throughout the country. Several of his works are used by the bands of the U. S. Marine Corps. His music has won awards from the Guild of American Composers, and he won the Columbia University prize in 1949.

Here in Memphis he has been extremely active in music circles. Dr. Tuthill organized the Memphis Symphony Orchestra in 1939 and had to resign in '46 because more concerts were requested than he felt there was time to prepare for properly.

Looking back on his career at Southwestern, he finds many memorable experiences, chief among which are many occasions with the Southwestern Singers, which he has found utterly thrilling and satisfying. He was touched by the fact that his colleagues on the faculty made him an honorary Phi Beta Kappa last June. And Dr. Tuthill is also looking forward to the Sunday performance of the Bach B minor mass as a highlight in his musical experience.

"Papa Tut" says that he is not going to retire and doesn't want to retire and he can't afford to retire. His new job will be with the Memphis Office of Waddell and Reed, an investment firm. He says he is doubly happy about the job, not only because they sought him and he didn't have to seek them, but because he is extremely interested in the work.

Although Dr. Tuthill will soon no longer be active in all his present positions here at Southwestern, his influence will remain active and impressive to the students who have admired Dr. Tuthill and his devotion to music.

Golfers Win 3 of 4, Presently in Athens

It was barely a month ago that the statement I predict a winning season—W. R. Maybry appeared scrawled and encircled at the bottom of this reporter's notes, which had been returned by the outspokenly-confident athletic director of this college.

This year's edition of the Lynx' golf team—that's what he was referring to—didn't let him down, as it won three of its last four matches to close out the regular season with an 8-6 record, one of the best marks the golf team has posted in recent years.

Presently the team is in Athens, Georgia, competing in the Southern Intercollegiate Tournament. In the wind-up this year, the linksters journey to Chattanooga, where they play in the TIAC tourney May 8-9.

The big standout in Southwestern golf this year—as last year—has been sophomore captain Stuart Thames, who has held the team's coveted number one position unchallenged for the whole season.

Joan Warren is editor of The Sou'wester, editor of Stylus, president of Pi Intersorority, a Lynx beauty, and president of Kappa Delta sorority.

Jocelyn Agnew of Atlanta is this year's Torch outstanding sophomore. She is managing editor of The Sou'wester, a member of Stylus, historian of Kappa Delta, and a student counselor for two years.

Landers Leads SW Over Arkansas St.

The Lynx baseball team saw a lot of action this past week but, unfortunately, was able to muster only one victory in the four games they engaged in. Southwestern again takes to the diamond for a series with Arkansas College today and tomorrow on the SW campus and journeys to Jonesboro, Arkansas, to meet Arkansas State Monday.

The next home contests find the Lynx in a two-game home stand defending against an invading Mississippi College aggregation in contests next Friday and Saturday.

Lynx Down State

The busy week opened with Southwestern edging Arkansas State 9-8 on the Lynx diamond last Friday afternoon. A one-out double by Red McMillion chased Bob MacQueen, who had singled, home with the winning tally in the bottom of the 10th inning. Jack Rookett, who started on the hill for Southwestern, was followed to the mound by Bob Mansfield and then Billy Landers, who notched the victory.

Bow to MSU

The next afternoon found the "nine" playing host to the Tigers from Memphis State in a double header. State, seeking to avenge its two losses at the hands of the Lynx last year, did just that in swinging both ends of the twin-bill by scores of 13-5 and 21-7.

The one bright spot of the disastrous day was the continued phenomenal hitting of Landers. He slashed out five hits in eight trips to the plate and drove across two runs. Landers is now pushing his batting average toward the .600 mark.

Monday afternoon the ball club journeyed to Jackson, Mississippi, and again ran into trouble as they dropped their game to Millsaps College by a 10-1 count.

With 14 games now behind them, the Southwestern season record stands at 4 and 10.

BILL LANDERS has been the man the occasion demanded as far as Southwestern baseball this spring has been concerned. Landers' bat has been blasting past the .500 mark, and his pitching just recently earned him the recent 9-8 victory over Arkansas State.

handling the opposition's "big man"—a chore he has handled very aptly all season, while helping out immeasurably in the all-important low-ball competition.

The squad's last three wins strictly came the hard way. The Lynx garnered two of these when they posted a double win in a three-way match with Union and Florence State at Colonial Country Club, April 20.

Lynx Split Finale

The other win came in the regular season finale as Southwestern edged Lambuth 8½-7½ while losing to Southeast Missouri, 13-7. This match, on the 24th, was another three-way affair at Memphis' own CCC.

The special significance due these last three victories, and the double victory in particular, stems from the fact the team was forced to concentrate on two opponents at once. In these triple-team matches, each man plays two matches simultaneously—thus each shot counts twice as much and carries with it twice as much pressure.

Hinders Rallies

As a result, when a player is behind in one match and must "gamble" somewhat in an attempt to catch up, he is almost always prevented from doing so, as he could very easily jeopardize his chances with the other opponent.

All in all, three-way matches are extra grueling, and the Lynx golfers rate special recognition for their performances in these affairs, not to mention the recognition due them for their greatly successful season.

S'western Hosts TIAC Affair; SW To Compete For Last Time

Southwestern at Memphis will throw all the gates open next week end as hosts of the Tennessee Intercollegiate Athletic Conference track meet held here May 8-9.

INTRAMURALS

The badminton tournament is going into its third week with matches being played very slowly. Intramural representatives are requested to encourage their entrants to play matches as soon as possible.

The bowling league has not proved too successful. Three fraternities—ATO, KA, and KS—feared out of the league. The Independents are undefeated and stand a good chance of winning.

Next week on Tuesday, May 5, and Friday, May 8, the intramural golf tournament will be held. Each organization will enter a 6-man team with the matches being played at Overton Park golf course. The lowest team score on 36 holes will cop the team trophy. Individual trophies will be awarded to the winner and runner-up.

Also all organizations should begin considering their entries in the Intramural Track Meet to be held May 12. Further details will be given later.

This meet will mark the last time the Lynx cindermen take to the track this year, and boy is it going to be a whopper of an affair! More than a dozen Tennessee colleges and universities will participate in this two-day festival, which will pit some of the top performers in the South against one another.

MSU Favorite

Cross-town rival Memphis State is expected to repeat as champion, but the Lynxcats have hopes of being right on the Tigers' tail. The Southwestern thinclads seem to be headed for the best showing of the year, as all of the runners are cutting their times shorter each day of practice.

Weightmen and jumpers also are shaping up in fine style and should be ready to haul in the points.

At the Conference meet last week in Clinton, Mississippi, signs of things to come were unveiled. Wes Eusbee grabbed two victories and one third in the weight division. Momo Waller pulled a first in the high jump, and Tommy Clinton dashed to second place in both the 100- and 220-yard distances.

Butt To Be Ready

Though the Lynx' very vocal manager, John Butt, sounded a few flat notes last week, he promises to be in his best voice for this upcoming event.

Preliminaries will be Friday afternoon, and finals Saturday morning and afternoon. A word to the wise: come out and see the 1959 TIAC!
