Treat Promised For Drama Lovers

Stylus Announces Casting Of Play

Stylus Club, Southwestern's literary organization, will offer the students and faculty of the college a somewhat novel entertainment in the form of "An Evening of Shakespeare," to be presented in Hardie Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. on Wednesday, April 28. Admission will be forty cents, and tickets are now on sale in the cloister.

Not a farcical production, but a serious attempt to provide representative selections from the author's works and to make them "live" for the modern audience, appropriate scenes have been chosen that are considered as best depicting the many facets of Shakespeare's creative genius.

The scenes will be presented in representative modern dress, and any outmoded Elizabeth phraseology or wording has been either rewritten or cut out entirely for the sake of a full understanding of meaning.

The cast is as follows:

Henry V:

Prologue, and King Henry the fifth of England—William Hatchett.

Earl of Westmoreland—Richard Wood.

Earl of Salisbury—Bruce Lowry.
Duke of Bedford—William Marsh.

Montjoy, a French herald—James Schmidt.

A Midsummer Night's Dream:
Theseus, Duke of Athens—Richard Wood.

Lysander, his friend—William Marsh.

Peter Quince, a carpenter; "Prologue" and "Lion" in the playlet—Bruce Lowry.

Nick Bottom, a weaver; "Pyramus" in the same—Morton Kivel.

Francis Flute, a bellows-mender; "Thisby" in the same—James Schmidt.

Tom Snout, a tinker; "Wall" in the same—James Roper.

Robin Starveling, a tailor; "Moonshine" in the same—William Hatchett.

Hamlet:

Claudius, King of Denmark—William Marsh.

Gertrude, his queen and Hamlet's mother—Helen DeBerry.

Horatio, close friend of Hamlet—Richard Wood.

Laertes, son of the dead Lord Chamberlain—Bruce Lowry.

Hamlet, Prince of Denmark—William Hatchett.

Osric, court fop and fencing referee—James Schmidt.

Directed by Helen DeBerry and William Hatchett.

Technical Advice—Dr. Charles L. Townsend.

Bryant Elected

The election for President and Vice President of the Honor Council was held April 16 and 17 following the chapel exercises. The Council nominated Margaret Loring-Clark and Russell Bryant for President. After a count of the student ballots, Russell Bryant was named as President and Dusty Anderson as Vice President for the year 1948-49.

The election of the remaining eleven members of the Council will be held the first week in May.

Summer Session News Announced

Registration for the first six-weeks term of the Summer Session will be conducted Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, April 21-23, in the Registrar's office. Fees may be paid at the time of registration or later, but if they are paid before June 7, the student need not report until Tuesday, June 8, the day on which classes actually begin. It is most important that all prospective summer session students now attending Southwestern make their registration during those three days, because courses for which there has been little demand can then be dropped from the schedule.

If a student has any doubt as to his eligibility for the courses he expects to register for, he should consult his major professor or faculty advisor in advance. Bible 51-52 is not open to students whose total semester hours at the close of the present semester are less than 86, except on written permission of Dr. Kinney.

Independents To Organize

The independent men held a mass meeting yesterday morning at 8:30 a.m. The meeting was called to act on a resolution calling for an organization which would serve the needs of the non-fraternity men. The resolution, presented by Bill Marsh and George Chauncey, read as follows:

"Resolved that the independent men of the student body need an organization under which they may participate in extra-curricular activities, and which may represent them individually or as a group before the agencies of the student government."

Several reasons for having such an organization were brought to the attention of the men. It was pointed out, for example, that the independent men are now participating in intra-mural sports without the backing of an overall organization. An important point noted was that there are no representatives of independent men as an organized group, participating in any agency of the student government. Likewise, there are at present no provisions for social activities originating with independent men. It was also called to the attention of the men that there is no agency through which projects relative to the needs or desires of independent men may originate.

There was a brief discussion and tentative plans were made for the near future.

Shaw's Pygmalion To Be Presented

Spring Elections Coming Off

Spring elections will be held in the bookstore Friday, April 30th from nine in the morning until two in the afternoon. Run-offs will be held the following day. A list of possible infractions of the election procedure will be given to the student body before elections. Infringement of these means a trial with penalties. Needless to mention, it is urged that all turn in a vote, and remember, vote wisely.

Candidates running for the positions open in the Spring elections were chosen through the convention system. The first convention was held on Monday afternoon at 1:30 and was called the RED convention. The following day the Black convention was held.

Those candidates not selected by the conventions may run if they can get 150 names on a petition for offices other than class presidents. In order to run for a class presidency 40 names are necessary. Petitions must be in by Friday noon.

Shhhh--

To the Student Body:

The attention of the Student Council has been called to the noise and conversation of students in the reading room of the library. All of us realize that this has existed for some time and no steps have been taken to remedy the condition.

When the plan of the college is analyzed you will realize that this is the only place for town students to study at the college. Upon entering most libraries the feeling of silence seems to prevail the atmosphere. Such is not the case at Southwestern. Perhaps a great portion of this may be attributed to the fact that the physical structure of the library does not lend itself to such an atmosphere.

To this point, we all agree. But until we have a new library we must use the facilities available in the fairest and most advantageous way.

After considering the matter the Student Council would like to suggest that students take it upon themselves to eliminate all conversation in the reading room. This should not be left to a monitor employed by the college.

If you desire to study with someone leave the library; the reading room is for individual study. A group of two or three does not have the privilege of disturbing the study of other students there.

We would also suggest that students take the task upon themselves of requesting others to stop talking or other disturbances in the reading room.

Of course the perfect solution to this problem is for each to show proper consideration for his fellow students and not to create a disturbance in the library himself.

Any other suggestions to remedy the situation will be appreciated.

Sincerely,
The Student Council

Clever Comedy For Spring Play

Kappa Iota chapter of Alpha Psi Omega announces the forthcoming production of its Spring play, The Women Have Their Way, which will be presented in Hardie Auditorium on the evening of Friday, April 30th.

The Women Have Their Way is a cleverly wrought adaptation of the delightful two-act comedy, Puebla de las Mujeres, by the celebrated contemporary Spanish playwrights Serafin and Joaquin Alvarez Quintero. "Los hermanos Quinteros" stand in the first rank of modern dramatists and for more than a half century have been deservedly famous among play-going audiences of Spain and Latin America for their subtly humorous portrayals of Spanish life.

Briefly the play's story concerns a young Madrid lawyer, who comes to visit a little Andalusian town with his only thought to do his business, make himself generally agreeable, and be off again. But the ladies of the town, who seem to dominate its activities, will have it that he has fallen in love with a pretty girl among them. The lawyer protests, the young lady modestly scoffs at the notion but . . . The Women Have Their Way!

The cast of the play as announced by Prof. George Totten, Kappa Iota faculty advisor and dramatic coach, is as follows:

Juanita La Rose, Jane Phelps; Santita, Ann Brown; Dona Belen, Margaret Hardwick; Angela, Virginia Mulder; Pilar, Emily Shaw; Dieguilla, Nancy Traicoff; Adolfo, Jim Davis; Don Julian, Bill Snyder; Don Cecelio, Gene Schaeffer; Pepe Lorra, Bob Edgington; Guitarra, Walter Haun.

Curtain time will be at 8:30 p.m.; price of admission, 50 cents.

WORLD GROUP FORMS HERE

DEBATERS SPONSOR WORLD FEDERALISTS

United World Federalists, sponsored by the Debating Club as a result of debates on World Federal Government, passed the Faculty Committee Monday, April 12. The Organizational committee met in the SAE House Sunday, April 18, to plan organization of the chapter. The Organization Committee was composed of Denby Brandon, chairman, Bill Rawlins, George Chauncey, Cyril Pipkin, Faye Tynes, Ann Brown, Bill Riley, Dusty Anderson, and Prof. Robert Roussey. They decided to sponsor a panel discussion for all interested students on the Presidential candidates and their platforms and possibilities, to be held today, April 22, at 4:15 p.m. in 100 Palmer. Dr. Amacker will take the Democratic, Brigadier General W. A. Danielson, the Republican, and David Johnson, the Wallace viewpoints. This will be a sample of the type of thing VFW will sponsor on the campus.

The United World Federalists will hold an official organizational meeting Thursday, April 29 at 7:30 in Dr. Totten's office for the election of officers, and the appointment of membership, constitutional, and program committees. All interested students are cordially invited.

The petition to the Administrative Committee contained the following statements:

"The purpose of a chapter of UWF on this campus would be to present the idea of world government to the students. Through forums and open discussions Southwestern students would be exposed to the plan and they will be able to exert an influence when the matter is eventually presented to the public for their consideration. . .

"The group will answer a need on our campus for the presentation of international relations problems to the student body. Neither the Nitist Club nor the Christian Union Forum adheres strictly to this activity, and international relations is a neglected area for far too many students."

Quartet To Play Beethoven Opus

Southwestern will present the Kroll String Quartet in a concert at Hardie Auditorium on the campus on Monday evening, April 26th at 8:15 in the evening. This group has recently become famous in the field of chamber music and has been heard in all parts of the United States.

an outstanding program has been chosen to be played by the group. The opening number will be the Beethoven Quartet in E flat major, Opus 74, one of the great quartets of this master. This will be followed by a new work by Ross Lee Finney of the faculty of Smith College. The program will close with the Ravel Quartet, one of the two works for strings in the impressionistic style which have become a standard part of the chamber music repertory.

The Bach B-Minor Mass

(To Dr. Tuthill and the Singers)

Full-throat thrust against eternity we lifted tall among far moon-ringed echoes rising toward mist-looming ceilings in our minds' high naves. Time hung still in blue-lit caverns where clear fluted waves of sound flowed funereal, dying through to realms where no death is.
Stars move and spin, earths whirl away in blurred roar of flames, but ever in the minds' choir-lofts
the silent sifting dust-motes, singing, sing God's Name.

The Honor System

It may be safely assumed, we believe, that Southwestern students have passed beyond the grammar-school phase of regarding the faculty and administration as a conspiracy organized for the express purpose of humiliating and hampering those whom an evil fate has placed under their tutelage. If, then, we impute some show of honest motive and human sympathy to the actions of these worthies, and promote them in our estimation to the rank of being only hidebound and weakminded, we surely may indulge our new maturity to the extent of examining calmly the quaint mental processes on their part which have produced such foibles as the Honor System.

Honor is an almost extinct bit of metaphysics in our age, an idealistic plant whose roots find little nourishment in the bleak soil of cynical materialism. We might define it as a faith in some code or other, a faith so perfect that a lapse from its principles represents the total loss of all is significant in life, whether it be Christian ethics, knightly vows, or stern Roman virtues. It is the courage of conviction, the base of integrity on which ideals may be raised. And, like all idealisms, it rests on the underlying idea of the dignity and responsibility of man as a being. Of late, Right and Wrong have been obscured by the Determinist, who says, "It's not really Wrong,—just the result of bad environment"; by the Pragmatist, who says, "It's not really Wrong,—if it leads to profit or success"; and by the cheap type of Romanticist who says, "It's not really Wrong, because you feel sorry for the poor cheating underdog, who is in the minority and hence a dramatic case,—and besides, being Right is pretty dull stuff anyway". Honor can be successfully defended only by those who believe in the ultimate power of the human spirit to conquer environment, to aim higher than material success, and to be responsible for its actions. It is hard to see how those who do not possess this belief may be expected to participate in a system built on honor. It was the assumption on the part of the college that such a belief was prevalent among its students which caused the adoption of the honor plan.

There were two alternatives to the existing plan. The first, hardly worth mentioning, would be to have a specially delegated group of students appointed to spy on the others, a method guaranteed to shatter morale and lead to mutual contempt and meanness of spirit.

The second alternative would be to have no system of control, and to expect each cribber to hasten to the authorities with a full report of his cheating activities, with no other impulsion than his own conscience which he has already extinguished in order to cheat in the first place. We can not shrug off this arrangement with the remark that the cheater is harming no one but himself. Southwestern, like any other college, in order to justify its existence and purpose, places its own integrity squarely behind each graduate by asserting to the public that the student has measured up to its educational standards. If it permits, in effect, each student to write his own diploma, without making any effort to guarantee the reality of the education which it vouches for, it not only is helping to undermine the general standards of education, but is an accomplice in any damage resulting from defective learning in the later professional life of the student, and is inviting public cynicism and contempt.

If, then, some method of check is vital, the only fair way to distribute the responsibility is in proportion to the benefit, by dividing it equally among all the students, matching each inalienable right with its inalienable duty, as is the way of the world. This was the method adopted.

However, there are, it appears, students who are not fully convinced of the obligation to report those whom they observe cheating. This is admittedly the unpleasant cost of a liberal plan. Resentments seem to arise principally from three causes: simple cowardly desire to avoid the disagreeable; a mistaken association with other codes involving generosity of spirit; or from undue magnifying of the possibility for abuses which is inherent in any system with which human nature is involved. Let us examine a few typical reactions:

"I won't 'rat'." "Ratting" bears the connotation of betrayal, or treachery. With it we associate, doubtless, remnants of reactions left over from childhood aversion to "tattlers", a perfectly natural aversion when the "tattler" usually had personal and private motives, frank ideas of retaliation, and no sense of objective justice. Or, perhaps, we have in mind the gangster who "squeals", and who is understandably hated by his fellow criminals, the squealees. Such an informer has previously entered into an agreement, implied or otherwise, to conduct himself according to the criminal standard, and has been admitted to the confidence of his colleagues on this basis. When he "rats", he is abusing this confidence, however undesirable its purposes, and he arouses quite logical resentment even among such outlaws as may be unaffected. By enrolling at Southwestern no student enters into an agreement with his fellow students to countenance their wrongdoing. On the contrary, he enters into an explicit agreement to discourage both his own and theirs, and it is the subsequent cheater himself who is the betrayer of this code and of his associates. We do not think of it as "ratting" when we appear as witnesses in court against a breaker of the laws of society. The parallel is essentially the same—the protection of a common good by the voluntary discouraging of that which would destroy it.

"I don't want anybody snooping on ME!" Neither does Southwestern. The last thing the college wants is a student body actively devoted to piling up a high score of suspects. The student who is giving his full attention to his own examination is the least likely to observe irregularities by others, and it is this type of student which is the ideal of any college. The person who regards such a painful duty as a source of pleasure or of social advancement has as little place in college as the cheater himself. On the other hand, when cheating appears unlooked-for, the issue is squarely in our laps. There is no compromise between Right and Wrong. Here we do not have even the salve of uncertainty for our consciences; there is little disagreement about the wrongness of cheating. Where we do not condemn, we aid and abet; there are no innocent bystanders. To be passive is to be actively destructive and to participate in the affair on the side of the wrongdoer.

So, if we examine the matter logically and externally, any rational objection to the present honor plan is difficult to unearth, and those which we do offer seem to arise from the surrender to an indiscriminate overflow of human sympathy, or from accepting pragmatic standards of trying to get along with everybody at all costs. Emerson said, "A man never lost a friend for truth but what he found a better."

It is the search for freedom without responsibility which has caused most of the confusion and conflict of our civilization. Nearly all men are agreed on the great aims of universal justice and peace, and things begin to grow complicated only when we come to the problem of who shall be the first voluntarily to give up some minor advantage of race, creed, or property with which circumstance has endowed him and to which his own knowledge of justice tells him he is not entitled. The attitude toward the honor system is but a reduction in scale of this problem. We may rationalize our wish to escape the cold demands of metaphysics by attacking obvious possible abuses, but the weight of reason still presses upon us, when we have finished. Accepting the burden is a higher kind of honor, the kind, perhaps, that Shakespeare had in mind when he described a worthy gentleman with high praise by saying:

"... His honour,
Clock to itself, knew the true minute when
Exception bade him speak, and at this time
His tongue obeyed his hand."

The Missing Lynx

This week we hail Professor Wenger as 1948's first and foremost pioneer in the annual "back to nature" movement, a student drive which meets with only slight success each year. The cloak of tradition and the shackles of convention still tightly bind our professorial priests to their hot and stuffy B.V.D.s and their sultry classrooms. Professor Wenger very kindly succumbed to the wishes of his Spanish 22 class and conducted the Saturday session out under the spreading oaks of the Quadrangle. He also succumbed because James Jeffery and Bob Amis were twisting his arms behind him.

There was a mad scurry for the new metal benches that have lately appeared so conveniently about the campus lawns. Disregarding any clandestine, early-morning love affairs that were in progress upon the benches, members of the class came careening back to the Quadrangle with a sufficient number of the seats to accommodate the north Memphis population. After a preliminary fist fight between Gene Shaeffer and Louis Agnew over who would sit next to Patsy Flippen, the class began.

The translation of the lesson was progressing nicely when the first acorn fell. It plummeted down and landed with a nice melon-ripe plunk on the skull of John Williford. Seconds later another acorn neatly clove a ridge down the back of Bob Edington's neck. A third gently smashed through the incisors and first molar of Hugh Buckingham. We cast our eyes aloft and saw a row of squirrels rolling on their backs in glee along the branches above us.

With some difficulty the class returned to the lesson. Professor Wenger crossed his legs and showed six inches more of his yellow socks. The girls promptly forgot the squirrels and the Spanish lesson as well. Sonny Connell busied himself by buttoning Craft Dewey's suspenders to the bottom of the metal bench. Alan Babin produced a small hot tamale wagon and carried on a busy trade on the outer fringe of the crowd. Professor Quinn, mounted on a fleet unicycle, pedaled briskly round and round the class making candid shots with her new bi-focal Brownie. Ken Mills followed hard at her heels in a pocket sized taxi developing prints in sepia, oyster white, rain-blur, and blackout motifs. Miss Betty Belk went puttering by on a motorcycle carrying Mrs. India Rutland on the handlebars.

Somewhere between the past participle of haber and the third person preterit of vivir three small furry bodies splattered down in our midst. The class disintegrated into a howling mass of screeches, screams, caterwauling, and catastrophe. The three squirrels bounced and rolled to a stop in the center of the group while the class disappeared in a swirl of petticoats and pantaloons beneath the benches. Clarence Camferdam whipped out a saber and charged across the campus shouting: "We're attacked, by eus! The enemy is at the gates! Charge!"

"Weak branch," the three squirrels said to Professor Wenger, who sat swinging his yellow socks seductively. The squirrels scampered off singing: "Hablamos espanol tambien, yo ho! Hablamos espanol tambien, whoops!"

Ole Miss Overpowers Lynx In Hard-Fought Meet

We Wuz Robbed

George Bugbee Jr. Ole Miss soundly trounced Southwestern in a dual meet last Saturday 100-1/3 to 33-2/3. The wide margin came as a surprise to Southwestern track fans as the Lynx were expected to take many of the running events. They all went to the Rebels, however, who captured all but two of the first place honors in the meet.

Billy Brazelton hurled his javelin 167 feet and 10 inches to win with Ken Farragut of Ole Miss finishing second. Yours truly nosed out "Hairline" Harper of the Rebs for first place in the broad jump.

Frank Boswell, who was expected to cop the 100 yard dash for Southwestern, had just finished running second in the torrid 440 and was not rested in time for the sprint. Frank still managed to take second in the 220 to pile up a total of 6 points.

Southwestern did little placing in the field events. Besides the aforementioned first places there were only two other field events scored in by the Lynx. Allen Smith pole vaulted to third place honors and Jack Hall and Bill Coley tied for third in the high jump.

In running events we had to be content with seconds and thirds.

Boswell, as already mentioned took two second places and Harold Barnett placed a sizzling second in the 880. Millan Darnell took a close third in the mile run while Charles Landrum did the same in the 2 mile, Les Crain and Glenn Swingle took thirds in the 120 high jump and 220 low hurdles respectively. Bubba Bowden finished a good third in the quarter-mile run.

Southwestern piled up an easy 5 points in the mile relay as Ole Miss defaulted to our team composed of Boswell, Barnett, Bowden, and Bick Arnold.

the cooperation of the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress and is given by Southwestern in accordance with its policy of affording an opportunity to Memphis music lovers to hear the great works in the literature of chamber music.

The press of New York, Washington, and Baltimore, the scenes of the Kroll Quartet's greatest activity, has acclaimed their playing in no uncertain terms, characterizing it as of "unfailing musical perceptiveness, flawless instrumental balance and tonal persuasiveness."

Tickets for students and members of the faculty are one dollar and may be obtained from Miss Martin in the Cashier's Office. Admission for the general public is two dollars.

Festival Tomorrow

The members of Stylus will leave tomorrow for Mississippi Delta State Teachers College at Cleveland, Mississippi to attend the Southern Literary Festival.

By providing opportunity for discussion of the art and materials of writing, the Festival hopes to stimulate and encourage interest in creative writing. The program will be varied and will include talks by writers of recognized ability. Speakers already engaged are Roberts Peter Tristram Coffin, Willie Snow Ethridge, Harnett Kane, Hodding Carter, and Dr. Bell I. Wiley. There will be three sessions: morning, afternoon, and evening.

Caudill Is Guest

Dr. Paul Caudill, Pastor of the First Baptist Church here in Memphis, was the guest speaker at the Student Christian Union Forum held Friday, April 16 in the AOPi Lodge. Introduced by Frierson Graves, Dr. Caudill, who is now chairman of Baptist World Relief, composed of ten nations and thirty-one members, spoke on "Europe As I See It."

The speaker was well qualified to discuss conditions as they exist in Europe today, as he has travelled extensively both in Occupied Europe and in the Scandinavian countries. However, he said that any account of an eye witness to conditions on one day would be out of date the next day as Europe, as yet, is so completely unsettled. Dr. Caudill said that many conditions which exist in Europe today as a result of the war will take a very long period of years to remedy.

Profs At Oak Ridge

Professors Peyton N. Rhodes and Benjamin A. Wooten, Jr., of Southwestern's Physics Department, have just returned from Oak Ridge, Tennessee, where they attended the annual meeting of the Southeastern Section of the American Physical Society.

Attending this meeting were representatives of the physics departments of most of the important educational institutions of the South and Southeast, as well as representatives of the Atomic Energy Commission and the Institute of Nuclear Studies. The functions of the Institute have been described recently in a feature article of one of the local papers.

In addition to the addresses presented at the general meetings, some 75 research projects were detailed in contributed papers dealing with various phases of pure and applied physics.

"It is safe to say that each person attending this largest physics meeting ever held in the South was further confirmed in his belief that Oak Ridge is providing and should continue to provide a definite stimulus to scientific activity in our region," Dr. Rhodes said.

WHY... I smoke Chesterfield

(FROM A SERIES OF STATEMENTS BY PROMINENT TOBACCO FARMERS)

"Chesterfield is my brand. I've been smoking them for about 16 years. I like them because they're mild and really satisfy. I know the kind of tobacco that's in them . . . it's the best.

"Chesterfield buys the best grades of tobacco. It's mild, light, ripe, sweet-smoking tobacco. They pay the highest prices for their tobacco. It's top quality leaf."
