Rally Tonight Will Climax Mock Political Campaign

Vote To Be Taken Friday In Lair

Students To Cast Ballots For Chosen "Electors"

Next Friday (October 29) the student body will turn out at the polls to name their choice for the next President of the United States. Balloting will take place between 9:00 and 2:00 in the north end of the Lynx Lair, and the results of the mock election will be available by 3:00.

The polls in the Lynx Lair will be set up exactly as in a national election, complete with "registrars", "judges" and "party poll watchers." There will be a registrar for each class and one for Southwestern's special students, from whom student voters will receive ballots similar to the actual ones used in a presidential election. Only those students who signed the registration books in the Cloister last Friday and Saturday will be allowed to cast votes.

Electors

Ballots for each of the classes will have on them four sets of "electors", chosen from the student body by each party organization, and pledged to one of the four major candidates in the presidential field. To vote, students will place an "x" in the brackets beside the set of electors pledged to the candidate of their choice.

Electoral votes have been allotted to each class on the basis of one for every twenty-five members, giving the seniors five, the juniors seven, the sophomores eight, the freshmen eight, and the special students two. It will require a total of sixteen electoral votes for a candidate to be chosen President.

Roy Acuff

Friday's election will put the finishing touches on a mock campaign which has seen three major party rallies in addition to the mass rally tonight and over a month of heated bull sessions, chapel demonstrations and poster propoganda. Last week the student body turned out to hear Gordon Browning and Estes Kefauver (Democratic nominees for Governor and Senator) and Roy Acuff and Carroll Reece (Republican nominees for the same position). Monday night the campus States Rights Democrats staged a party rally with several speakers from local SRD headquarters.

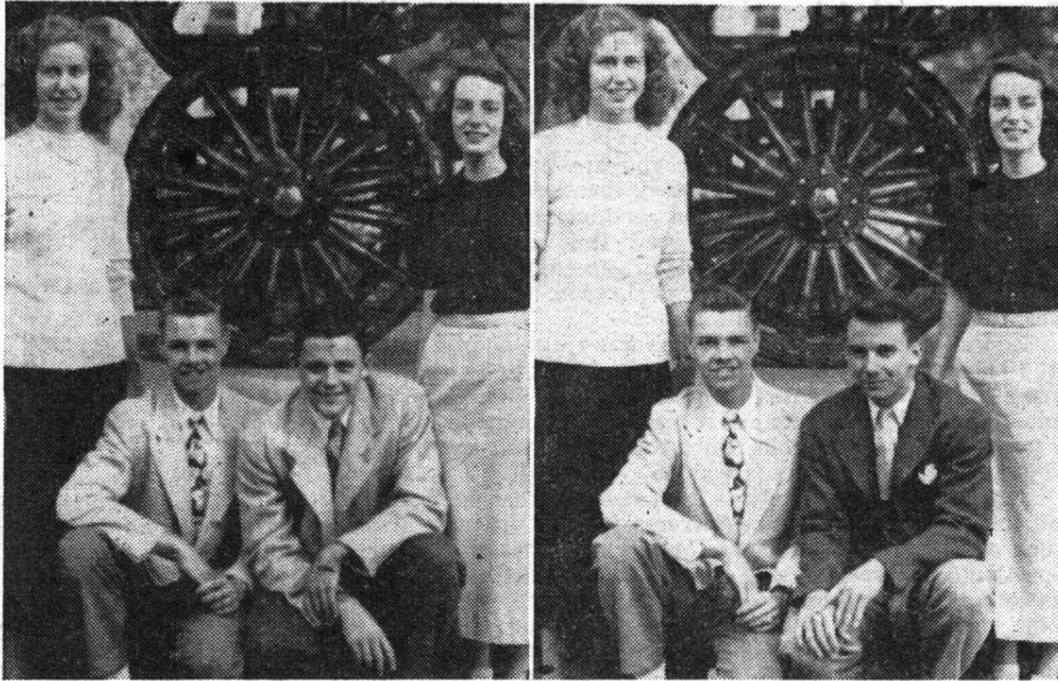

Open House Thursday: Student Body Invited

The Baptist students of Southwestern are having an open house Thursday evening from 6 till 8 at the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity lodge. The purpose of this event is to permit the Baptist students to get acquainted and arrange to attend some Baptist Church while they are attending Southwestern.

There will be entertainment and plenty of refreshments.

The student body is invited.

Another Tie For Vice-President

Perhaps you know by now who is Vice-President, but we didn't so here is the compromise. The Officers are, left to right, Pat Ingram,

The Southwestern Freshman Class chose its officers for the 1948-49 school year in a run-off election after chapel Friday, October 22. Margins of victory were slight for each of the four positions.

Roy Page was elected Class President, defeating Walter Lazenby. Three candidates participated in the run-off for Vice-President in which Lester Graves was eliminated. The second run-off for this office was a tie. The third run-off has not been held at the time of this writing. Norma Keisling defeated Ann Rollow for the position of Secretary and Treasurer, and Pat Ingram was elected Student Council Representative, edging out Anne Marie Caskey.

Walter Lazenby and Martha Beggs were elected as Freshmen Representatives to the Christian Union Cabinet.

Barbarians To Meet Tomorrow Afternoon

All non-affiliated men are urged to be present at a general meeting of the Independent Men this afternoon at four p. m. in the MAN library to read the new constitution and discuss organization. This group, largely inactive in recent years, has re-formed and invites all men who are not affiliated with a social fraternity to attend the meeting this afternoon.

George Chauncey, president of the Independent Men, announces that this is not a substitute for a fraternity. It does not have specified meetings or dues. The purpose of the organization is to look out for the interests of men who do not have a fraternal organization to act through. It gives to these men representation in the various interorganizational

'Man Who Taught Chinese Singing'

Liu Liang-Mo, the Chinese student who spoke in Chapel yesterday, has been called by Time Magazine the "man who taught singing to the Chinese people." On one occasion Liu taught 10,000 Chinese soldiers to sing a marching song in thirty minutes. Liu is being sponsored in this country by the World Student Service.

Yesterday afternoon Liu spoke on the Nationalist Government in China followed by a hot discussion on Chiang Kai Shek. Dusty Anderson, president, was in charge. This was one in a series of international speakers that the Federalists will sponsor this fall.

'Church In Europe' Discussion Topic

Professor Neil Bruce led the Christian Union in a discussion on "The Christian Church in Europe" last Friday at 3:45 in the Tri Delta House. The relationship of the European political problems with the moral problems was emphasized.

The basis of complication in political Europe seems to be divided into four groups, namely:

1. Russia: Marxism is its real religion; there is no future for the church because Marxism can not compromise with the church. The government is in opposition to Christian ideals because it conflicts with Marx's ideals. Thus, the main problems and complications arising out of Russia seems to be (a) balance of power, (b) ideological force, and (c) the present necessity to delimit spheres of influence.

2. Eastern Europe: Here, the Communist and Nationalist groups

All The Aspects Of Real Politics

Students To Gather In Gym At 7:30

Politics goes into high gear here tonight when Southwestern's student body assembles in the Gym at 7:30 to hear a series of high-pressure speeches for the four leading candidates in the current presidential campaign. All the features of a full-scale political rally will be present at this climax of a week-long mock presidential campaign sponsored by the Lynx chapter of the United World Federalists.

Press and Radio Coverage

Radio Station WDLA will do a special transcription and rebroadcast it tomorrow morning (Thursday) between 8:00 and 8:30. Also present will be a battery of press photographers and reporters to add flavor to the mock rally.

Southwestern's band will open an hour-long program with a series of march numbers, and furnish the background music for party demonstrations after each speech. Besides the traditional "Star Spangled Banner", the band will be ready with "Missouri Waltz", "Dixie", "Sidewalks of New York", "California Here I Come", and "Stars and Stripes Forever".

Five Speakers

Irvine (Dusty) Anderson, president of the World Federalists, will preside over the mass rally, and will briefly introduce each of the parties. Speakers for the evening will include Bobby Cobb for the States Righters, Jim Davis and Bill Hatchett for the Republicans, Don Pittman for the Progressive Party, and Virgil Bryant for the Democrats.

Thanks

We would like to take this opportunity to express editorially our appreciation for the boys who knock themselves out each Saturday and receive no support financially, and little morally. Southwestern makes no effort to get football players and is opposed to subsidization. The Lynx Cats play strictly for the love of the sport and their Alma Mater. It is not easy to play four quarters of football without substitutes. Yet that is practically what our boys do.

If the Southwestern fans would show as much enthusiasm for their team as they did for Roy Acuff last week, we would have an A-1 ball club. "The Smoky Mountain Boys" succeeded in making the students "take their hair down." It is too bad they can't do it more often.

Mock Election

The purpose of the entire mock election has been two-fold. First, to acquaint Southwestern students with the platforms and personalities of the four major parties, and second, give them some idea of the machinery of a national election.

The real test of Southwestern's political alertness will come Friday at the actual balloting. We sincerely hope that every one of the five hundred and twenty students who registered last week will turn out to cast a vote for the candidate of their choice.

Don't Be A "Joiner"

There are approximately 43 clubs on the Southwestern Campus. Some of these organizations are worthwhile, but others have no real value so far as we can see. However, the Sou'wester does not wish to criticize these clubs, but rather wishes to offer some information and advice which may be of some benefit to new students.

It is true that clubs have an important function in college life. Indeed, some have said that what we learn outside of class is as important as what we get from text books. This may be an exaggeration, but there is certainly something about a college graduate that sets him apart.

But what we wish to warn against is placing extra-curricular activities above studies. By joining too many clubs a student dissipates his energies and destroys scholarship.

And from the other point of view, a "joiner" is of little use to the organization. He comes to a meeting, joins, pays dues, but contributes little else.

Freshmen, join a club for your major, and perhaps for your minor, but please, PLEASE, hold the number down to three or four.

THE MISSING LYNX

I was standing in front of a large department store one afternoon, holding three petunias, when a stranger came out of the giddy, swirling crowd of metropolitan ne'er-do-wells and told me that his dog was over.

"My dog is over," he said simply, but with a note of intense conviction is his voice.

For one ecstatic moment I nursed the wild, delirious hope that he had said "Rover" instead of "over," but deep within my heart of hearts I knew that such was not to be.

"Pardon?" I queried, more in the spirit of congenial repartee than in anything else.

"Over," he replied. "My dog. Is."

"Why do you mix up your sentence like that?" I wanted desperately to know. "You talk like a Spaniard."

"Because I am a Spaniard," he answered, and from the firm manner in which he said it, together with a snappy little step from the "Tortilla Dance," from the pancake of the same name, which he executed without even reading the death warrant, I knew that it was so.

I was nonplussed. I told him as much, and no more.

"I am nonplussed," I said.

Why bother to tell me what you are not?" he asked severely. "If you happen to be plussed, then by all means say so; but if you are not, then I can certainly conceive of no reason for spreading the news abroad. It is as if you were to go about announcing to the world in general that you were not Edgar Munn. Say, if you must say something on that order, that you are minussed."

He was right, and I knew that he was right, and he knew that I knew that he was right, and I knew that he knew that I knew that he was right. I dropped my eyes in embarrassment. He leapt instantly to assist me in retrieving them. One we found where it had rolled into the gutter, but the other had gone down a grating and was hopelessly lost.

From his kindness toward me I deemed that he was a good fellow, and struck up a conversation. He, in turn, also struck one up. We stood there for a while, striking up our respective conversations, and eventually turned the proceedings into a kind of game, to see which of us could strike his up the longest. I won by default when he missed completely, due to some confusion caused by a dangling participle which was flailing about a good deal, and allowed his conversation to fall to the ground, splitting an infinitive rather badly.

I am afraid that I must have smirked.

"Ha!" he chortled, a bit crudely, I thought. "You don't even know how to smirk properly."

"I do too," I said sharply. "I should. I am a faithful subscriber to the—"

"I know!" he shouted gaily. "I know what you are going to say!"

"THE DAILY SMIRKER!" we both screamed in unison. He laughed long and uproariously at my little quip.

"Oh, it was nothing," I said modestly, and we both agreed that it certainly was.

"But what," he finally managed to say, picking himself up from the sidewalk where he had been rolling, and drying his eyes on the back of an old First Folio of Shakespeare which someone had apparently thrown away, "what are you doing with those petunias?"

I looked at the petunias as if I were seeing them for the first time. It was easy to do that because I was seeing them for the first time. Up to then I had merely been holding them. Now I was seeing them.

"These," I said, with as much dignity as I could possibly muster, "I am holding for a lady friend of mine. She is at present in the ladies' section of this department store where she is buying something which I am not allowed to see. On our way uptown, she noticed some petunias growing alongside the sidewalk in front of a gasoline station, and desired that I pick some of them for her. Her name is Louise. It is she for whom I am holding these petunias."

"That last sentence was very nicely worded," he remarked.

"Thank you," I thanked him. "I am very glad that you liked it. But what is this, if I may be so bold as to inquire, that you would have me know concerning your dog?"

"Yes," he said, and his face seemed to shine with a feverish, happy excitement, "my dog. He is over. At last. And it has been such a long time. Such a long, long time. That puddle of water in front of my house. It is a small puddle. But then, my dog, he is little too. And he has wanted, oh how he has wanted, all these years to show me that he could jump that puddle. But he has always fallen in. I have tried not to notice it, but he knows that I do. It is in his eyes. But this morning—"Here I thought that the man was about to lose all control of himself in his joy. "But this morning he jumped it! MY DOG IS OVER!"

He began to move away, to disappear into the crowd.

"But your name! Your name, sir!" I cried out, running after him.

"My name?" he asked. "Yes. Yes—I suppose that is my name. My name is The Black Prince." And with that, he was gone.

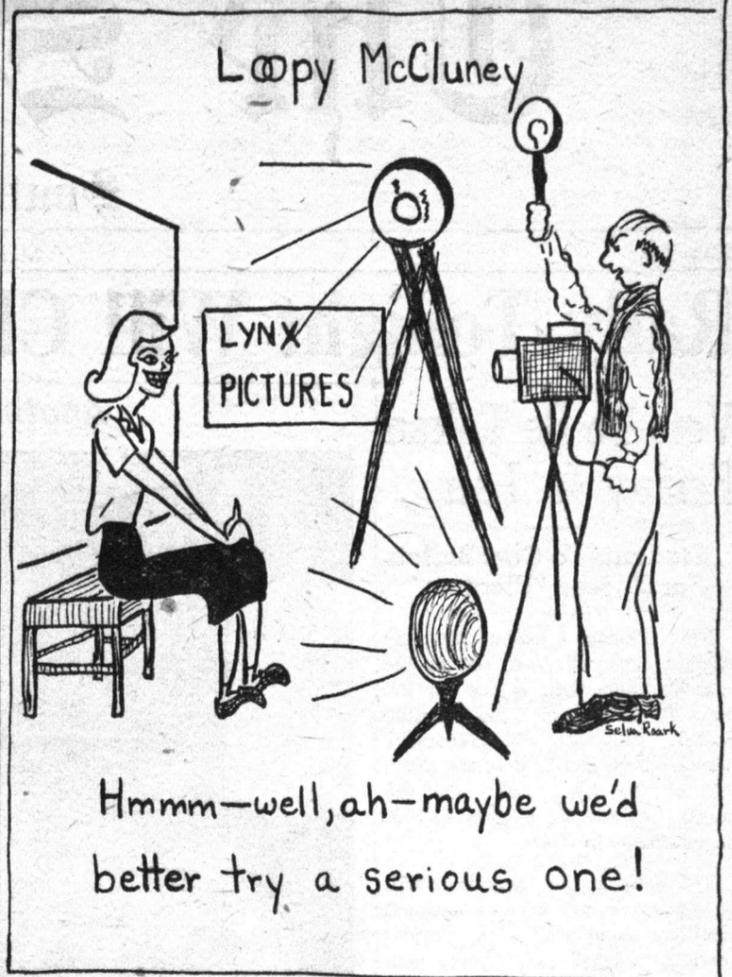

But it was true. He was The Black Prince. I noticed for the first time, even as he faded from view, that he was dressed all in armor, and was leading a beautiful white charger.

And then I knew him for what he really was. I knew why, in what was perhaps his first real moment of happiness, he had wanted to share that happiness with someone else. I was glad that I had not laughed at him. Because I knew, at last, that he was the Whole. The All.

For I realized that this stranger, who had come and who had gone, was The Lonely Man. Lonely. Like all of us.

I began to walk. I was out in the country now. The trees were green and singing, the fields were soft in rich, inviting grass, and the wind was warm. I began to hurry, to run.

And then, suddenly, it began to rain.

Club Talk

YWCA

The second meeting of the YWCA will be held on Tuesday, Nov. 2, at 4 o'clock in the Chi Omega House. It will begin with a candlelight initiation of the one hundred and eighty new members. Plans for a Thanksgiving basket for a poor family will be discussed and a report will be made on the European war orphan that the Y has adopted. Christmas cards will be given out to be sold by the Y members. The sale of these cards will further the YWCA projects during the coming year.

A drive will be started to collect dolls to send to the children of the mountainous region near Sewanee. Many of these children have never seen a doll before.

The program will consist of a fifteen-minute movie on European relief. This will provide the members with an idea of the conditions under which the war orphan adopted by the Y is living.

SPORTS

from the SIDELINES

By Jack Hall

I seem to have run out of ideas and clever things to say before even getting started on the column covering Saturday's game. That was one that left everyone about as high as a co-axial cable. You don't usually see any of our rooters leaving ten minutes before the dance is over, but it was cold and rather dull out there most of the time.

I've got a burning question to throw out among all of you who take pride in knowing a little about this game called football. Were the Chocktaws 40 points better than we were or were our boys baffled by their double-wing system, supposedly two years out-moded? . . . a system that I can recall reading is easily stopped by any and all of the smart teams of today.

Why, nobody who is anybody uses that old double-wing attack any more, and if you doubt my word just start checking up for yourself. It seems that such a multitude of elaborate defenses have been evolved during the years of the double-wing reign to stop it cold that it is little short of ridiculous to field a team with that and only that as its basic attack patters.

Yet eleven lads from deep in the heart of Mississippi fielded an archaic formation that apparently had our boys, adherents of the "T" (the new look in football), slightly puzzled as to its too frequent effectiveness. As you will have gathered by now, I have answered my own question as I see it. I can't believe that Mississippi College had a forty point better ball club than we did, as would be derived from a long, painful, look at the scoreboard. I believe simply that our boys hadn't the knowledge of how to effectively check the double balanced running power from a 2 wing-back offense . . . a knowledge that certainly is no secret among the learned of today's football.

Now let's think about something else. We're unsubsidized, check, and don't have any sort of large athletic fund to squander all over the place on things like—well, scouts, for instance. Well, that's the way it has to be and hooray for our side I guess. Granted we can't have scouts to come back with notebooks loaded with vital statistics on everything from the enemy's strong points to his jersey color, still it seems a shame to go out so obviously in the dark as to what sort of an offense the other team has as our boys did last night.

This was the situation last night as I saw it, and if those blue-boys were that good and I'm all wet about our boys not being properly informed . . . then pass the hemlock, boys, I ain't long for this world.

Lynx Cats Hit Hendrix Saturday

Southwestern Will Seek To Break Losing Streak

Next Saturday Southwestern's Lynx Cats will hit the road again, meeting Hendrix in a night game at Conway, Arkansas. Southwestern will be trying to break a four-game losing streak while Hendrix will be out to avenge the 19-0 defeat handed them by the Lynx last year.

Southwestern has been hampered greatly by injuries recently. Billy Joe Crissamore is out for the season and Milt Newton and Sam Blair missed the Mississippi College game. In that game Clyde Smith and John Thomas were also injured. The latter two, at least, are expected to play though.

Club Talk . . .

Tri Delta

The entire student body is invited to attend the Tri Delta Halloween Open House to be held Friday, October 29, from 5 till 7:30 in the sorority lodge. The guest of honor will be Miss Jean O'Neal, Delta Delta Delta's traveling secretary, who will visit the Southwestern chapter October 28 through November 1. The actives will also entertain with a dinner in the sorority lodge Monday night honoring Miss O'Neal and the alumnae advisers.

INTERMURALS

By Parker Hernnen

On October 18 at 4:30 P. M. four of the most outstanding intramural teams clashed to determine the supremacy of the league.

SN and SAE, both undefeated and untied, put on a great exhibition of touch football. The line play of both teams was superb as the lines held their opposing backfield to a minimum of yardage on the ground. SN's excellent air attack sparked by Scott's passing ability just didn't seem to click. The passing failure of SN can also be contributed to SAE's strong pass defense. The half ended in a scoreless tie. In the third quarter SAE opened an arial barrage that netted them the initial six points of the game. SN was in possession of the ball for the last few seconds of the game, and staged a futile last minute attempt for a touchdown through long high passes.

The game ended SAE 6, SN 0.

The undefeated and highly rated Freshmen seven met the once beaten but strong Independent team in a closely fought contest. In the first four plays of the game the Freshmen exhibited a razzle dazzle passing attack, spearheaded by Pridgen's passing genius that netted them six points. This show of power by the Freshmen made them look as if they were the most powerful team in the league, but during the rest of the game, except for their second touchdown, they seemed to bog down before a stubborn Independent pass defense.

The half ended with the Frosh holding a six-point lead. In the third quarter the fighting Independents staged a rally through the air that tied the score. The Freshmen were not to be outdone, however, because they came right back with a series of long and short passes that gave them another touchdown. The rest of the game turned out to be a more defensive than offensive, type of football. The Independents couldn't crack the Frosh defense, and the game ended Freshmen 12, Independents 6.

October 21 featured the Independents versus ATO and KA against KS.

The ATO and Independent game was very unimpressive for everyone except the Independent's. The two "Greeks" for the Independent's ran wild and were a deciding factor in the lopsided score. Independent 39, ATO 0.

KS and KA played a hard fought game that put KA in the winning column and turned out to be a heart-breaker for KS. A safety by KA was the stroke of fate that doomed KS. Each team scored once and made their conversions, but the two points received by KA for their safety was the cause of the KA 9, KS 7 score.

Church In Europe . . .

are working on their own; the church also seems to be on its own. In some sections, the Communist seem to have dominate control and are attempting to undermine the Christian activities. In this section, the morality seems to be a means of getting the ends desired.

3. Western Europe: The problem of demoralization is caused by war occupation. Here, there is no solution to the political problem until Russia and the United States settle their issues. There is a basic instability of mental attitude which effects the church. Also, a fundamental cynicism seems to undermine the church.

4. Britain: The problems are different from Continental Europe, due to its isolation. Government, rationing, etc., has continued to operate. There has been no social collapse or breakdown of ideals.

Thus, it seems to develop into four problems:

1. The general disillusionment of the people. They think the United States is imperialistic and know that Russia is a menace—thus, they will back U. S. as a matter of strategy.

2. The need of support. The extreme left and right movements are dangerous, and a menace to their development.

3. Clarification of U. S. foreign policy.

4. Importance of the moral force in relation to the physical force.

Europe is depending on the United States to an enormous extent, and they realize that the U. S. has definitely taken over the leadership of the world.

The only solution to a successful future of the Christian Churches lies in a stability in the political policies and foreign policies of the countries. The only way to do this is to force the issues at hand! Then, when the mind is rejuvenated along these lines, the church can step in and do their share effectively.

Cats Score Six Points Against Mississippi

Southwestern's Lynx Cats closed their home season last Saturday night before a disappointing crowd at Crump Stadium, losing to Mississippi College 46-6.

Forest Flaniken opened the game with a bang for Southwestern with a 27-yard end sweep on the first play after the kickoff, but Mississippi College held on the 35-yard line. A few plays later Howard Sessums ran back a punt 37 yards to the Lynx 20 and on third down Ray Fulton scored on an end around. Massey booted the extra point. Southwestern shaved the Choctaw lead to one point by driving 73 yards to pay dirt with the ensuing kickoff.

In the second quarter the Choctaws came back to score after a pass interception. Howard Green went over from the 5. Massey kicked the point and the visitors held a 14-6 lead at the half.

The Choctaws again took over in the third quarter and scored on a beautiful 56-yard punt return by Clyde Howard.

In the final quarter Mississippi College shifted into high and put the game on ice. Sessums scored from 8 yards, Howard dashed 28 yards for his second touchdown and Pete Evans passed to Bill Sparks, T. Smith, Nelson, A.

NOTICE

Now is the time for all White men to plan for the dormitory party.

Gunn for a 25-yard touchdown. The scoring was completed with barely five seconds left in the game when Green plunged over from the 2-yard line.

Although losing their fourth consecutive game, the Lynx performed very capably at times. The line play of Ashley and Whiteside was excellent, and the running of Flaniken and Doyle was always a potent threat.

The lineups:

Pi Kappa Alpha Holds Vespers

Tom West, Bill Rawlins, and Jack Hall conducted the vesper service for the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity last Sunday evening. The theme of the devotional message delivered by Bill Rawlins was "Are The Teachings of God Silly." Bill pointed out that the teaching of God are practical and applicable today just as they were nineteen centuries ago.

Next week the SAE fraternity will conduct the vesper service.

Why We Are For Kefauver

Estes Kefauver, for ten years a Congressman from the third (Chattanooga) District of Tennessee, has had ample opportunity to establish his record. That record includes the following:

Support of all undertakings for world peace—College men and women do not again want to go to war.

Support of the Hull Reciprocal Trade agreements which are both necessary foundations for our prosperity as well as for world peace.

Support of TVA against all foes.

Support of all programs both now and prior to 1941 for the nations defense.

Advocate of reforms in congress which would make our democracy functions more efficient. (He is author of the book, "20th Century Congress," which has won high praise from Bernard Baruch and many others).

Advocate of change in our archaic electoral college which would give the South a bigger voice in national affairs.

Why We Are For Browning

Gordon Browning gave Tennessee one good term as Governor (1937-39). He balanced the budget, adopted a fiscal program and debt retirement plan which are still in effect. He founded the State Conservation Dept.

He was first a congressman and now a chancellor and in both places served well.

He was a World War I Captain and volunteered for World War II also serving with high distinction as Military Occupation Director.

Browning is a man of courage, and independent thinker whose whole life has been a preparation for public service.

The times are too serious both at home and abroad to trifle with destinies of our state and nation. Elect only men of intelligence, integrity, experience and statesmanship.

Vote or Estes Kefauver for U. S. Senator

Gordon Browning for Governor.

Signed—Southwestern students committee for Kefauver and Browning.
