French Alliance Presents Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme

By Curtis Kent

The curtain rose at Hardie Auditorium last night on the well-known French comedy, "Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme." For the benefit of these non-French speaking people it means, "The Merchant Turned Gentleman" (so they told me). The play was written by Moliere and was originally presented in 1670. Two years ago it had a very successful Broadway season starring Bobby Clark.

The cast included: Robert Roussey as Monsieur Jourdain, the merchant; Marie Meek of St. Mary's Episcopal School, as Madame Jourdain; Francine Sagot, of Memphis State, as Lucile, the daughter; Janine Webster, Miss Hutchinson's, as Nicole, the maid; Jean-Paul Artaud, Southwestern, as Covielle, a valet; Georges Monhard, Southwestern, as Dorante, the count.

"Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme" was presented under the auspices of L'Alliance of Memphis, and the members of the faculty and students of the French departments of Memphis State and Southwestern. It was directed by Prof. George F. Totten, head of the Southwestern speech and dramatics department.

Lynx Golf Team To Meet U. T. Doctors Next Week

Southwestern's golfing hopefuls are in the throes of a battle for varsity recognition this week, as they tour 72 holes of stroke play on the country club and municipal courses. The qualifying play consists of 18 holes which were played at Colonial Country Club last Monday, 18 holes at Memphis Country Club on Tuesday, and 36 holes to be played on the Galloway Golf Course during the remainder of the week. The Lynx golf squad will be selected from among the contenders on the basis of their totals for the 72 holes of qualifying play.

Dean Bailey, Cliff Green, and John Murdock are returnees from last year's team and are expected to regain their positions by good showings. Jack Walton, Pacific Army titleholder and veteran of many tournaments, and Jimmy Goostree, who made a fine showing in the 1947 Tennessee Junior Tournament, are also expected to clinch positions on the team.

Other contenders for the team are Winston Flake, Don and Bill Walton, Raymond Norton, Barron Siefert, and Howard Lammons.

The first intercollegiate links match of the Spring will be against the U.T. Doctors and will be played at the Chickasaw Country Club on April 1 or 2. The Ole Miss team will journey to Memphis for the second match scheduled for the Memphis Country Club on April 6. The third match will be with Memphis State on April 13 at a place to be named by them. The rest of the schedule includes matches with Sewanee, Arkansas State, Lambuth, Louisiana State, and Vanderbilt and the T.I.A.C. Tournament at Sewanee in May.

Lynx Debaters Win Against West Point

NOTICE

At a meeting of the Publications Board, Saturday, March 20, the tenure of Bill Hatchett as editor of the SOU'WESTER was terminated. The Board wishes to compliment Mr. Hatchett on his capable handling of the news throughout the academic year, but regrets that because of an ill-considered editorial policy which is detrimental to the ideals and reputation of the institution, this action was necessary.

Student Council Votes To Affiliate With National Student Group

At its regular meeting last week the Student Council ratified the constitution of the U. S. National Student Association and voted to make the Southwestern student government a member. Affiliation with the USNSA was approved by the Administrative Committee after much consideration.

The constitution of the association was written at a convention last September in Madison, Wisconsin, at which William Jones represented Southwestern. The rapidly growing organization has been receiving new members every week from colleges and universities all over the nation but no other college in the Kentucky-Tennessee region has reported its membership.

Alpha Psi Omega Holds Vespers

The weekly vesper service was held Sunday night at five o'clock in the Band House with Virgil Bryant in charge for Alpha Psi Omega. The general topic for the program was worship and adoration, and at the beginning of the program hymns were sung exemplifying this theme.

Mr. Bryant read a few passages from the fourteenth chapter of John which point out a way for the confused college students of today who do not know what the future holds in store for them.

Two poems were read, the first by Lindsey on the character of Jesus, the second by William Heard Hilliard on the teachings of Jesus. In commenting on these poems, Mr. Bryant pointed out the fact that Christ lives only in our hearts; the times when God is real to us do not come as often as they should. We worship all of the time, but God's place is usually crowded out by worldly things. Mr. Bryant closed the program by asking a pertinent question: "Do people today really want to live like Christ?"

ANNOUNCEMENT

Men between the ages of 20 and 26½ who are interested in the Aviation Cadet Training program are requested to be in Hardie Auditorium today, Thursday, March 25 at two o'clock to hear a speaker representing the Air Force. If a sufficient number of men show interest, a recruiting team will be back April 8, 9, and 10 to furnish additional information about the program.

UMT Program Is Held Inadequate

Labeled by Professor George F. Totten as "the best debate I have ever heard," Friday afternoon at four o'clock in Hardie Auditorium Southwestern's debaters, Denby Brandon and Bill Rawlins, defeated Cadets Harry Griffin and Sidney Berry of the United States Military Academy's debating team. The subject argued was: "Resolved that the United States should adopt a system of Universal Military Training as a permanent peace-time policy."

Southwestern's debaters took the negative side of the question and offered a counterplan to serve in the stead of the report given congress by the Compton Committee. The West Point team contended that a reserve force which would be provided by UMT is necessary if our country is to be adequately prepared for a future war. Brandon and Rawlins showed that a Reserve could not give the necessary preparedness since it would take from six months to a year to re-activate the reserves and re-mobilize them into a fighting force. Since military leaders argue that the next war will be won or lost within a few days or weeks, the Southwestern Debate Team pointed out that the Reserves could not offer any immediate assistance — and when they could it would then be too late.

The judges were: Mr. Frank Foux, Mr. W. O. Davis, and Mr. James Quall.

Wasserman Discusses Early Christian Art

Christian Art was the subject discussed by Dr. Felix Wasserman at the Christian Union Forum, Friday, March 12 in the S.A.E. house.

Using the two French medieval Cathedrals of Bourges and Chartres as examples of the most outstanding pieces of Christian art existing in the world today, he stated that the ingenious mixture of stone, light, and air give a powerful expression of man's devotion to God. He pointed out also that these outstanding structures are not merely museum pieces, but are still used as places of worship.

Dr. Wasserman's lecture gave an insight into the capacity for appreciation that each person has and the great amount of pleasure and inspiration derived from the use of this capacity.

Committee Sets Date For Handbook Publication

The Student Council announces the appointment of Elizabeth Dudley as Chairman of the 1948 Student Handbook Committee. Other members of the committee are: Bill Sparks, Assistant; Ella Bailey; Toby Bunn; and Betty Lott.

The handbook is a new project designed to help next year's Freshmen. It will contain general information about Southwestern's activities, organizations, and social life. Tentative publication date is the latter part of May.

Just A Slight Warning

It has become obvious that to say anymore to students of Southwestern about keeping our Lynx Lair decent looking by using the waste paper receptacle would be vain.

Therefore, this editorial is directed toward one specific thing and to one specific group—the men living in the dormitories. One convenience available to you is that of being allowed to take soft drinks from the Lair to your rooms.

This will no longer be the case if the privilege is abused any longer by throwing the empty bottles out the window to break on the ground. Before it was cleaned up last week, it was not safe for a person to walk across the yard beside Robb and White because of the bottles and broken glass.

The manager of the Lynx Lair has announced that if the condition continues, no one will be allowed to take bottles from the store without paying a deposit. He has a stack of empty-bottle cases that reaches the ceiling because of the losses.

RENAISSANCE

This week on our campus we have had events which should be now examined in the light of some calm, cool analysis. The policies of this paper have played a major part in these events and I cannot but believe we can gain much from what has occurred.

We have depended much on lectures and forums which at best are poorly attended. We have considered almost everything we touch from the theoretic standpoint. We have retired into a glass tower where we cannot throw stones at the real evils of the world because we are seldom able even to see those evils. This column deals with renaissance because it is now evident that civilization cannot progress without a new birth of spirit, a new evaluation of ideas. While the main concern of this column is with contemporary literature, we recognize that literature is not the whole picture of a culture. It's business is to report, to inspire, and where necessary, to criticize the age in which it exists. Therefore it is within the bounds of this column to discuss the recent happenings on our campus. The first indication of a renaissance is questioning of the established order. With out this questioning we can never achieve progress. Our recent events have pointed up questions very sharply. All students who are not mentally dead are now thinking of the real

QUESTION Of The Week

Question: Should the United States have compulsory Universal Military training?

Billy Joe Crisamore: "Yes. I think it is one of the most vital steps toward peace."

Lloyd Smith: "Yes. A large reserve will show other countries that we mean to back up our policies."

Toby Bunn: "No. UMT is not the practical solution for security."

Donald Pittman: "No. I'm too young to die."

Steve Schillig: "No. The price paid in moral degeneration of our youth would not be worth the technique gained."

Jimmy Caldwell: "Yes. People that refuse to reason, will perhaps, understand force."

Ray Ashley: "Yes, until a better plan for world security avails itself."

meaning of our honor system. In the past too many of us have given little thought to the meaning of honor. We have been brought to consider political questions also, which we have in the past tended to overlook. We have, in general, had a light turned on our motives so that we can no longer ignore them. That which is sound and true need not fear the spotlight of examination for it can only become strengthened by such examination. All that is unsound in our world exists there because of man's unwillingness to look calmly upon his world and save his passion for the work he finds to do there.

Now that the questions have been raised, now that the issues are spread out before us, we must examine and act; each student looking into his own motives and asking the worth of them. For the issues which are before us are greater than any single school and any single individual. Is honesty a characteristic which will further or retard the development of mankind? And does not honesty involve diligence, will for the common good, self-reliance, and mutual concern for the progress of humanity?

Seldom in history have conditions offered men so great opportunities for exercise of abilities. Never in history have circumstances honored the individual man with so great responsibility. Now if ever we need to ask, AND ANSWER, the basic questions of life. It is now that we shall decide whether the new life that has been pressed upon our age is to continue down the road toward futile and ultimate destruction, or whether, through the exercise of reason, we can establish a firm foundation upon which this new life can long endure.

Bill Marsh

An Open Letter

Dear Bill,

Taking sides is an energetic and positive action not at all congenial to my lazy and confused nature, but as I have waited for a long time to see some expression of disagreement with your editorial policy by a student in the Sou'wester, and none has appeared, I am roused by your most recent issue to make certain inadequate remarks of my own. These sentiments have been discussed with you personally, Bill, at no risk to our friendship, but it seems fair that they should be given an airing in print just as yours are weekly.

The chief observation I have to make is that you not only tilt at windmills, but you build them first. You seem less interested in honest results than in dramatic effects. For example, in the well-threshed case of freshman hazing, you claimed the immediate right to incite insubordination in the individual. You know, and I know, that rebellion has its merits as a last resort, a fact of which our nation is proof, but the right to rebel implies that all orderly, rational, and provided methods of making the change have been tried and have failed. The Student Council, though admittedly working under an imperfect plan, is hardly so calloused and tyrannical as to ignore a clear, reasoned expression of opinion by even a small group of students, and has never arbitrarily refused to refer any matter to a vote of the student body if such was indicated. You leaped immediately to the code of the vigilante and the KuKluxer instead of trying first the due processes which represent the difference between society and savagery.

I take particular exception to two editorials in the issue of March 17. That one on "The Hollow Men," an alleged report of a meeting which I attended, appears to me to be a grossly subjective account masked as a factual report, highly colored by a semi-hysterical imagination and extremely derogatory to two Southwesterners with whom I thoroughly disagree, but whom I respect and admire for sincerity and intellectual capability. In this matter you are allegedly reporting facts, not bruited opinions merely, and there is no "freedom" about reporting, — it should stick to the impartial truth. But writing even editorials by insinuation, implication, and emotional appeal is a corruption of editorial freedom, and I believe you have wilfully suspended your perspective and common sense in the matter. As evidence that your impressions of the meeting are highly personalized, I am appending a statement signed by a goodly percentage of persons attending the meeting, to the effect that their view of the facts does not coincide at all with yours.

And then, the "Twelfth Disciple." That dark reference to "thirty pieces of silver" is really unworthy of you, Bill, implying as it does that the accuser in the Honor Council case acted from purely personal motives of private benefit. Unless you have specific evidence to that effect, which you should have produced, the more fair assumption would have been that the accuser had performed a painful duty for the good of something larger than the individual—the reputation of Southwestern. If this be the case, neither you nor I, regardless of our opinion on the right and wrong of that gangsterism, "ratting," has the ethical right to abuse as a "traitor" one who acts in accordance with his own higher ideals at the risk of his own popularity and his human sympathy. You are, in effect, saying that it is better for someone to make the social compromise rather than to act from pure motives of right and wrong. Compromise is aiding and abetting, and a loss of moral fibre, regardless of which code of ethics it detracts from, and hardly justifies your pluming yourself on advocating it.

Why not get constructive, Bill? The martyr complex is one of the higher forms of egoism. After all, it was Mephistopheles who bragged about being "the spirit which ever denies." The more positive spirits were prone to take attitudes like "Come, let us reason together," or "Know thyself." The naked truth should be compelling enough in itself; it doesn't require a brass band and strip-tease advertisements. And even as a matter of simple strategy, it is generally considered greater finesse in an argument to allow some show of reasonableness to your adversary, as a compliment to the mental maturity of your audience and as an exhibition of confidence in your rightness, rather than to heap invectives and blast, blast, blast. Few things are all bad, few all good, anyway. It is a human tendency to fling about unexamined labels with a blind emotionalism, and out of this tendency has come the present chaos of the world at large. It is important that such loose habits of thinking be the object of concern at college, where future attitudes and partisanship are being crystallized. That hairline which divides the false from the true, the ridiculous from the sublime, also divides the ideal journalist from the jackass.

Come off it, Bill.

We, the undersigned, who were present at the Nitist Club Meeting of March 10, 1948, wish to state publicly that our impressions of that meeting are entirely different from the version given in the Sou'wester editorial of March 17, 1948 entitled "The Hollow Men," which version we consider prejudiced, grotesquely distorted, unfair in the extreme to the persons mentioned, and unworthy of Southwestern tradition.

Polecat's Corner

By Evin L. Perdue

I wonder if the new students, who have entered Southwestern this year, can appreciate the very wonderful athletic set-up as it exists today. Two years ago an intramural program was practically non-existent, and attendance at the physical education classes was computed in negative numbers.

With the influx of veterans into the ranks of the student body, the need for a better athletic program was recognized as a very urgent thing, and Coach Clemans set about to increase his staff and to try, by fair means or foul, to acquire the scarce equipment to be had. Thus the expanded and improved program came into being.

The fall of 1946 brought us Coach Lloyd Stockstad, from the University of Wisconsin, who immediately organized a very well rounded physical education course for boys, with Miss Jessie Grossnickel doing the same for the girls. As time went by, the kinks were ironed out and now, when a new student enters the school, he, or she, finds a variety of sports which are taught and played.

With the physical education program, the intramural program, and the benefits derived from each, a student body is now able to keep their bodies as well as their minds in good condition, and a healthy student body, like any other organism, can combat any kind of infection that might creep in. By this I refer to the recent "Red" affair. Granted that such things exist, they cannot grow, being strong only through others weaknesses, among a group of well rounded, healthy bodied and minded students. This may sound like a "Strength through Health" editorial, but with a little thought, I think my point can be seen and appreciated.

The Belk Bible Medal is awarded each year to the student who attains the highest distinction in the Freshman Bible Course.

Chi O's and Independents Copp Ping-Pong and Badminton Awards

The tournaments sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association were resumed after the beginning of the second semester, and two more have been completed—the badminton and ping pong tournaments.

Sororities and the Independent Women had five entrants each in the ping-pong tournament which was completed last Wednesday after three weeks of continuous play. Each match was composed of two out of three twenty-one point games. Grace Brown of the Independents copped the badminton title by easily and steadily overcoming all opposition. The second place winner, was Harriet Causey of Tri-Delta, and Frances Lee McGee of Chi Omega defeated Ruth Stokes of Zeta Tau Alpha to win the consolation prize of third place.

Despite the fact that she was just recovered from a recent appendectomy, Gale Martin demonstrated the form and skill which made her a winner of the badminton singles crown for the second straight year. Chi Omega's Jane Ogden fought her way to the finals and was awarded second place. Pat Flippin of Delta Delta defeated Zeta's Peggy Gallimore to place third.

The badminton doubles were hard fought all the way. Four teams, KD's Sara Cooper and Lib Dudeney, AOPi's Betty Connally and Margie Phelps, Zeta's Wendell Phillips and Virginia Jones, and Chi O's Jeanne Roberds and Mary Clay Farr, all fought valiantly throughout. Chi O defeated KD and Zeta defeated AOPi in the semi-finals. When the final matches were over the winners were Chi O first, Zeta second, and AOPi third.

During the first week of classes in any semester, a student at Southwestern has the privilege of making an approved change of course without payment of fee.

Track Team Opens Spring Practice Soon

By George Bugbee

The Southwestern track team, hampered by bad weather, has finally gotten down to serious work. The team has lost most of the stars that made last year's team such a success. Evin Perdue, last season's state middle-distance champion is out for the season due to an automobile accident. Gayden Drew, the hurdle and weight star, will be greatly missed in these events. Freeman Marr, Fletcher Scott, Bob Jones, and Billy Speros, who form the relay team along with Perdue and Frank Boswell, are all out of school. Dick Porter will leave a great gap to be filled in the hurdles events.

Boswell, the only member of the relay team left, will also run the 100 and 220 yard dashes along with your correspondent (if he can ever get the lead out).

Eldon Roark should be the bright spot of the middle-distances. He has had a great deal of high school experience and has run times approaching Perdue's. Stanley Taylor and Harold Barnett are showing promise in the middle distances and should be additions to the relay team also.

Forrest Flaniken, our top distance man of last year will probably not see action due to a heel injury sustained in football. E. C. Ward appears to be one of the top contenders for these events.

The field events, which were one of the team's weaker spots of last year, should be greatly improved this year. Many of the freshmen of last season have greatly improved and should take a great many points. Bill Brazleton is back for the javelin throw and should take several first places this year. In the broad jump Marshall Scott, Boswell, and Bugbee are all back from last year, only Perdue being lost from this event. "Beefy" Dunnavant and Dickie Dickerson will team up with Scott for the discus and shot heaves. Cyril Pipkin has returned to his pole-vaulting chores.

The team should be equally as strong as its predecessor provided that the men get in shape in the short time that is left. The season opens March 27 at the Purdue Relays with the first home meet with Memphis State and Ole Miss on the 10th of April. With a lot of zealous support from the student body, this year should be very successful for the Lynx.
