Time Extended In CUC-WSSF Campaign

Still Not Too Late To Help Frankfurt U. Students

John Millard, chairman of the board of the World Service Fund at Southwestern, has announced that the University of Frankfurt is to be the recipient of the fund that is now being collected. This fund will be used to supply a small library, mimeograph machines, typewriters, paper and stencils for the German University in order that students there may have sufficient materials to study while in college.

The mimeograph material, a special request made by the Germans, will be used to reproduce copies of textbooks which are now scarce or non-existent at the University. Frankfurt, one of the smaller German universities, is located in the town of the same name on the Main River in West Central Germany. Like its fellow colleges, it is noted for the high caliber scholars that it has turned out in the past. The town itself was one of the most heavily bombed of the war, and the University has suffered partial devastation.

The World Student Service Fund Drive was scheduled to last January 3-8 but this time limit has been extended another week because the goal of fifteen hundred dollars has not been reached.

Old South Ball To Honor "KA Rose"

Members of Kappa Alpha Fraternity, the proteges of Robert E. Lee, will start a gala week-end this afternoon from 4 to 7 when they entertain the student body at an open house in the form of a procession ceremony. At the mock secession ceremony, the KA's will secede from the Union for the week-end.

The officers, headed by President Clark Bulwinkle, will be attired in grey Confederate officers' uniforms; other fraternity members will be clad in the outfits of Southern gentlemen of civil war time. Their dates will attend as Southern belles.

At 4:30, when the ceremony will be well under way, the three top officers of the fraternity will arrive at the fraternity lodge in a horsedrawn carriage. Other officers will form a mounted guard. After announcements that the South has seceded from the Union, a Confederate flag will be raised atop a flag pole in the front yard of the fraternity house.

Following a three-gun salute, the entire assembly will join in the signing of "Dixie." After the orders of the day have been read, the company will return to the lodge for dancing and refreshments.

KA's and their dates will again don their Southern costumes Saturday evening for their "Old South Ball" to be held from 8:30 to 12:00 in Fargason Field House. Johnny Long and his orchestra will play. Highlight of the musical program, however, will be a short

SAE's Mourn 'Paddy' At Annual 'Wake'

Members of Tennessee Zeta Chapter of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity entertained at three events Saturday evening honoring prospective members. Members and rushees attended a stag banquet at Hotel Peabody's Georgian Room. Former Mayor of Memphis, Walter Chandler, was guest speaker. Dan Hathorn, president of Tennessee Zeta Chapter, was master of ceremonies.

From the Peabody members and rushees sped to call for their dates and hurried to the Southwestern-Memphis State basketball game at Ellis Auditorium.

The long awaited moment arrived, however, at 9:30 when the group arrived at the fraternity lodge to attend the "Paddy Murphy Wake." The house was decorated in true "wake" fashion, which included black drapes, caskets, and candles burning in bottles. Last rites for "Brother Paddy" were spoken by Dan Hathorn. Pallbearers were Mark Harris, Howard Lammons, Pres Smithwick, and Buddy Thomason.

After Paddy was laid to rest in the backyard of the fraternity lodge, the mourners returned to the "funeral parlor" which took on a much more cheerful light. The guests enjoyed refreshments and dancing to slow music. The tempo was occasionally pepped up by the jitterbugging of Brother Durbin and Rushee Tate.

Chaperons for the events included Mr. and Mrs. John A. Rolow and Prof. Julian Nall with Miss Irma Waddell.

Ministerial Club To Hear Dr. Gillespie

The Ministerial Club will hold its regular supper meeting in the Bell Room at 6:00 p.m. Friday. Guest speaker for the evening will be Dr. Richard Gillespie, Candidate Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions, Presbyterian Church, U.S.

At 5:30 the members will meet at the Alpha Tau Omega House to have a Ministerial Club picture made for the annual.

Last year's "Paddy Murphy" mourners are pictured above as they filed out to lay their beloved brethren to rest. Brother Robt. Cooper, in charge of this year's party, is pictured in the foreground.

Gerry Sweatt Resigns Editorship; Successor Not Yet Announced

The Publications Board has announced the resignation of Gerry Sweatt as Editor of the Sou'wester.

This announcement was made following the acceptance of the Board of his petition for resignation in which he stated that lack of time prevented his continuing in his present capacity as editor. Gerry is a senior studying for distinction in Psychology, and also serving as a student assistant in the department. He plans to attend graduate school on a fellowship in preparation for his future as a psychologist. With the Judgment Day of Comprehensives only a semester away Gerry, like many other senior leaders, is finding it necessary to curtail his extracurricular activities during his last session in college.

Gerry took over the reins of Editor in the fall of 1948, after having previously served as a reporter and member of the staff of the Sou'wester, as well as working on the former Pike's Press. During his time as editor the paper has continued its march of progress (see editorial page).

Kenneth Mills, president of the Publications Board, has announced that the position of Editor for the second semester is now open. All interested juniors and seniors turned in their applications to Mr. Springfield by last Tuesday. These applications will be carefully considered by the Board and their decision will be made known before Gerry's resignation becomes effective on January 28.

AOPi Open House Fetes Students

Tuesday, January 4, Alpha Omicron Pi entertained an exam-dreading student body with an Open House from 5 to 7 in the sorority lodge. The guests forgot they hadn't studied and enjoyed dancing, talking and bridge. Guests were greeted at the door by Bettie Connally, who was wearing a corsage of red roses presented to her by her sister AOPi's.

The refreshment table was centered by a vase of red roses placed between white tapers burning in silver candelabra. Frances Crouch was in charge of refreshments assisted by Milbrey Knowlton, Mary Ann Lilly and Helen Quindley. Peggy Marshall was in charge of decorations.

Student Council Holds Second Annual Forum

78 Memphians, Home For Holidays, Participate

The second annual Intercollegiate Forum was held at the Chi Omega Lodge on December 28. The Forum, sponsored by Southwestern's Student Council, met to discuss the activities, curricula, and problems on various college campuses throughout the nation. Seventy eight Memphis students representing twenty-nine colleges and universities attended the all day meeting.

The originator of the Forum, Prof. John A. Osman, who is on leave of absence from Southwestern while studying for his doctorate, opened the meeting with an address on "College Life Is Real Life." He stressed the fact that students are not merely in preparation for life during their four years in the ivory towers, but that they are actually living each day. Therefore, they should make the most of the present as well as prepare for a tomorrow which may never come.

Panel Discussion

Bill Welsh of Berea College, president of the National Student Association, discussed the history, organization, and purposes of the N.S.A., especially noting the exchange student system which is at present working so well.

A panel discussion on "Student Government" was led by representatives from Randolph-Macon, the University of Virginia, and Southwestern. Following a very heated discussion on the need of student rule on the campus, the delegates were taken to Neely Hall, where they enjoyed luncheon as guests of the college.

The afternoon session began with discussion groups on "Current Trends in College Life," "Extra-Curricular Activities," and "The Honor System." Each delegate attended his choice of the groups.

Good Luck, Gerry

Gerry Sweatt has resigned.

The entire student body was sorry to learn of this, especially we members of the staff who have had occasion to work with him, observing the efficiency and skill with which he "put the paper to bed."

Perhaps the most thankless student office at Southwestern is that of editor. Few of us think when we pick up a copy of the paper in the cloister, scan it with an occasional word of praise or dissatisfaction, and lay it aside, that those four pages represent seven days work to Gerry. "Sweating It Out" is actually no joke. The editor has to assign material, make sure that it comes in, proof it and set up a dummy. He burns quarts of midnight oil and consumes gallons of coffee. He is responsible for his column plus several editorials, and should anything ever go wrong, it is he who takes the blame.

Gerry has done all this without a word of complaint. He has done it at the risk of his studies and at the expense of his hours of recreation. He has done his job and done it well. We're all proud of him.

We also are proud of Gerry for another, less tangible reason. He has had to make the decision all students eventually face. What is the proper balance between scholastic and extra-curricular activity? How far can I serve the student body to my own detriment? What is my obligation to the future as well as to the present? Gerry realized what we all must see in our own lives. In order to be a good psychologist tomorrow, he must be a good student today. He's given most of seven semesters to the present; the eighth needs must be reserved for the days to come. The task of editor must now fall into the hands of another who is not so near graduation.

So it's goodbye for now, Gerry. We appreciate the fine paper you've given us. Don't study too hard, and in the future, Good Luck.

Sans Souci Meets

The French Club met at 7:30 Thursday evening at the Kappa Sigma lodge. Ann Brown, President, was in charge of the meeting.

Audrey Brunkhurst was in charge of the program. Plans are underway for the presentation of a French movie in the near future. Proceeds will go to the fund for students planning to work in Europe this summer.

Nancy Hill was in charge of refreshments.

Let's Be Practical

Few, if any, of us remember the days when criminals were tossed in dungeons and fed bread and water until they died by suicide or from natural causes. We only read of the insane people who were tied at stakes and beaten because of their abnormalities. These are facts from a past which we all are glad to have behind us. We revel today in a society that casts out devils by the therapy of reeducation. We now return former criminals and psychopaths to a normal place in the world. These things are taken for granted; they are part of our scientific progress.

Yet how many times in the past two weeks have you heard students say, "Give money to help Germany? Don't be silly. The only way to control them is to keep them under foot. Let America rule the world?" Unfortunately, these are growing sentiments in our post war world. The modern man wants to be hard and practical.

Well, let's be practical then. Let's be realistic and face facts. The United States each year spends billions of dollars to rehabilitate criminals, psychopaths, feeble-minded and maimed people. Yet we aren't willing to give a proportionally small amount of time, money, and effort necessary to open up the vast reservoir of human resource latent in Germany at present. If we believe in our system of life, we must be willing to share it. If it's any good, it will stand the tests of reeducated German minds.

Then, let's be logical about this thing, we practical people. For what it costs to rehabilitate one criminal we could turn out seven German scholars. Let's rethink our philosophy, or rather, let's think it through. Study the situation in an objective manner, and be willing for your children to bear the brunt of your decision.

Can You Study?

The difference between a good and poor student is often not a matter of ability, but of studying tactics. You can learn to learn, and there is no better time to start than now. After all look what's happening next week?

1. Do you ever study with the radio on?
2. Do you study by indirect light?
3. Do you try to study with others rather than alone?
4. Do you move your lips when studying a hard passage?
5. Do you day dream when you should be studying?
6. Do you have to be in the "mood" for studying?
7. Does every noise disturb your train of thought?
8. Do you ever turn a page, but your mind is blank for what it said?
9. Do you make simple charts to represent parts of your reading?
10. Do you skim over work before going into detail?
11. Do you try to memorize exact words in text?
12. Do you use facts learned in one subject to help you understand another?
13. Do you mark important or hard passages so that you can look them over again?
14. Do you stop at times and recall what you've just learned?
15. Do you study very late the night before an exam?

A good student answers those questions as follows: 1, no; 2, yes; 3, no; 4, no; 5, no; 6, no; 7, no; 8, no; 9, yes; 10, yes; 11, no; 12, yes; 13, yes; 14, yes; 15, no.

Make a list of your weak points and review it frequently to overcome your difficulties. Practice the correct habits that you lack, and eliminate the negative ones.

The Missing Lynx

One evening last week a very small cousin of mine, in whose home I happened to have the misfortune to be trapped, climbed upon my knee and in her tiny voice (she speaks abominable English and I strongly suspect that she is a foundling from a Fiji orphans home) humbly begged me to tell her a story. In the process of her climbing she completely ruined a perfectly good piece of heavily-iced cake, which I was balancing, as well as playing a bit of havoc with a pair of English-cut tweed trousers, which I was in; so I ordered her off onto the floor with an impatient gesture of the back of my hand and went right on with my somewhat cursory perusal of the original first draft of Homer's Iliad.

After a few more hours of that, however, I found myself unable to forget her request. "Here," I thought, "is an opportunity not to be ignored. Here is the chance that I have long dreamed of — the golden moment in which I can set at least one impressionable young mind upon the path toward understanding the world as it actually exists, and not as the chronic liars who write the fairytales picture it." I felt then, and I still feel now, that the sooner children learn that they are going to have to fight for a living right along with the rest of us, in a world that is hard and realistic enough as it is without double-crossing unsuspecting youngsters into believing any differently, then the more likely they will be able to stand the shock when they get it.

Accordingly, then, I picked the wretched child up from the floor, where she had been miserably sniveling ever since I gently removed her from atop my cake, and told her as follows:

THE STORY OF CINDERELLA

Once upon a time there was a beautiful girl named Cinderella. She lived in a house with her two sisters, both of whom were very mean to her. It was always the two sisters who wore lovely dresses and got higher than kites at Debutante Balls, while Cinderella had to wear dirty old sacks and sit all night at home in a corner by the fireplace.

One night the two sisters dressed themselves to the teeth, figuratively speaking; told Cinderella to keep the fire going while they were away; and left for a magnificent Alumni Banquet and Dance that was being thrown at the Imperial Palace by the local chapter of Agathon Phew. Poor Cinderella sat by the dying embers and just cried and cried. Then, suddenly, there came a knock at the door.

It was the landlord, wanting the rent money. Since she could not pay him, he kicked her a few times and went away to get an eviction notice. When the two sisters came home at four a.m., after both becoming engaged to handsome princes without any shoe-salesman nonsense, they beat Cinderella for an hour and a half, taking turns. They did this for two reasons: first, because she had been stupid enough to expect a Fairy Godmother to help her while she made no move whatever to get out and hustle for herself; and second, because she had let the fire go out.

THE LITTLE MATCH GIRL

There was once a poor little girl whose wicked, wicked old man made her stand out in the snow in front of a warm and brilliantly lighted theater and sell matches to the people as they came out. One night when the temperature had gone so low that even the weatherman could find no previous year to claim it was warmer than, the little match girl got so cold, what with not having had the simple intelligence to steal a coat somewhere the day before, that she began lighting her matches one by one to keep warm by. She knew that her father would whip the socks off her for it, but she also knew that she was getting cold as hell.

When the rich theater-goers got out that night after the late show, and saw the little match girl standing there, they immediately called the booby-hatch to send the wagon. They figured that anyone who was a big enough jackass to try to keep warm by lighting matches, even if there had not been a steam-heated theater lobby not ten feet away, ought to be locked up for the rest of time in a straitjacket. And that was exactly what happened.

Those, then, were the stories that I told. If that child ever grows up — which, unless she desists from smearing her Boopsie gum all over my typewriter ribbon, she is not going to — I trust that she will at least do so with the expectation of meeting, not a Prince Charming on a winged white charger who will whisk her away to an enchanted castle, but a college boy with a crew cut and a four-door automobile who will haul her off to a movie, a hamburger, and a dark and deserted, hidden, country lane.

Television Quiz Features Coeds

Television was the order of the day when three Southwestern coeds appeared on WMCT in an effort to "Stop the Clock." This question and answer program is channeled in Memphis every Sunday night with representatives from Southwestern opposing girls from Memphis State.

The first group to carry forth the honor of Southwestern were the Independent Women who vied against the Alpha Gamma Deltas and were defeated by a minute and four seconds. Geraldine Zepatos, Ann Lyle, and Jo Phillips acted as the Independents' Quiz Kids, answering various and sundry questions with amazing accuracy.

Tom West Seeks Asst. Ad Manager

Tom West, Sou'wester business manager, wishes to announce that the new position of associate advertising manager is now open. The position is open to sophomores, juniors or seniors. Some experience is preferred but not necessary. In this capacity a person may secure valuable experience that will help a great deal toward securing the position of business manager for next year. Those interested in the position should contact Tom West or Mr. Springfield by Thursday of next week.

SPORTS

from the SIDELINES

By Jack Hall

Our basketballers have split a couple of games since this rag, last went to press, copping a neat decision over Florida State before that Christmas turkey had hardly settled down in their stomachs, and dropping a thriller last Saturday night to Memphis State by three points. That Florida game is history by now, so there's little use in delving into statistics concerning the fray. We should have won it, and we did. Let's talk about that game last Saturday night.

To start off with, there are ways to win a ball game, and then, of course, there are other ways. One of the least popular and satisfactory methods is to get a five point lead over the opposition, with five minutes remaining to play, and freeze the ball. That, for the benefit of some girls, means playing basketball with playing clean enough? Well, anyhow, that is what the favored Tigers from Memphis State were forced to do to keep from being beaten down.

Memphis State floored a good team, certainly, and in some respects they stood out as superior to our ball club. They seemed to be, on the whole, a faster club than we were, but then naturally their utilization of the fast break offense would necessitate a speedy group of boys. Then, their effectiveness at the foul line showed up time after time. We missed many more than enough gratis tosses to put the game on ice, but that is so often true for almost any ball game that ends up with a close winning score.

If you were there at the Lynx-Memphis State tilt, and you certainly should have been, you doubtless saw State's colorful Coach Tarry giving out with a jumping-jack exhibition from his bench worthy of an epileptic in fine form. In case you were puzzled or amused at this apparently unnatural behaviour, let me assure you that to my mind it was quite in order. It seems to me quite natural that he should have gone crazy watching his boys connect on a series of fantastic, impossible shots from the 45 foot mark. Shots that they were forced to heave from that distance due to the fine and alert man-to-man defense employed by the Lynx that denied State many shots from the normal range zone of the court. They hit a lot of those shots, it's true, and every time that they did Coach Tarry jumped like he had been shot . . . proof enough for any amateur psychologist that he never dreamed that State could, or would, connect on so many of them.

Personally, I think "Big" Eldon should give "Little" Eldon a big writeup for the sterling performance he gave. Of course, he won't, but I'll bet he's mighty proud of his boy. Eldon blazed out with the best game he has yet played, I believe, and he's played some fine ones before. And here's an interesting note . . . didn't the papers play up an expected duel between 6' 7" Schmollinger and 6' 5" Derr? If there was a duel, Schmollinger's blade must have been awfully dull . . . he scored a big goose-egg. Derr's scoring sixteen points while holding his man down to exactly nothing seems to me little short of miraculous. That sort of thing just never happens . . . but it did.

"Goosie" is probably muttering something about not coming through with his usual four or five "swishers" from mid-court, but ain't nobody mad at you, Jimmy. You hawked that ball and played a whale of a game in spite of being a little off on your shots. Captain Coley also had more than usual hard luck with some of his shots, but that's just one of those things too, Billy, and ain't nobody sore at you either.

Gwinn, Newton, Graves, Doyle, and Pridgen all contributed greatly to the noble effort, and what was that I read about us having weak reserves? I didn't see any. They were all in there pitching . . . especially Pridgen!

Fighting Lynx Bow To Scrappy Terriers

Southwestern and Memphis met Saturday night in the first game of the city championship series with the Lynx dropping a close one by a 53-50 count despite a driving finish which saw them cut a 12 point State halftime lead to 3 points by the final gun. Lanky Art Derr, Lynx center, paced the scorers with 16 points. He was followed by Southwestern's Eldon Roark who had 15 and by Coy Creason of State who counted 13.

The Tigers jumped off to a fast start and piled up a 14-6 lead in the first four minutes. Hitting on their long shots with phenomenal frequency and using a fast break judiciously, the Staters gradually increased their advantage until they led at the half by 33-21. The second half was an entirely different story, however. With Derr, Roark, and Bill Coley hitting consistently Southwestern shaved the Tiger lead to 39-34 with about 13 minutes left in the game. State came back to push the count up to 45-36, but Roy Guin, Roark, and Coley hit in succession to make it 45-42 with 8 minutes left on the clock. At this time State began stalling and stayed in the lead on free shots resulting from fouls caused by Southwestern's attempts to get the ball.

Probably the outstanding performer for the Lynx was Art Derr who was not only high scorer for the night, but also covered State's 6' 7" center, Jack Schmollinger, so efficiently that he was unable to tally a single point. The entire Southwestern team played well in the later stages of the game, however, after getting off to a slow start.

In other games of the past two weeks, Southwestern defeated Florida State 54-47 during the Christmas holidays to run their victory string to three in a row, before dropping a tough 60-52 decision to Ole Miss at Oxford. In the latter battle Jimmy Goosetree kept Southwestern in the game with 16 points, earned primarily from long set shots.

tor of St. John's Methodist Church, talked on the need of religion today and led the discussion on the subject which followed short speeches by students from Wooster, Wellesley, and the University of Tennessee on the religious life of their respective campuses.

The Forum was closed with an open house in the Tri Delta Lodge with the members of the Student Council acting as hosts.

Margaret Loaring-Clark was general chairman of the Forum, Denby Brandon presided over the meeting, and Jimmy Davis served as Southwestern's delegate.

For A Friend

If you're worried because you haven't
Of worldly goods and such,
And you'd like to do something big for a friend,
Why, you don't have to do much.

Just give him a smile when he needs it,
And a hand when the going is rough,
And a pat on the back that says "Sure you can"
When he thinks the world is too tough.

It doesn't take money, power, nor, fame,
For a present that's really worthwhile.
For there isn't a dollar made that can buy
The friendship you give in a smile.

Old South Ball

 performance by Clyde McCoy, his orchestra, and his "Sugar Blues."
 The north end of the gym will feature a large old Southern colonial home through which the fraternity leadout will take place at 10:00. First will appear the fraternity officers and their dates led again by President Bulwinkle. Following the officers will come members and their dates. The long awaited moment will come when the "KA Rose" steps out upon the porch of the house and the entire fraternity steps forward to sing to her "KA Sweetheart." The "Rose" will be presented with a gift from the fraternity.

Immediately following the presentation of the "Kappa Alpha Rose," there will be a short intermission.

Among other novel decorations carrying out the "Old South and Robert E. Lee" themes, will be the crepe paper Confederate flags hung over the bleachers. The south end of the Field House will feature the chapter's highly valued portrait of Gen. Lee, which was once a possession of the Lee family. The picture will be artistically draped with bunting. Underneath it will hang two crossed swords.

The famous Ole Miss Confederate flag will adorn the ceiling. This flag was generously loaned for the occasion by Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi. Gov. Wright is planning to be present for the Kappa Alpha ceremonies and especially for the presentation of the "KA Rose."

The city's WMC Television Service will televise both the dance and the procession ceremony. Protographers with technicolor movie cameras will film both occasions for showing to the student body sometime in February.

Sprunt Leads CU Forum

Those who attended the Christian Union Forum at 3:45 yesterday afternoon in the Kappa Alpha Lodge were privileged to hear a discussion on the "Christian Approach to Divorce." Prof. David Sprunt of the Bible Department led the discussion.

Harvard Professor Will Lecture Here

On Wednesday, February 2, at 8 p.m. in the Hardie Auditorium an illustrated lecture will be given on "The Monastery of Cluny in Burgundy." The lecturer will be Kenneth John Conant, Professor of the History of Architecture at Harvard University, who will visit Southwestern in the capacity of Norton Lecturer of the Archaeological Institute of America.

This lectureship, established forty years ago by the former distinguished president of Harvard, Dr. Charles Elliott Norton, provides that an outstanding scholar be commissioned each year to visit those places in the United States where branches of the Archaeological Institute are established.

Through the efforts of the local members of the Institute, Southwestern is included this year for the first time in the itinerary of the Norton Lecturer, and it is hoped that in the near future a local branch of the Institute may be organized.

Professor Conant was born in Wisconsin, was wounded in action in World War I, and has been a member of the teaching staff of Harvard since 1920. A specialist in church architecture, in which he is a world-famous authority, Dr. Conant has excavated in the Yucatan, in New Mexico, and in France, and has held exchange professorships at the Sorbonne and the National Museum of Mexico.

His meticulous excavations of the Abbey of Cluny for the Mediaeval Academy of America evoked widest admiration, and won him a medal of the Societe française d'archaeologie in 1935; in 1936 he was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

Professor Conant's lecture will be offered to the general public of Memphis free of charge, and a special invitation to be present is extended to the Southwestern student body, particularly to Art and History majors and to members of the Man class.

Men Are So Dumb!

He doesn't know I love him,
 Funny guy!
 Who stares at him the whole day
 through?
 He never makes a pass at me.
 (Smart guy!)
 And I'll not make excuses
 And say he's shy.

He's very bold with pretty girls,
 Smooth guy!
 To that I can't complain much.
 Mirrors don't lie.
 My looks, I fear, aren't worthy
 Of this guy.
 But Mama says a girl can't starve
 Or dye.

So all day long I yearn for him,
 Swell guy . . .
 Who seems a little luckier in love
 Than I . . .
 And talk about and think about this
 Certain guy,
 Till how he can't help seeing,
 By and by.

Is quite beyond my reasoning,
 So, just between us, I Believe I've lost my heart to
 Some dumb guy!
