"Self-Portrait," Jameson Miller Jones '36
Professor of Moral Philosophy,
Vice President for Academic Affairs and Dean of the College, 1955-1971

The college fondly remembers scholar, administrator and artist Jameson Jones, who passed away August 25, 2008, at the age of 92.

His teaching inspired students not just to think, but to probe, to question, to stretch in directions they hadn't before imagined, for which alumni thank him to this day.

President Peyton Rhodes asked him to become dean by declaring, "I look on myself as shepherd of the Southwestern flock, and I need you for my crook." Jones accepted the offer with characteristic grace, good humor and his seemingly ever-present smile, serving, himself, as a good shepherd to the faculty for 16 years.

This issue of the magazine is devoted to the many ways in which Rhodes people—students, faculty, alumni and friends—are connected. Dean Jones was all of those, a model for us all.

Support for Teaching and Learning at Rhodes

By Daney Daniel Kepple

Faculty dedicated to undergraduate teaching is one of Rhodes' greatest strengths. Alumni from the 1940s to the class of 2008 attest that their Rhodes experience is shaped by our outstanding faculty. Teaching, not limited to the classroom, permeates the campus through regular one-on-one exchanges between faculty and students. The frequent interaction enables faculty to engage students in all aspects of their particular discipline, including their research, and results in lifelong friendships. A primary goal of the Campaign for Rhodes is to ensure that our faculty and staff have the talent, time and resources to inspire and involve our students in meaningful study, research and service. Alumni, parents, foundations and friends clearly recognize the value of faculty contributions, and they have expressed their appreciation through gifts to support specific endeavors.

Most visible is the Paul Barret Jr. Library which has transformed the center of campus and provides a place for faculty and students to plan their collaborations and share news of progress along the way. The renovations and addition to the McCoy Theatre made possible by the Harry B. McCoy Foundation has reinvigorated all of the arts on campus by providing space for theatre faculty to be housed under one roof as well as additional rehearsal space for upcoming performances. In addition to these gifts, alumni, foundations, parents and trustees have provided generous support of the academic program at Rhodes. The gifts and bequests, all aimed at attaining the Rhodes Vision, benefit a wide variety of departments along with an eclectic array of innovations and programs.

The Virginia Ballou McGehee Chair in Muslim-Christian Relations honors an alumna of Rhodes College and aims to enable a student to work closely with an outstanding member of the Rhodes faculty. The funds support a distinguished faculty member's research and course development as well as the work of a student research associate who can contribute to and benefit from working closely with the faculty member. The current occupant is Professor John Kaltner who says, "In addition to the funding for my research which is, of course, very welcome, the best thing about the chair is that it allows me to work with talented students as a mentor and collaborator. Lars Nelson, a Religious Studies and History double major, is my research assistant this year, and I have thoroughly enjoyed working with him."

The Jameson M. Jones Outstanding Faculty Service Award, also in support of the Rhodes Vision's Student Learning Imperative, has been endowed by Dr. John Gladney '74 to continue the tradition of honoring faculty service at Rhodes at Opening Convocation each year.

Loretta Jackson-Hayes, assistant professor of Chemistry

“Members of the faculty serve Rhodes in many ways that go beyond formal teaching duties and scholarship,” notes Gladney, mentioning in particular academic advising and oversight of the academic program. All members of the Rhodes faculty are eligible to receive the award. Nominations are considered by a committee comprising primarily faculty members and members of the Office of Academic Affairs. Recipients have included Professors John Katlner, Tim Huebner and, most recently, Gail Streete.

The Martin-Kragh Faculty Development Fund for Biology and Chemistry was established by parents Steve and Nancy Martin in hope of perpetuating the close learning and working relationship their son Stuart '08 had working in the laboratory of chemistry professor Loretta Jackson-Hayes.

“When we came for Parents’ Weekend, my son Stuart wanted us to meet one his professors, Dr. Loretta Jackson-Hayes,” Steve Martin recalls. “We were expecting a quick handshake, but we stayed in her lab for nearly an hour listening to her and Stuart describe their research project. I'm sure it is every parent's dream to see a son or daughter so excited to work on a fascinating project under the direction of a great mentor."

The fund provides support for a chemistry or biology student to conduct research in the laboratory of a faculty mentor.

The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation established two programs that benefit the Rhodes academic program.

The first provides support for faculty in all stages of their careers to grow professionally. Beneficiaries have included professors Tim Huebner and Lynn Zastoupil of the History Department; Jennifer Brady, English; and David Jeter, Chemistry.

The most recent Mellon program provides funding to expand the Environmental Sciences program to a much more broadly defined Environmental Studies program (see story on page 8). The Environmental Sciences program, which appeals to students in Mathematics, Chemistry, Biology and Economics, is broadening its focus to include environmental policy and will be attractive to students interested in areas such as Political Science, International Studies, Business or Economics with career interests in environmental law, ethics, politics or economics.

“Emerging from this program, our students can position themselves to be leaders in addressing some of the world’s most pressing issues,” says Professor David Kesler, who is chairing the effort.

The program has hired three new postdoctoral fellows, Robert Lustech, Tait Keller and Jennifer Sciubba, who are working with Kesler to implement a variety of interdisciplinary aspects of the program. Lustech also teaches courses in the Anthropology/Sociology Department, Keller in History and Sciubba in International Studies.

The Dr. Iris Annette Pearce Shakespeare Endowment was established through a generous bequest from Dr. Pearce ’42 to support the Student Learning and Engagement Imperatives of the Rhodes Vision. Dr. Pearce had a history of giving to her country and community. She served as a WAVE during World War II, was a fifth-generation physician and a pioneer for women in the field of medicine. She was the first woman resident in internal medicine and the first woman chief resident at John Gaston Hospital in Memphis. She also served as director of the City of Memphis Hospitals. Dr. Pearce had a unique compassion for the poor and underserved. In 1981, she received the prestigious L.M. Graves Memorial Health Award for outstanding contributions to community health care.

Income from her endowed fund will be used to enhance and enrich courses in the Shakespeare Studies program through lectures by visiting scholars, classes offered by actors and directors in residence, conferences, workshops and performances. A portion of the funding will support research by the faculty member holding the position in Shakespeare Studies in the English Department.

Plans for the program are highly interdisciplinary in nature. Collaboration with the Theatre Department will be ongoing, and more innovative partnerships are also planned. Work is under way for a program on Shakespeare and the Environment, in celebration of the new Environmental Studies program, and Shakespeare and Politics is slated for next year.

The Plough Foundation has endowed a chair in Urban Studies to strengthen public education, early childhood development, crime protection, health care and economic development in Shelby County. The chair is held by Professor Mike Kirby, chair of the Urban Studies program.

“This support is gratifying recognition of the important work our students do in the community,” Kirby says. “It also encourages us to document Rhodes’ success stories and disseminate the information to other programs and community members. We have begun publication of a Community Journal to accomplish that goal. The first one deals with community policing and has been very well received.”

The James T. and Valeria B. Robertson Chair in Biological Science was established by Dr. James Robertson ’53 to support faculty teaching and research in the sciences. The current occupant, Professor Terry Hill, says, “Being the occupant of this chair is a great honor. It’s also much more than that. The funds allow me to travel to international conferences which is quite as important in the sciences as in modern languages and international studies. There are three collaborations that [Chemistry] Professor Darlene Loprete and I are involved in that arose from associations I made at such meetings. There are great things happening in our research that would not be happening without this support.”

The Spence Wilson Faculty International Travel Fund was established by the Kemmons Wilson Family Foundation in honor of Spence Wilson to enable faculty to conduct research outside the U.S., collaborate with colleagues from throughout the world, travel to retool or expand the curriculum, present papers at international conferences and take students abroad.

“The Rhodes Vision clearly states the college’s goal is to inspire its graduates to be effective leaders not only in their local communities and professions but in the world,” Wilson says. “To achieve that goal of enriching our students’ global perspectives, it is imperative that our faculty have access to international resources and opportunities.”

In the first two years since its inception, the fund has provided international experiences to seven faculty members including: Professors Mauricio Cafiero (Chemistry), Eddie Mallot (English), Jeffrey Jackson (History), Gary Lindquister (Biology), Michelle Mattson (Modern Languages), Marsha Walton (Psychology) and Tom McGowan (Anthropology/Sociology).

“I am very grateful to the alumni/ae, foundations, parents and trustees who have underwritten these important programs,” says Rhodes president William E. Troutt. “It is a strong affirmation that they understand and appreciate the vital nature of what happens here every day. The Rhodes faculty is second to none and I am delighted that friends of the college are supporting their work.” R

Respected Scholar Is New Academic Leader

By Daney D. Kepple

Michael Drompp

JUSTIN FOX BURNS

Michael R. Drompp, Rhodes' new academic leader, steps into his two-year appointment as Dean of the Faculty and Vice President for Academic Affairs with three points in his favor:

- He was the unanimous choice of President Troutt and the Faculty Governance Committee.
- He is a distinguished scholar and teacher as well as an able administrator.
- He has a solid record of leading the campus community through waters that have not always been smooth.

Drompp, a Phi Beta Kappa at Indiana University, came to Rhodes in 1989 as an assistant professor of history after teaching at Illinois State University and serving as the director of the Pacific Rim/Asia Study-Travel Program at the University of Puget Sound. He was promoted to associate professor in 1993 and full professor in 2003, and chaired both the Department of History and the Asian Studies Program for several years. Drompp has also served as Dean of Academic Affairs for Postgraduate Fellowships. He received the Clarence Day Award for Outstanding Teaching in 1999.

Drompp's classroom skills rest on a firm foundation. A lifelong musician who was encouraged by his parents to look for a more "practical" major, Drompp discovered the Department of Uralic and Altaic Studies at Indiana University and was captivated. His first experience was a course called "Inner Asia before the Mongol Conquest," taught by a master teacher who later became one of his mentors.

"I have stayed there ever since. I am fascinated by the relationship between the Chinese people and the nomadic peoples to China's north. I stayed at Indiana for all three of my degrees because that was the only place in the world that could offer me that concentration,” he says.

Drompp lived in Taiwan for two and a half years while writing his dissertation and studied, among other things, gourmet cooking. A few years ago he set off for Mongolia on his own and rented a Jeep, driver and translator to examine and photograph archaeological sites that had not yet been excavated. Perhaps most formative was the year he spent leading University of Puget Sound students on a year-long academic experience in Asia.

“We went to Japan, Korea, China, Thailand, India, Nepal and Pakistan, and the students studied a different course in each country,” he recalls. “In Thailand we lived in a monastery and studied Theravada Buddhism. In Nepal, on a 20-day trek of the Himalayas we studied the flora and fauna of the area. I taught art history in China and still include art in many of my classes. The capstone course was on the history and cultures of the Silk Road, taught while we traveled a good portion of that ancient route. The net effect was that I truly came to value international education and its impact on students.”

Soon after President Troutt arrived at Rhodes he asked Drompp to chair the Diversity Initiative, a task force charged with looking at obstacles to attaining a more diverse campus and how those obstacles could be overcome. The fact that 21 percent of the class of 2012 are students of color is an eloquent testimony to the often challenging work of that task force.

Later, Drompp led the steering committee established to oversee the faculty/trustee teams that tackled the 10 “steps forward” highlighted in President Troutt’s inaugural address. The 10 initiatives, which have since been consolidated into the Rhodes Vision and its four strategic imperatives, set such goals as recruiting and retaining the best faculty and promoting increased opportunities for students to do research, engage with the Memphis community and study abroad. They also called for curricular revision and a new library. Major progress has been achieved in all those areas.

Michael Drompp has earned the faculty’s and the administration’s trust many times over, yet he begins his new assignment with humility.

“The Diversity Initiative was a very good learning experience for me,” he says. “Through it I came to see that process is important as well as outcome, and progress is often slow. As part of that work other members of the task force and I met with many groups with the goal of engaging as many constituencies as possible. It reinforced for me the tremendous importance of listening.”

Drompp enters his new role with that realization.

“I have great respect for the work of everyone here and for the level of trust we share. I hope to promote improved communication and strive for greater transparency. I want to honor and celebrate the work of the faculty in all its diversity. There is a marvelous variety of teaching and research and creative activity here, and I am very glad of that.”

Drompp admits to some sadness at the thought of leaving the classroom.

“I love teaching,” he says.

“I was reminded of that recently when I got a postcard from a student who is now studying in China. It is very gratifying to me that she thought of the class in which we studied the emperor who is pictured on the card. We really do have great students at Rhodes.”

On the other hand, “I won’t miss grading! Over the years I’ve learned that I enjoy working with the faculty as well as with the students, and this job gives me a new way to do that.” R

Examining the Environment

By Marci Deshaies Woodmansee '90

Photography by Justin Fox Burks

How did Columbus' arrival in the New World impact the native population? What happens to the environment of an area when you start building parking lots? In what ways can population, disease and technology impact war, power and sovereignty? What does "national security" mean from an environmental standpoint?

Students at Rhodes are getting the opportunity to tackle these complex issues and many more through a newly expanded Environmental Studies program—all made possible by a major grant from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation.

With the Mellon Grant providing more than $500,000 over the next three years, Rhodes has created an interdisciplinary course of study that crosses humanities, natural and social sciences and greatly enhances what began as an Environmental Science minor in the natural sciences just a few years ago. Students are now exploring aspects of ecological anthropology, environmental archaeology and the politics of pathogens, to name just a few new topics of study, under the guidance of three faculty fellows whose appointments were funded by the Mellon Grant award. The new

Tait Keller

Environmental Studies program helps position Rhodes as a leader in the national higher education conversation on the environment, and is another area of study in which the college can take full advantage of its urban location.

"Our faculty has created three postdoctoral positions emphasizing environmental policy, which adds both depth and breadth to our program, along with teaching experience in a liberal arts environment for humanities Ph.D.s," says Rhodes President William E. Troutt. "The program plays to our strengths in interdisciplinary learning that crosses traditional departmental boundaries. The timing is ideal for Rhodes as we implement several new initiatives that continue to integrate academic and experiential learning, and we are very grateful to the Mellon Foundation for this support.”

According to Michael Drompp, vice president for Academic Affairs and dean of the faculty, the Rhodes faculty is due the credit for successfully winning the prestigious grant, and the newly expanded Environmental Studies program is already building bridges in terms of uniting different disciplines.

“For years, before the [Environmental Science] minor was created, we sputtered along trying to put together some sort of an environmental program,” he says. “I was quite pleased when we adopted the philosophy of first building on our strength in sciences with the Environmental Science minor. I believe that successful program was an important component in our proposal to the Mellon Foundation.”

While the new Environmental Studies courses

“Our History, International Studies and Anthropology/Sociology departments are hosting the new postdocs at Rhodes,” explains Drompp, “but the program has the potential to impact students across an even wider variety of disciplines and courses of study. It is really exciting because it’s such a broad-based initiative. The new courses are intended to appeal to a great number of students, not just those who want to minor in Environmental Science.”

Biology Department professor David Kesler, who helped develop the original Environmental Science minor and who will direct the expanded interdisciplinary program, agrees that it is an ambitious effort.

have interest for students in a wide variety of disciplines at Rhodes, the History, Anthropology/Sociology and International Studies departments are particularly happy about welcoming new faculty fellows in their specific disciplines.

With a Ph.D. in history from Georgetown, faculty fellow Tait Keller is guiding students in the exploration of the development of human society and the ways in which human experience is lived in an ecological context. Jennifer Sciubba, who has her Ph.D. in international studies from the University of Maryland, is sharing the most compelling aspects of her work at the Pentagon and helping students explore what she describes as her broad, nontraditional view of international relations. And with a Ph.D. in anthropology and minor in paleoecology from the University of Minnesota, Rob Lusteck brings a distinctly archaeological perspective to students examining ecological and anthropological aspects of environmental issues.

“When we were offered the chance to apply to host one of these postdoctoral fellows, it made perfect sense to me try to bring in someone with an interest in environmental archaeology,” explains Anthropology/Sociology chair Susan Kus. “Rob is teaching students about ecological anthropology, which examines how other cultures—particularly those we’d consider indigenous to their particular area—understand their environment and their place in the larger ecological scheme. He’s also an archaeologist, so he brings an understanding of how people through time lived in this area in North America—and a historical and prehistorical perspective to how humans and the environment interacted with one another here.”

For History Department chair Gail Murray, the fact that the Environmental Studies courses are bridging natural sciences, social sciences and humanities fits well with Rhodes’ emphasis on a liberal arts experience that produces articulate, well-read, engaged citizens.

“Environmental historians are asking some of the most cutting-edge questions in the field of environmental studies,” Murray says. “These scholars confront questions about the development of industry, the use of natural resources, the history and politics of consumption and the relationship of science and technology to society at large. They examine urban planning and suburban sprawl, and the interaction between cultural values and the setting in which we live. The histories of these pertinent areas are often absent from current debates, but to understand where we are environmentally, we need to know what political, social and ethical decisions got us here.”

Like his colleagues in the History and Anthropology/Sociology departments, International Studies chair Steve Ceccoli is excited about the opportunity Rhodes has to continue offering an innovative interdisciplinary curriculum for students.

“Recruiting new faculty members in our departments has allowed us to bring together scholars from diverse fields and enable them to share their insights,”

*“Solutions to today’s environmental problems demand a diverse background
of experience and study.

of our liberal arts and sciences tradition is the examination of questions
from multiple perspectives.”*

—Professor David Kesler

he says. “I expect that this opportunity will create several excellent synergies, many of which we have not yet anticipated.”

All three postdoctoral fellows point to the opportunity to teach in an intimate liberal arts environment as one of the deciding factors in accepting their appointments at Rhodes. The chance to shape a new course of study was also part of the appeal.

“Carol Ekstrom, David Kesler and others have certainly laid a solid foundation for the new Environmental Studies program, and seem to have successfully drummed up a lot of interest and support for it,” says Jennifer Sciubba. “Now it’s up to us to bring our own unique perspectives and talents and see their vision through.”

Sciubba plans to do just that through her ecological politics course, which challenges the notion that international relations is all about states, bombs and money. Her Pentagon research on population and nontraditional security will be equally interesting for students wishing to explore feminist and environmental perspectives on national security.

“I hope to show students that there are multiple ways of looking at the world and that there are other issues just as important as war and power,” she says. “I also think it is important to connect to the local community so that students can feel that what they are learning is tangible. There are international issues in Memphis, such as refugee communities of people who were forced away from home by environmental and political issues, and there are local connections between pollution and poverty that mirror what’s going on in less industrialized countries. There are many commonalities, and by looking at what is happening right here, students can better understand what is happening abroad.”

The opportunities to connect to the local community will undoubtedly have great appeal for Rhodes students, who are already well-known for putting theory into practice and testing classroom concepts in real-world settings.

“If you’re going to study the environment, you have to be out in it!” Keller says with a laugh. “I think these new courses are not only an excellent addition to the curriculum, but also a great opportunity to do work beyond the Rhodes College campus. One example is sustainable development on the Memphis riverfront and all along the Mississippi River. I think our work in Environmental Studies will have a part to play in that. There are also some pretty serious environmental justice issues here in Memphis that we can examine. One of the ways Rhodes can really set itself apart compared to similar programs is by capitalizing on our urban environment in exploring such issues. I think that will really appeal to the kinds of students who come to Rhodes.”

Sciubba agrees. “Having a strong environmental program here, situated in Memphis, allows us to plug into the community and demonstrate that there are people in the area interested in green issues,” she says. “That makes us a part of the movement, not a city left behind.”

Lusteck echoes these sentiments in describing how Environmental Studies will make a difference at Rhodes and beyond.

“One of the reasons this program was funded was that people are becoming more aware of environmental problems,” he says. “For example, in Tennessee, there are several EPA-designated Superfund sites (an uncontrolled or abandoned place where hazardous waste is located, which can possibly affect local ecosystems or people). There are all sorts of environmental changes that can happen with everything humans do, and sometimes they can be fairly catastrophic. Often you will see people in some degree of power who have stepped on little people and caused areas of environmental degradation that have negatively impacted the lifestyle of the less powerful segment.

“With society’s increased awareness of certain environmental issues, it’s a good time to examine other cultures and the ways they approach the environment,” he continues. “We teach 20 students, and we hope they go out and teach 20 more. I’d like to help create a strong Environmental Studies program here by teaching young people to be aware of these issues, so they can use that knowledge in their future and try to fix these problems.”

Kesler says it is critical to pull out all the stops in tackling today’s environmental problems.

“Why is this program important?” he asks. “Because it’s critical that we expose tomorrow’s business, civic and academic leaders to these issues. Solutions to today’s environmental problems demand a diverse background of experience and study, and the heart of our liberal arts and sciences tradition is the examination of questions from multiple perspectives. My long-term, blue-sky hope for this program is an Environmental Studies major that allows students to explore environmental issues from the perspectives of the natural sciences, humanities, social sciences and the fine arts. I hope that a large proportion of Rhodes courses will fold discussion and study of environmental issues into their content, and that study of the environment will become one of our mission statements.” R

OPEN RHODES

By Martha Hunter Shepard '66

Photography by Justin Fox Burks

Ready, set, go! That's how most alums and current students over the age of 20 would sum up the first days they spent at Rhodes. In one week's time, they would move in, meet their classmates and a host of peer assistants, attend orientation sessions, register and begin classes. Depending on one's class year, Parent/Family Weekend would be a long two or three months off.

That's the way it was—until two summers ago, when Open Rhodes was born. It's an aptly-named two-day residential summer orientation program for incoming students, parents invited. The concept was designed by a committee of faculty, staff and students who knew exactly what was needed and worked quickly during the 2007 spring semester to bring it about that summer. Why the change? Incoming students and their parents wanted—and needed—more time to assimilate, and they let the college know about it, says Marcus Langford, director of New Student Programs.

"In their evaluations of the old system, students said they felt a high level of anxiety because there was a lot to accomplish over a relatively short period of time," Langford explains. "In just a few days, they had to think about what they were going to major in, register for classes, meet their academic adviser and other new students and orient themselves to the campus. Plus, students didn't have regular communication with the college between the time they'd paid their deposit in the spring until they arrived in August. There was a huge gap that wasn't allowing them to develop a connection with Rhodes. All this, coupled with our desire to help students make that connection earlier rather than later, led us to Open Rhodes."

In June and July, students and their parents attend one of four two-day sessions. Each is geared to accommodate up to 125 students. Students are mailed an Open Rhodes Resource Book beforehand, a 32-page booklet filled with valuable information on how the college works. When they arrive for the session, students stay on campus, parents in hotels.

On campus, the entire Rhodes community is involved. Some 30 faculty participated this year, along with countless administrators and 45 current students, including 20 Open Rhodes Assistants, or ORAs, who met the incoming students, led panels and acted as tour guides.

At each Open Rhodes session, there are common informational panels, meals and receptions. There are also separate events for students or parents only. Everyone meets with faculty, current students and administrators in formal and informal settings.

There are faculty presentations on the Foundations Curriculum, humanities, fine arts, natural sciences and social sciences. Participants also hear from the dean of students and director of Campus Safety. There are sessions on academic transitions, Search/Life, community and diversity, community service, health and wellness and computer services. A panel of current students—a particular favorite—reveals what life is really like at 2000 North Parkway. Most important, each incoming student meets with a faculty member to plan his/her first semester schedule.

In addition, they leave with their ID cards and a sense of what their fall semester course schedule will be. At the end of Day 2, they and their parents know Rhodes backward and forward. In August, despite the temperature, move-in is a relative breeze.

Tom and Jacie Kuchan from Chicago attended Open Rhodes 2008 with their daughter Regan.

"I have a much better feel for the college, its environment, what its values are," Tom said on Day 2. "I know what to expect, the environment Regan will be living in, the opportunities and resources that are available to her."

Jacie enjoyed speaking with current students: "It was very informative and made me feel it's a good fit for Regan."

Jeff Tucker from Franklin, TN, who participated with wife Allison and son Sam, said, "As a parent, I feel more acclimated to the campus. I have a much better idea of what the expectations are. Hearing from the administration, faculty and students helped me gain confidence that Sam's going to be able to come here and be successful and independent on his own, and that there's a good support system for all of that here."

Sam agreed, adding, "It's also a good way to get to know people."

Jessica Cowan '11, an ORA who went through the first Open Rhodes in summer 2007, concurs with Sam.

"It is a good way to meet people. I know that when the students arrive in August, they'll see a familiar face and have someone to talk to. It's good for parents, too. Last year, my mom remembered everything she heard from the panels and would remind me of things throughout both semesters."

Langford says Jessica speaks for other sophomores who went through the first Open Rhodes.

"It meant so much to them and their parents. But on the flip side, there were a number of juniors and seniors who hadn't had the Open Rhodes experience and wanted to be involved—they wish they'd had that."

This year, 452 incoming students, more than 90%, attended Open Rhodes. (Other colleges and universities with summer orientation programs average 80% attendance, Langford says.) Of the 41 students who didn't come, most live or were traveling abroad, and a few had conflicting plans. The $110 it costs for a student to attend (included in the fall tuition bill) covers meals, materials and lodging in a residence hall (women in Robinson, men in Blount).

"Rhodes is unique. Most small, private colleges operate under a 'fall model,' the way Rhodes used to, whereas larger institutions, those with 7,000 students in the incoming class, conduct several two- to three-day summer orientation programs," explains Langford.

"Open Rhodes makes a difference," he continues. "It allows students to make a connection with the college earlier and gives them more time to think about some of the many transitions they're going to have to make, whether it's related to academics or meeting new people and encountering new things. It gives parents an understanding that there are people here who have their sons' and daughters' best interests at heart and who will go out of their way to help them succeed."

Attending Open Rhodes is Step 1. In August, now-confident first-years arrive for an action-packed five-day academic, social and cultural orientation before classes begin. And these days, Parent/Family Weekend is only one month away. R

The Well-Connected

By Martha Hunter Shepard '66

Photography by Trey Clark '89

Prof. Judith Haas, Jamie Augustine '89, La'Sandria Ward '09 and Chris Williams '11

Rhodes people are very well-connected. In fact, alumni, students, parents, trustees, faculty, staff, friends over time become linked for life in myriad ways.

It all starts in high school, when students who attend college fairs can meet Rhodes Admissions Office staff and perhaps representatives from RAVE (Rhodes Alumni Volunteer Effort). In some cities, Rhodes Chapters—groups of alumni and parents—invite accepted students for get-togethers to learn more about Rhodes.

The next step can involve a campus visit, when prospectives stay with students, meet faculty, attend classes and interview with Admissions.

When students enroll, alums and parents in some of their hometowns throw a send-off party.

Choosing Rhodes is one thing, getting here is another. Around 85 percent of Rhodes students receive some form of financial aid—federal, state, institutional or outside assistance or a combination of any of these. Add to that a history of Rhodes people looking after Rhodes people—more than 50 percent of students attend Rhodes with the help of scholarships or fellowships provided by people who love the college. Students who receive named scholarships sometimes have an opportunity to meet the donors. But there are thousands of others they won't meet—all the alumni and friends whose regular Annual Fund gifts go straight to financial aid and faculty salaries. Students also take courses from some faculty who hold endowed chairs named for people who love Rhodes, and they attend classes, and live, in buildings often named for the donors who provided them.

Relationships deepen throughout their Rhodes years. Thanks to faculty, staff, alumni, trustees, parents and friends, students' intellectual and personal growth flourish inside the classroom and beyond:

- Faculty mentors, whom their students will remember forever, guide them through rigorous courses, projects and research. They suggest and help them secure off-campus internships and counsel them on postgraduate work and careers.

- The Center for Outreach in the Development of the Arts (CODA) connects students with arts organizations in Memphis and around the country, thanks in large part to a grant from friends and the help of alumni and parents.

- The Buckman Center for International Education connects students with study and internships abroad. Several of the internships are provided by Rhodes trustees, alumni, parents and friends.

- Service scholarships and other programs administered by Rhodes CARES (Center for Academic Research and Education through Service) and the Chaplain's Office offer opportunities for service learning and community service. Several programs are provided by alumni and friends.

- Career Services and Alumni Relations put them on the trail of stateside and international internships and jobs, again, often through trustees, alumni, parents and friends.

- A highlight for Economics and Business Administration students is the annual New York City Career Tour in January, where they meet and network with Rhodes trustees, alumni, parents and friends, learning what it takes to work in the financial markets there.

- Rhodes chapters host career networking events for undergraduates in several cities throughout the year.

- At Homecoming, the Alumni Office sponsors panels of young alumni who live in New York and Washington, DC, to speak to current students about living and working in those cities. Homecoming 2008 added a similar health sciences symposium and a reception with Dan Cullen, Political Science professor who led discussions at several Rhodes Chapters around the country this fall.

The saga continues.

After commencement, some Rhodes Chapters welcome new alums with jobs in their city with, yes, a party, making sure they meet everyone across generations and widening their circle of acquaintances.

There's an old saying that your best friends are your college friends. A quick read of Class Notes reveals who and how many alumni make a point of getting together for mini-reunions on a regular basis. And nowadays, many alums stay in touch through either Rhodes' or their own Facebook and LinkedIn accounts.

Homecoming weekend is prime time for re-establishing old ties with classmates and faculty, yet throughout the year, some alums reconnect in different ways. Alumni authors are encouraged to send two of their books to the Barret Library—one for the Alumni Collection, the other for general circulation. Other alums who are tops in their field are invited to speak to classes in economics, natural sciences, English.

Whatever our relationship is to Rhodes, one could say we are linked (lynxed?)—for life.

Fashioning a Career

Art History major La'Sandria Ward '09 knows what it means to be well-connected. The Memphis native who attends Rhodes with a Dean's Fellowship and a Rhodes Grant, both provided by Annual Fund gifts to the college, also works on campus part time through the Federal Work-Study Program.

She's also academically well-connected. Last semester, Ward took a class in theater design "to fulfill a requirement."

But her talent for costume design led her professor, David Jilg '79, to suggest she apply for the section he would lead in the summer 2008 Rhodes Institute for Regional Studies. Three students would design the costumes for the January 2009 Opera Memphis production of "Scott Joplin and Treemonisha," a work that tells the story of composer Scott Joplin's struggle to have his opera "Treemonisha" produced during his lifetime.

Ward didn't need convincing. Nor did Katie Grills '10 and Natalija Kokoreva '10, who also signed on. The three participated in the program as fellows of Rhodes' Mike Curb Institute for Music, created in 2006 through a $5 million donation from the Mike Curb Family Foundation. Mike Curb is founder and chairman of Nashville-based Curb Records and the family foundation. The institute aims to foster awareness and understanding of the distinct musical traditions of the South and the impact of music on its culture, history and economy.

During the summer the trio thoroughly researched the opera "Treemonisha" and locales in which the Opera Memphis production are set, late 19th-century Texarkana, AR, and early 20th-century New York. They studied history, clothing styles, Joplin's life and a film production of the opera before finally "being turned loose" in says she and her colleagues will resolve the dilemma well before opening night.

The group met over the summer with Opera Memphis artistic director Michael Ching, showing him a PowerPoint presentation of their plans.

"Mr. Ching was happy about our color scheme. He said it looked like the one for an Opera Memphis 'Porgy and Bess' production, so they could pull some of those costumes and mix and match with ours, which is good because 'Treemonisha' has a 40-member chorus," says Ward.

Ching also liked several of the students' ideas, such as dressing both the chorus of dancing bears in Texarkana and the New York producers in the same suits.

Noting Ward's enthusiasm and work ethic, Prof. Jilg invited her to design the costumes for McCoy Theatre's February 2009 production of Neil Labute's play "Fat Pig," a request she readily accepted.

Earlier in the 2007-08 academic year, Ward took an art history course from her adviser, Prof. David McCarthy: Topics in Art History—Photographs from the Memphis World, 1949-1964. The Memphis World was an African-American newspaper published from 1931-73 whose photographers included such luminaries as Ernest Withers and the Hooks brothers. The class culminated in a joint project with

La'Sandria Ward '09

Hancock Fabrics where the project began to come to life.

"We wanted the costumes to be historically correct," explains Ward.

The trio agreed on colors, color schemes, which character should wear what, how the costumes would move, but Treemonisha's wardrobe is still "under consideration." Ward graciously the Memphis Brooks Museum of Art, which is mounting an exhibition of the photos through Jan. 5, 2009. Nineteen additional photographs were on view at Rhodes' Clough-Hanson Gallery earlier this fall. The students' assignment: to write the catalogue entries. All semester, they scrolled through microfilm at the public library and scoured the phone book for names of the subjects' relatives in hope of recording oral histories. Ward has three entries in the catalogue, all won at the microfilm reader; her subjects had no survivors.

Ward's academic connections have taken her into several realms in the community; now she's looking beyond.

"I once told Prof. McCarthy that I wanted to go into costume or fashion design. One day during the Institute this summer, Prof. Jilg told me he and Prof. McCarthy had been talking about me, and they decided it would probably be in my best interest to study abroad. Since then, I've been looking at schools in Paris, along with New York and Los Angeles."

Channeling the Renaissance

History major Chris Williams is studying to go to medical school. He's also minoring in French. His adviser is French professor Shira Malkin. Next year, with Malkin's help, he plans to study abroad in Aix-en-Provence. This year, with physics professor Ann Viano's help, he holds a prestigious physics fellowship. This happens at Rhodes sometimes. It also happens that there exists a peaceful coalition among Williams and the history, French and natural sciences faculty. They work it out. Biology professor Alan Jaslow, director of health professions advising, gives Williams plenty of help, too.

The sophomore from Baton Rouge, who attends Rhodes with the help of a Cambridge Fellowship (provided through Annual Fund giving), holds the Rhodes InMotion Musculoskeletal Research

Chris Williams '11

Fellowship. InMotion, a Memphis-based musculoskeletal institute, is a nonprofit orthopedic laboratory whose mission is to "reduce disability and to improve mobility for the musculoskeletal patient through translational research." Its research fellowship provides a

Rhodes undergraduate research opportunities in both clinic and laboratory for two summers and one academic year. Williams is involved in "determining the different rates of 'wear' among various hip implant-bearing materials in a patient population."

"My main area of focus is RSA—radio stereometric analysis," Williams says. "It's a process that was developed in Sweden where you basically take two X rays and fire them simultaneously at a target point—the hip, arm, leg. In surgery, when the hip implant is put into the body the surgeon shoots tantalum markers—tantalum is a heavy metal that shows up on X rays—in both the implant and the top of the femur. By doing this you can create a three-dimensional model of the hip, the implant, everything. Based on the position of the beads, you can figure out if the implant is moving, how much creep there is, how much wear. Normal X ray techniques allow us to look at this in millimeters; now we can see it in micrometers. It's really good for predicting whether or not a hip or knee implant is going to be successful in the long term. In the past, we haven't been able to predict that; you'd have to take it out of people after 20 years and see how the implant has performed."

Williams' fellowship allows him to work with people from the entire Memphis community. This summer, he worked with Dr. Robert Heck '91, an orthopedic oncologist at Campbell Clinic.

"In that project I looked at different ways to repair a humerus (the long bone of the upper arm that extends from shoulder to elbow) to prevent it from fracturing when it's been attacked by a tumor. In the late stages of cancer, patients develop bone metastases. It weakens the bone, makes it very fragile and likely to break. You remove the tumor and repair the bone in a way that stabilizes it and allows the patient to regain the use of that limb. The goal is to reduce pain and make the quality of life better for that person."

The summer project called for working with cadaver bones, a unique opportunity for a college sophomore, says Williams. At the end of the fellowship, he'll get to work on his own project, form his own questions, experiments, conclusions—"all before I'm a junior."

Back on campus, Williams the realist pursues his love of the liberal arts.

"If the med school thing doesn't work out, or if I decide that being a doctor isn't for me, I might be a teacher," he says. "I'm trying to keep my options open. I'm majoring in history because it's my interest—it's always been my favorite subject, and I figure if not now, when?"

Having these options, plus getting to know Rhodes people helped Williams choose Rhodes over four other colleges.

"I attended two gatherings for accepted students in New Orleans—one for Rhodes and one for another college," he says.

"That's where I decided Rhodes would be the place for me. I looked at the difference between the two kinds of people who went to these schools and realized I fit in a lot better with Rhodes people.

"Rhodes really does have your best interests at heart. That's one thing I've found about this place. My mom and dad are on the Parent Council. Every time they come home from a meeting, they say, 'They're really looking out for you here. They really want you all to succeed.'

"I know that for a fact—the opportunities I'm getting here are unparalleled."

Teaching Across the Board

Judith Haas, who teaches and serves the Rhodes community across the board, is connected to the college in many ways. An assistant professor of English who also teaches second-year Search and Feminist Theory, she also serves as:

- Chair of Women's Studies, which is undergoing a name change to the Gender and Sexuality Studies Program
- Co-director of postgraduate fellowships with Mike LaRosa, associate professor of history and director of the Latin American Studies Program

• Secretary-treasurer of the Rhodes chapter of Phi Beta Kappa
"In addition to teaching courses such as Chaucer, medieval lit, Dante and first-year writing seminar, I've taught the English Department's contribution to Search since I came to Rhodes six years ago—two to three courses a year in addition to one English course and Feminist Theory in the Women's Studies Program," says Haas. "I've always taught second-year Search, which covers the 1600s to the late 1980s. We begin with Machiavelli and end with a Don DeLillo novel, White Noise. I like teaching sophomores—I think they can be somewhat overwhelmed in the first year of the course, and by the second, they're starting to have opinions. I enjoy that."

Haas particularly enjoys teaching Feminist Theory.

"It's sort of been my baby, re-working and re-thinking it every year, trying to figure out what students minoring in the program really need," she says. "I guess I teach in the two most interdisciplinary programs in the college—Search and Women's Studies. There are many ways in which they're antagonistic to each other—for example, much of Search involves great books great men have written, and the Feminist Theory class is critical of that tradition. But you have to know that tradition in order to see the critique. It's very useful to me to say in Feminist Theory class, 'Do you remember what John Locke wrote about equality in the 17th century? Well, here's what he was missing.' I like to have those two traditions to speak to each other, and students need that Search education to understand the Feminist Theory class."

The Women's Studies Program is for all students, Haas emphasizes.

"We've changed the name to attract more students. We've definitely had some wonderful male students, but it's been difficult to draw them in. It's the study of gender, although the topic of women is still a major part of what we do. Some students come in very skeptical, then find themselves challenged. We want to show students that this is a legitimate area of knowledge—that challenging norms is legitimate."

The program offers a minor, and internships are available at a variety of local and national agencies.

Haas' concern for students is evident outside the classroom. As co-director of postgraduate fellowships, she and Prof. LaRosa counsel students on academic life after Rhodes. Because these are new positions which they began coordinating well before classes began this fall, there is more to be written on the subject in the future.

Well cast in another leadership role, Haas has worked with the Rhodes chapter of Phi Beta Kappa since coming to the college. A Phi Beta Kappa herself, she holds her Ph.D. from the University of California, Santa Cruz, and B.A. from Wesleyan University in Connecticut.

"As a member of the PBK executive committee, I helped choose memberships and interview students for the Peyton Nalle Rhodes Award. Four years ago, I took over as secretary-treasurer from [biology professor] Terry Hill. I plan events, the induction, luncheon and visiting speaker every year. It's a nice way to be involved.

"The thing I like best about it is the many second-year students I meet in Search who, two years later, become members of Phi Beta Kappa.

"Doing what I do, you reach so many students. I really enjoy that."

Fanning the Flame

Rhodes trustee Jamie Augustine '89 has been connected with Rhodes ever since he was a student. The senior vice president of the Memphis office of international investment services company Raymond James firmly believes that "Rhodes is a lifelong commitment if you'll allow it to be."

Augustine, who majored in economics and business administration, "had a job right out of college working for Doug Southard '75, owner/principal of Southard Financial in Memphis. My second job was in New York working for Bill Michaelcheck '69 and John Sites '74 at Bear Stearns.

"That made a huge impact on my career," he continues. "In turn, when I came home in 1994 and worked at Morgan Keegan, a lot of people there had interns, but my group didn't. So I immediately started bringing in Rhodes students. It wasn't long before I started getting calls from people in other divisions asking me to introduce them to someone from Rhodes.

"Our students are always well prepared, and I'm seeing it all over again. Doug Lensing '08, who was a student trustee and president of Rhodes Student Government last year, was interested in the bond market and would talk to me about it. When an opening in my firm came up this summer, Doug came to work for us. He now works directly with me in our strategies group. From the beginning, everyone at Raymond James has been most impressed with him."

Augustine is thankful to this day for the opportunities he had at Rhodes.

"Because of the size of the school you learn to communicate what you know. In my business, it's not just what you know, it's how effectively you can communicate what you know, both in writing and orally," he says.

"For example, Dr. John Planchon, one of my economics professors, dropped an entire letter grade from one of my papers for one grammatical error. I went into his office and said, 'You've got to be kidding—you're giving me a B on this?' He said, 'If you turn in a grammatical error like that when you're in the real world, they're going to can the project and they're probably going to can you.' Now, when people send me things for review, yes, I mark it up.

"When I was at Bear Stearns I called professor Planchon and professors Chuck Orvis and Mark McMahon and said, 'I have to thank you for the attention I got at Rhodes. I'm coming into a rookie class with Ivy League MBAs. I am so intimidated, but I know I can do it thanks to the quality of my education.' I tell people all the time I can't imagine that I could have received a better education anywhere else."

Augustine, who played football for the Lynx, values lifelong friends and lessons gained at Rhodes.

"My closest friends are a group from childhood and the group from college," he says. "The opportunity I had to play football taught some life lessons. You learn about teamwork and that life isn't always fair, but you have to hang in there for your teammates. And in the classroom, you know you're going to be successful at Rhodes because you have to learn."

Both Augustine and his wife, Tanya, who have three young children, are active in the life of the college.

"My wife didn't go to Rhodes, but she feels she did," he laughs. "I'm not going to force our children to go to Rhodes, but I will insist they take a long, hard look at it.

"It's never too late to re-engage in Rhodes and stay engaged. It's a central part of my life. So many people have such fond memories of the time they were here. When you get re-connected, you feel like you're still here." R

From the Alumni Relations Office

Dear Alumnus/α,

Greetings from the Alumni Relations Office!

This issue of Rhodes magazine celebrates connections. As prefacing remarks for this column, I am reminded of the first Chapter Leaders Seminar our office hosted in June 2006. Attending the conference were approximately 20 alumni from what was then 10 chapters. Among those in attendance, we had alumni from the '50s through the class of 2004.

The program began on Friday evening with icebreakers and exercises geared toward finding common values attributed to the Rhodes experience. What emerged through the process was recognition that regardless of when participants attended the college, there was a strong sense of shared community—a sense of connection that bound them together. This seemed to have the biggest impact upon an alumnus from the class of 1957, but it was wasted on no one.

Connections are at the core of the work in the Alumni Relations Office. Much of our programming is delivered through Rhodes Chapters, which serve to connect alumni and parents of students at the community level. We ask our chapters to help recruit students, support student learning, embrace newcomers, help the young find work and assist with fundraising. Routinely, chapters exceed our expectations.

In addition to working with chapters, Alumni Relations staff members constantly encourage students and young alumni to contact alumni in fields they wish to explore or enter. As they do, we hear from them that the contacts they made resulted in meaningful opportunities that have often included landing first jobs. There are times when they are amazed at the assistance they receive from our established alumni. We seize that teachable moment to plant seeds, saying, “This is how it works ... you receive the gifts of this community when you have need. Your turn to give comes next ... help those who follow you.”

Without the shared values of community members, grounded in the college's core values and Vision for Rhodes, the connections among alumni would have no substance or foundation upon which to rest.

As it is, however, I marvel at the degree of concern and care you show for those within and outside the Rhodes family. You embrace the young, particularly, which not only helps them in their development and careers, but also serves as a powerful example of “This is how it works ... ” so that they will be prepared to help those who follow.

Thank you for giving meaning to Rhodes connections.

Best regards,

Bud Richey
Associate Vice President and Director of Alumni Relations

When the fall issue of Rhodes comes out, we will have just celebrated our 50th class reunion! That was unimaginable in 1958.

John Quinn, a practicing attorney in Washington, DC, let us know that he's alive, well and apparently incredibly busy. He participates in a 7 a.m. exercise group three mornings a week, teaches a junior high Sunday school class, serves as chair of a DC Bar committee on hearings and is chair of the Metropolitan Club's library committee. That last responsibility includes managing a 15,000-volume library, plus all of the club's archival material and sponsoring 25 or more literary-oriented special events a year. John never was lazy!

Dickie Jones stays busy not only with his real estate appraisal business in San Diego, but also doing some serious traveling. He and wife Joan took a three-week trip to China in fall 2007, seeing all of the sights in Beijing (Forbidden City, Great Wall), went on to Xian where they saw the terra cotta army, then spent nine days sailing down the Yangtze River to Shanghai. They stopped at villages along the way, toured the Three Gorges Dam, then went to Hong Kong for some

The Charitable Annuity: The Gift That Keeps Giving

The charitable gift annuity is an increasingly popular way to make a planned gift to Rhodes while enjoying fixed income for life and possible tax benefits. In exchange for a contribution of $10,000 or more, in cash or appreciated stock, Rhodes can offer you a fixed annual payment for life, based on your contribution, your age and the current annuity rates established by the American Council on Gift Annuities.

Annuity rates are subject to change, but the amount of your lifetime annual payment is determined at the time the charitable gift annuity is funded. Your annual payment will never change and will continue regardless of how long you live.

Age	Annuity Rate
70 .....	6.1%
75 .....	6.7%
80 .....	7.6%
85 .....	8.9%
90 & over .....	10.5%

You may establish a charitable gift annuity for you and your spouse or any other loved one, but the annuity rates will be slightly lower for two people. For additional information, please contact:

shopping. In June they took a land/cruise tour of Alaska including Fairbanks, Denali National Park and Mt. Whitney. Over the summer their four grandchildren from South Carolina and Oregon visited them, making life lively.

Also mentioning San Diego was old Navy man Robert Neil Templeton. He and wife Karen, who live in Virginia Beach, VA, planned an August trip to San Diego. They have six grandchildren and enjoy summer beach visitors.

We received fascinating news from Ben Dukes in Cedar Rapids, IA. His city was dreadfully damaged by the big flood. Ben lives on a hill so he wasn't washed out, though electricity was interrupted and there was a water-use ban for several days. He serves on two boards for recreation trails in the city and county, and those will take a lot of work to get back in shape. It seems that Ben is a BIG traveler. "Since I left Southwestern I've been a travel hack, and I've gone just about everywhere in the world that I wanted to see (two days after I finally retired I flew around the world). Actually, I got the travel bug two ways at Southwestern; one was from the Man course when I fell in love with the concept of Gothic architecture and flying buttresses and all that; the other was in our junior year when John Quinn, Richard Teaford '57 and I and drove to New York, Boston, et al, during a spring break. I loved the traveling so much that I've been doing it ever since. I've been spending January in Spain for several years; it's much warmer than

Iowa."

Also traveling, but with grandchildren, is Richard Dortch from Jackson, MS. He tells his own stories so well: "Recently we attended Grandparents Camp, a fun-filled week at Sagamore in the Adirondacks sponsored by Elderhostel. The little ones and their grandparents participated side-by-side in those traditional summer camp activities such as hiking, canoeing, swimming, square dancing, crafts, campfire songs, lawn games, catching creatures who live under rocks, storytelling, talent night and more. Parents were not allowed. At the end of the week the adults were ready for assisted living!"

Betty Russell sent a quick note from Piggott, AR, saying that she was looking forward to seeing old friends at the reunion in October.

Milton and Mary Joy Pritchard Knowlton '61 live in Memphis and have two sons, Scott and Geoff, both of whom work in their father's firm, Lewis and Knowlton Financial Group Inc. Mary Joy recently returned from a trip to London and Paris with 12-year-old grandson Geoff Jr. Milton continues to be honored in his field, becoming a 43-time member of the Million Dollar Round Table and receiving the George M. "Smoky" Russell Outstanding Agent Award for the third consecutive year from the Memphis agency of Mass Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Kip and Louis Zbinden joined the rest of their family (9 adults and 7 grandchildren) at a "fabulous house" their doctor son in Charlotte, NC, had rented at Baldhead Island, NC (yes, it really is named that and it's wonderful—editor's note). The Zbindens planned to join the Miebaums (Marion Forsythe) in Chicago to celebrate Neville and Johnny Bryan's 50th anniversary in August.

We missed Mike and Jane Ivy at the reunion since they were in Hawaii. He wrote earlier that they were busily planning shore excursions—and saving their pennies. What a lovely trip.

Sam Cole writes, "My youngest of three sons was here in July from Hong Kong for a three-week Cole family reunion; he brought my two-year-old grandson, Patrick Cole, with him. My son, Trey (Sam III), is an English teacher at the University of Hong Kong. My middle son David came down from Alexandria, VA, where he is an ESL high school teacher. My oldest son Jonathan has a master's degree in counseling from UT Memphis; he is in charge of quality control at the Memphis Mental Health Hospital. My brother Jim Cole '67 joined us. If anybody in our class will have any grandchildren here during our fall reunion, they ought to plan a trip with them to the Children's Museum on Central Avenue at Hollywood. My grandson loved the place so much that we went back three times!"

Billy '57 and Sue Robinson McLean celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary this summer with a wonderful cruise down the Rhine and Danube Rivers (Grand Circle Tour). "Our anniversary night included a marvelous concert in Vienna. I am still enjoying real estate and Billy, his business, Dauphin Environmental Equipment LLC. In our spare time we love our part-time condo on the beach at Perdido Key. Also take in many cultural activities Mobile offers including season tickets to symphony and opera. We attend most art shows around town, pops concerts, occasional plays and enjoy season tickets to University of South Alabama basketball games. Mobile is a great place to live and visit. We have spare bedrooms and would love to host any of our Rhodes friends."

As always, we are grateful for your news.

send news of family and friends. This time she reports of a visit from Noel and Joan Waggoner Bacchus. Bates' daughter and two grandsons live nearby in Winston-Salem. Her photographer son and his wife live in Barcelona, Spain. Check out his Web site at E4fotos.com.

Ed and Martha Dale Stock joined Sam and Hervey Doughty Martin '58 and Louis '58 and Kip Shoaf Zbinden '58 and other 1962 graduates of Union-PSCE in a special service honoring Old Testament scholar Dr. James L. Mays. Ed also writes with special pride of his visit to Rhodes with his granddaughter, Sloane Stock, and of the hospitable treatment afforded them by the Admissions Office.

Our most peripatetic classmate continues to be San Andrews Robertson and husband Bill. This time she reports trips to Norway and Scotland and later to the Czech Republic and Slovakia with their two younger sons and wives. San and Bill will soon have seven grandchildren.

Walker and Diane Wellford and Betty Gandy '61, spent two weeks in Austria visiting Will and Lauren Wellford Deming '87 and their grandsons. Will is the director of the University of Portland Salzburg summer program. The group enjoyed concerts, hikes, touring and eating lots of excellent chocolate.

Congratulations to several classmates who are celebrating 50 years of marriage!

After four decades of serving as a Presbyterian minister, Jim Bullock is retiring. Through his ministry, he served as an influential leader in the civil rights movement and has spent much of his career reaching out to abused and homeless children in Ocala, FL. He was featured in the May 31, 2008, edition of the Ocala Star-Banner.

Suzanne Burns writes, "I am now on the board of the Scottish Society of Middle Tennessee—I am Campbell on both sides of the family. Toured Ireland last summer and Scotland this summer. Also this summer, I visited friends in Canada and went to the Stratford Theatre Festival."

Sterling (Jim) Greenwood had a busy summer: "As publisher of the Aspen Free Press, I wrote about the street scene in Denver during the Democratic National convention. Also this summer, I covered Condoleezza Rice being interviewed by Walter Isaacson at the Aspen Institute. Before that, it was King Abdullah II of Jordan, the Dalai Lama and John McCain. I started out in 'big city' journalism with The Commercial Appeal in Memphis, covering street violence in the wake of the King assassination. I moved on to Aspen, covering the western slope in Colorado for another Scripps-Howard newspaper, the Denver Rocky Mountain News, before becoming editor of the Aspen Daily News, then publisher of the Aspen Free Press, 'Aspen's Worst Newspaper,' which I established in 1982."

Lynn Parsons writes, "I am still practicing general surgery in Bellefontaine, OH, and am old enough to have twin grandsons and be on Medicare. I would like classmates and other interested sportsmen to know that I recently published a book about my late father titled Showman Shooter-The Life and Times of Herb Parsons. Information about the book can be obtained by going to <http://showmanshooter.com>."

Seattle painter Randy Hayes has been awarded a prestigious Neddy Artist Fellowship, an unrestricted cash award of $15,000 granted to visual artists in the Northwest. His exhibition, "Ruins of Mississippi and Other Places in the World," will run from Jan. 13-March 8, 2009, at the University of Mississippi Museum. The series of works compares and contrasts the ruins left by Hurricane Katrina in Mississippi with those in other parts of the world.

Marvin and Betty Walker Hudson are encountering a number of wildlife in their backyard this year. "Normally we have deer munching our landscaping, but this year we have had several bears and a raccoon visiting us," says Betty. "They climb our high wooden fence with just a grasp of the top of the fence and then swing over. A bear entered our backyard while it was still light outside. Our dog began to bark and the next thing I knew, the bear walked on our patio up to our door. My husband threw things at him to get him out of the yard, but the bear jumped into a tree and climbed about 40 feet, then peered down at us and the neighbors who had gathered to watch. Another bear was discovered as a neighbor started back toward her house and found one sitting on her porch. They were not aggressive so the Wildlife officers wouldn't come out or do anything about moving them. We have to be careful not to leave any bird feeders or garbage out, which we don't. We have a trip to Europe planned for October. This will be a special anniversary sort of trip for us and another couple who are friends."

Dixie DeMotive Johnson reports that she and Bob went to Scotland in mid-August to be in Edinburgh for the festival.

Terri and Lee Pevsner of Merced, CA, attended a wedding in Athens, GA, for the daughter of a friend from Helena, AR. Also in attendance were Brady '67 and Betty (Wray) Anderson '68, Herbert '67 and Jann (Riddle) Hill '68 and Judy Capes. The wedding featured an eclectic mix of music, with bagpipes present at the ceremony and '70s music at the reception, which brought everyone to the dance floor.

Billy Heiter and family took a trip to Maine this summer—seven people in all. He said that he and wife Judy got tired of driving to see this and that lighthouse—"just wanted to relax and enjoy where we were staying. Our neighbors

(and caretakers as it turned out) were Dan and Jean. Jean is an artist with her own Web site and some very nice Asian brush paintings. Dan took us (and the g-kids) lobster fishing with him. We ate the local product, 'played with' the seals and met the prisoners from the local big house—nice shop in Thomaston—and saw every lighthouse (son-in-law addiction) available, including walking all the way out to Rockland Breakwater in the absolute fog. Next junket—Judy and yours truly are headed for Anchorage by ourselves."

Susan Livingston Smith took early retirement from her position as a professor in the School of Social Work at Illinois State University and moved with her husband Jim '69 to Raleigh, NC, to be near her children and grandchildren. She writes that she "now works for the Evan B. Donaldson Adoption Institute doing research on adoption (which has been my main area of research throughout my career) and with a local agency doing home studies for international adoptions. Jim is executive director of the International Lactation Consultants Association. (Although he's learned a lot about breastfeeding, he is responsible for managing the professional association itself.) Through his job we sometimes get to travel to international locations (most recently Australia), which we both really enjoy!" Their son Geof teaches in the veterinary school at N.C. State and daughter Shannon, a social worker, lives in Chapel Hill. "We especially enjoy being near our two grandkids, ages 5 and 6."

George Abraham is making news again. He has been asked to host a radio talk show on work issues. "I will send you more info when the show starts. It was a result of someone who read my book who owns a radio station. I am praying that it will work out, as so many people need answers to their work problems and cannot afford professional coaching. This would give many people access to sound advice just by picking up the phone."

Beth Pevsner Polanka took a fabulous trip to France in June where she did a walk through Provence "with a bunch of other middle-aged women, many more fit than I, but I survived it! Besides work, I spent time in my garden this summer and played as much as possible."

Jimmy Whittington wrote: "It would be impossible for me to tell everyone how much the reunion in October meant to Annette and me. We still have a hole in our souls, but are picking up the pieces and putting some of them back together. Annette finished the year teaching and decided to go back one more year before taking retirement. I am still trading the market for the private investment group and giving historical tours for Shiloh. I resigned my disaster response position in December because I did not think I needed to be away for weeks at a time. One month later, I was asked by the local churches in our county to head up an interdenominational ministry to provide emergency assistance to those who need it in our area. We now have 32 churches on board, with 226 volunteers. We meet with clients and help with emergency aid, but also sit down with them to figure out what the real problems are, and then work with those who are willing to try to turn their lives around. It turns out to be disaster response for individuals and single families instead of communities. I have found this to be extremely fulfilling and in some cases healing."

Sam Highsmith sends cheers from Arkansas. He and Beth are traveling a bit. "In May we made a trip to Missouri, Wisconsin and Illinois, ending in Chicago for the annual pen show. She and I have each had recent surgeries. Beth had a Spiegelian hernia repaired in late April. It was not an emergency surgery but as close to it as one would want to get. I had a total right knee replacement May 27. It has only been recently that I have been able to say I am glad I had it done. Up to that point the pain was difficult to manage. Beth and I are each recovered. In August we took another road trip, this one through Tennessee, Virginia, West Virginia, ending at the Washington, DC, Pen Show. The best ongoing news is that all three of my children are now living in Little Rock and Beth and I are delighted to be able to see them far more frequently than when they were scattered."

My dear roomie K.E. Field Boyd flew to Maine in July for a fun-filled week with me in Winter Harbor. Besides the lobster, Acadia National Park, 7 a.m. swims and copious bottles of white wine, her favorite thing was sleeping with ocean breezes coming in her windows. Memphis in the summer can do that to you.

Jinger Jackson Campbell writes, "I haven't heard from classmates in a long time and was pleased to hear that you all were trying to get us back together. Larry and I lived in Sherwood, AR, after we retired from UT Center for the Health Sciences, but we moved to Columbus, GA, in 1994, and now we're across the river in Phenix City, AL."

David Capes was on our list of missing classmates, but thanks to Carol Ann Colclough Strickland, we were able to locate him. David says he is in St. Louis where he has been practicing law for 31 years. He was recently at a wedding and ran into Brady '67 and Betty Wray Anderson as well as Herbert and Jan Riddle Hill '67.

Bruce Cook writes, "In 1999, Claudia '69 retired after 32 years as a 5th-grade teacher, and I retired from the U.S. Department of Justice after 25 years. I retired Sept. 5, 2008, from the United Methodist Church where I have been in parole and chaplain positions throughout my career. We have a 38-foot boat on Lake Allatoona and can be found there. We are both heavily involved in our local church and volunteer a lot there."

Suzanne Troth Donaldson writes: "My golf team did not advance to the national tournament, although we had the lowest gross score and we are proud of our performance. We tied with the Memphis team and they beat us in a scorecard playoff."

Jennifer Fey Edmonds has lived in Memphis since graduation, taught special education for Shelby County Schools and later worked for Memphis City Schools in the psychological services division. She has been married to Oscar Edmonds III for 35 years and they have two children, Brian and Lauren, daughter-in-law Stephanie and one grandchild, Davis. She works part time in their family business, St. Clair Foods Inc., along with both of their children and her husband. She enjoys gardening, playing with their two golden retrievers and most of all babysitting Davis. She hosted our reunion at her home in October.

Susan Lucas writes that in June, she had the double pleasure of seeing both Noni Harvin Buchanan and Peggy Crull. Noni was in Florida for the Mississippi dentists' meeting, and they had a great lunch along with Noni's little sister Mimi and their husbands. A few days later in New York, Lukie and her husband Richard, taking granddaughter Catie (10) on her first visit to the big city, had dim sum in Chinatown and spent the afternoon with Peggy. They had a great time, seeing two shows, eating at great restaurants and visiting numerous museums. Lots of talk about the upcoming reunion and a new Web site—susanlucasart.com.

Ann Bruce Pineda writes, "My husband, the finest man I've ever known, is from El Salvador. We met in Memphis in 1971. He was studying and I was teaching Spanish at Geeter High. He has worked for a Japanese-Salvadorian textile factory, managed a textile factory, and is now a financial consultant working for a firm that makes clothes. We both retired seven years ago and have a small pension but can still work. I was at Escuela Americana for 25 years, the last nine as a SSL teacher, and have been working this past year at Colegio Internacional, which is much smaller, teaching history, economics and current issues. We have two children, a boy and a girl, who are both married and have children. I love being a grandmother to two (with a third on the way) and teaching and learning history. During vacation, I'm back to the gym to my dance class everyday."

Jim Williamson recently joined the faculty of the University of Memphis as a professor in the new Department of Architecture. Jim signed copies of his new novel, The Architect, at Homecoming.

Memphis architect Louis Pounders of Askew Nixon Ferguson Architects, has been named 2009 chair of the American Institute of Architects (AIA) National Committee on Design (COD). He assumed his duties at the August COD Conference in Copenhagen, Denmark. The COD was created in 1968 to promote design excellence among members of the AIA, the broader design community and the public at large, both nationally and internationally. Louis is currently designing a new library for Southwest Tennessee Community College in Memphis, an interpretive center at the Alex Haley House Museum, in Henning, TN, and a fine arts building for the University of Tennessee at Martin.

Mauria Jackson Aspell is a retired psychotherapist, having been in private practice for almost 30 years. "My husband Bob, a urologist, and I have been married for 29 years. We have four children and seven grandchildren. I am loving the grandchildren part! I saw Chip Hatzenbuehler '67 in Pocatello, ID, a couple of years back. He teaches there at Idaho State U., as does his wife Linda (a Ph.D. forensic psychologist) who was giving a seminar on forensic psychology that I attended. She was fantastic! They had a flat tire on one of the days, and he came to get her for lunch. Really unbelievable, yes? Neither of us recognized the other! Only our names—but that was enough. My brother Don Jackson '67 has retired from OB but is still practicing gynecology in Hot Springs."

Sarah Lodge Frulla, Conie Lowry Abernathy, Dabney Nicholls Haugh and Louise Pryor Campbell were together again for their annual summer retreat to Grayton Beach in July. They have enjoyed a week together at the beach with their children for the past 19 years. This is the first year that none of the children was able to join them. These Rhodes friends report that one of the best parts of their week together is that their children have been able to grow up together and have developed friendships as close as their own. In fact, two of the children are alums: Leland Haugh '04 and Nick

Campbell '06. Sarah, who lives in Chattanooga, is the director of business and finance at Saint Andrews-Sewanee School. Conie recently moved to Covington, LA, where she and her husband Bill enjoy seeing Jeff Tarkington and his wife Betsy who live in nearby Madisonville. Conie is an employment attorney with Ogletree, Deakins, Nash, Smoak and Stewart. Dabney and her husband Bob Haugh '73 live in Paducah, KY. Dabney recently finished her term as district commissioner for the Four Rivers Pony Club and serves as director of the Altar Guild of Grace Episcopal Church. Louise lives in Dunwoody, GA, where she owns and oversees the operations of L.P. Campbell Co., a firm that consults with city governments to obtain federal funding.

Inspired by their 30th reunion in 2007, six friends from the class of '77, Susan O'Donaghue Witek, Pat Schenck Robertson, Sarah Powell Sharpstein, Nancy Crowell, Annette Wilkerson Porter and Elizabeth Brown Sims, gathered in the beautiful Pacific Northwest for a summer vacation. Seattle, La Conner (home to Nancy Crowell, the trip architect) and Orcas Island provided the perfect playground, and friendships were established and re-established. All six decided the journey west and its rewards were a definite highlight of their collective lives' journeys to date. A rumored book and perhaps a movie are forthcoming.

Anne Herbers Farris

and Perry Rosen married in June 2008. She is freelancing in Washington, DC, concentrating on two projects funded by the Pew Charitable Trusts. "One is covering the final days of the Bush administration; the other, the presidential campaign," she says. "So I have a foot in both the past and the future."

Mary Engel has joined the science desk at the Los Angeles Times after almost two years as a health care reporter for the newspaper's California section. She will cover infectious disease and public health. In 2005-06, she was a Knight Science Journalism Fellow at MIT, where she studied global health, infectious diseases and medical ethics.

Real estate attorney Steve Hatcher was among the five percent of Florida attorneys who received the title of Florida Super Lawyer. He is with the Orlando firm of Zimmerman Kiser Sutcliffe.

1980

Jill Johnson Piper

represented Calvary Episcopal Church in Memphis at the National Episcopal Historians and Archivists annual convention held at Calvary in June.

Robert Shankman, Rhodes College Track and Field head coach, has been appointed head coach of the USA Open Track and Field team to compete at the 18th World Maccabiah Games in Israel, July 2009.

1981

Rusty Robinson has been appointed to the Mrs. J. Avery "Janie" Rush Endowed Chair in Women's Health and Oncology at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center at Amarillo.

Art Rollins was featured in the Atlanta Journal-Constitution on May 8, 2008, for his work and former participation in the Atlanta Boy Choir. He joined the choir when he was 8 and for the past 15 years has served as a member on the choir board, including two stints as its chairman.

Dear Classmates,

Once again, thank you for taking the time to send in news about yourselves. It is always such a pleasure to hear from you all. For those of you who have never sent in news ... what are you waiting for? Your classmates want to know what you've been doing all these years!

Class Notes

Russell Rainey has been particularly busy. "My wife and I moved back to Little Rock in January 2007 after raising our children, Brittany (23) and Joshua (21), living life and building businesses in Jackson Hole, WY." (Russell's business included inventing and manufacturing innovative ski bindings and equipment.) In January, I became the 'release pastor' for Fellowship Bible Church in Little Rock, AR. In a nutshell, I'm an entrepreneurial coach to successful, high-capacity, marketplace leaders who wish to transition the focus of their lives from success to significance. During June and July, Cheryl and I return to Jackson Hole to conduct Father and Son Adventures through Christ in the Tetons, the outdoor adventure ministry we began in 2001. Our Web site tells a bit of the story: christinthetetons.org."

Another entrepreneur in our class is Stephen Farrar, who began Flying Swine Advertising and Design last year. Stephen admits to being "old enough to have a child who is preparing for college." His daughter Anne considers Rhodes her top choice, but is looking at other Southern colleges and universities. He and wife Elizabeth have three other children: Will, a high school sophomore; Grace, a sixth-grader; and Emma, who is in the fourth grade. In addition to his news, Stephen forwarded an old publicity photo of his band, The Generics, that he helped found as a student with his ATO fraternity brothers, Kevin Ferner, Lee Booth '85 and Rodney Nash '80. Seeing the photo reminded me of dancing at The Antenna Club!

Kudos to Demaris Bailey Ford, who received her MBA with honors last May from Gardner-Webb University in Boiling Springs, NC. "In addition, I recently purchased a clothing consignment shop in quaint Forest City, NC. I will continue teaching this year at Thomas Jefferson Classical Academy, but hope to move on to the community college level soon."

Debbie Sicard Templeton wrote in to brag on her husband, Bowden's, accomplishment. "Bowden recently finished his Ph.D. in child and family development at UGA. We were in Boston recently where we had a brief, but very nice, visit with Terry '79 and Trudy Palmer-Ball Regan '82."

Cathy Reese also had something special to report. Cathy is a professor at Arkansas State University in Jonesboro. At an honor society banquet, her students presented her an award they created just for her—the Political Science Student Choice Outstanding Teacher Award for 2008. Cathy was thrilled! She also sent in news about two other classmates. "I ran into Jimmy Bryant at the Montessori school one day this summer. He was picking up his daughter, Abigail, and I was picking up Selah. Imagine our surprise when we also discovered that we live in the same part of town! He has been back in the Jonesboro area for about 10 years and has his own computer business. I learned that he and Mike Akers, who was probably Jimmy's best friend when we were in college, married sisters, so their kids are all cousins and they see each other for family events as well. Jimmy and I used to play guitar and sing in Trezevant Quad when we were freshmen. He reports that he seldom plays now, somewhat like me, but he did ask Santa Claus for a guitar this past year. Then! In August, I was headed to Jackson, TN, to visit my family. Before I left I received an e-mail from Chris Matthews, who is also from Jackson and was headed there at the same time. He is still the New York spokesperson for the European Union, lives in Manhattan with wife, food writer Kathryn Matthews, and owns a farmhouse in Dutchess County, NY, which they have been renovating for about seven years. Chris also writes articles on wine and spirits for a comparatively well-funded law society, which sends him on field trips to places like Tuscany, Sicily and maybe in the future, Argentina! It was great to see him."

Beth Kaller wrote, "I moved to Chattanooga in August. I bought a house there last January, in the same neighborhood as my sister, Janet Kaller Geerlings '82, and her family, as well as my parents. My mom is a member of the class of '54. We walk as a mob through the neighborhood—three generations plus pets. I have been a speech and language pathologist for 14 years and work in geriatric rehabilitation. I heard about the opening from Alice-Marie Clark Danks. Thanks Alice-Marie! For fun, I have been working on taming two feral kittens. I also travel for pleasure and am considering China or Spain/Portugal for my next trip!"

Janet Comperry McReynolds recently completed an interesting role: "We finished a production of 'Sylvia' by A.R. Gurney. I played Sylvia (a dog). It was a great role, and even included a fight scene (which I will admit right now I am WAY too old for)."

Jeff Giddens reports that he and his wife, Angie, live in Gulf Breeze, FL, with their three children, Karina, William and Evie. Jeff is an associate with Sacred Heart Health Systems in Pensacola and Sandestin, dividing time between the two facilities and providing trauma/emergency care for his emergency medicine group practice on the Gulf Coast. He is currently involved in the building and staffing of a new Sacred Heart facility in the Port St. Joe/Apalachicola/Cape San Blas area. When not traveling and exploring the coast, the Giddenses are avid sailors, always searching for an uncharted harbor or anchorage for the kids to explore.

Leonora Green Clifford and her family explored some uncharted territory of their own recently. "Our summer adventure was taking an RV with seven teens to Bonnaroo. We went in at midnight with a caravan of 25 other vehicles.

We had a great time—Pearl Jam was amazing; Jack Johnson and The Raconteurs had great shows. We did not make it through Metallica. Happily, our group came home in good condition except my husband, who fell and tore his shoulder, had surgery and is in a sling for months. Didn't see that coming. Other than that, Sarah is moving into her first apartment at UT and Katherine will be driving soon. It's the first time in 20 years I'm not driving a child somewhere."

Beth Boellner has also completed her driving duties. "I have an organizing/redesign business in Little Rock, working with people in their homes and offices. I'm also working on two books, one fiction and one nonfiction. A little way to go yet before I begin submitting the manuscripts, but I'm having a blast doing it. My two daughters (18 and 20) have been gone for much longer than most as they each attended boarding school for the majority of their high school years. My older one is a junior studying interior design at Savannah College of Art and Design, and my younger one will begin college at Scripps in Claremont, CA, in January after spending a few months in Mexico, where she studied abroad her senior year."

Chris Brumlow recently accepted a position as business development manager at ESP Systems in Charlotte, NC. "I am in charge of leading go-to-market sales efforts for the patented Guest Custom Service application targeted at the casual dining industry," he says.

Bert Carlock writes, "I still love living in sunny San Diego. In addition to doing military work and waiting to see when my next deployment is, I'm co-facilitating leadership courses for PSI Seminars. The twins (Andrew and William) are starting school and Deanna, my wife, is producing half-a-dozen seminars a year and directing summer camps for youth-at-risk."

Paul Fromberg shares this wonderful news: "Grant Martin and I were married in a civil ceremony on Friday, July 18, in San Francisco. The Hon. Gavin Newsom, mayor of San Francisco, officiated in his office at City Hall." Paul and Grant had their union blessed at St. Gregory of Nyssa Episcopal Church, where Paul serves as interim rector. I had the opportunity to visit Father Paul at St. Gregory's in March 2007. This is an extraordinary church doing truly good work in the San Francisco area.

More good news from Ruth Metcalf Rye: "Scott '83 (a Navy commander) is finishing his one-year recall to Baghdad. My daughter is a freshman at Spring Hill College and my son is a freshman in high school. I have been busy renovating houses as well as selling real estate."

That's all for this issue. I would like to express my sincere appreciation to my Rhodes classmates and friends who have so generously taken time to send cards, letters, e-mails, gifts and memorials. Your love, support, prayers and friendship have lifted my children and me and have enabled us to begin this new journey on very strong footing. Thank you.

Greetings from New England. Fall is here and kids have headed back to school. I had the pleasure of hearing from a lot of folks this summer.

Shari Morrow Cooper writes, "We moved to Pennsylvania from New Jersey two years ago (Jordan took a new job). We're 45 minutes out of Philadelphia in a town called West Chester. The countryside is beautiful and the whole area is steeped in Revolutionary War history. Adam (10) and Justin (8) keep me busy with various sports, Cub Scouts and school activities. I volunteer quite a bit in the schools. This past spring I hosted a Morrow family reunion which included a few Rhodes alumni. Teresa Morrow '83 (my sister) and Maria Allen '83 and Mary Sue Morrow '75 (my cousins) helped make the weekend a blast! I have also been in touch with my old roommate Mary Holman DeLoach who seems to be doing very well!"

Some classmates met this summer at Sundance resort near Park City, UT, "for a get-together that has averaged out to be every other year for about 15 years," according to Blair Gatewood Norman. Blair, who lives in Colorado says, "We are spread out over the country and even in Europe and wish that Brigid Elsen Galloway could have joined us." Attending were: Kelley

Ashby Paul, Kentucky; Meg Waters Lambert, California; Kathleen Albritton Fittro, Florida; Sevgi Curtis Libor, Gibraltar, Spain; and Margaret Bryan French, North Carolina.

Bill Krieger sends greetings to the class and says, "Our son Will (16) went on a church pilgrimage to Italy over the summer. David (9) is playing kid pitch baseball and TACKLE football and has NAFOD (no apparent fear of death). I checked out as captain on the 757 (our new fleet addition at FedEx) and am an instructor. I miss seeing the old gang ... call me if you ever get near Memphis."

I got a very nice note from Leslie Alford Mathis. She says, "I'm enjoying all the reports in the Rhodes magazine. I hope everyone is doing well. I can't believe how time flies! I moved back to Memphis about a year ago (from the Alabama Gulf Coast area) and on Jan. 5, 2008, married Alex Mathis, a native of Memphis who also had been living in Alabama. Alex now works in insurance here with Menard, Gates and Mathis Inc., and I am a tutor at Lausanne Collegiate School. I especially enjoy working with international students in the Additional Language program. We really are enjoying living in Memphis again; we attend lots of Memphis Redbirds baseball games, plays and barbecue restaurants!"

Julia Weaver writes from Ocean Springs, MS: "After almost three years, we finally moved back to our pre-Katrina address. Living on the water is wonderful, except for the occasional heartbreaking natural disaster.” Julia is alderman at large in Ocean Springs, and husband Robert practices public interest environmental law. Their daughters Amelia and Caroline are 10 and 8.

Helen Reinecke-Wilt reports: “I am inspired to write upon returning from a month of traveling with my husband and children (9 and 11). We were extremely lucky to be able to take a three-week trip to Spain and Italy and spend a week with my family at the beach in North Carolina. If you ever get the chance to visit Barcelona or Tuscany, jump at it. They are extraordinary places to see in addition to the usuals—Venice, Rome, Florence and Pisa. Now onto the mundane business of work, etc. in Washington, DC!”

Kathryn Woodson Barr sends “Greetings from Alabama! I am now head of Highlands School in Mountain Brook. I have become increasingly interested in China and have enjoyed traveling there to hire teachers, attend an international principals’ forum and take students and parents for a school exchange program. My husband Tom, who was a Rhodes professor from 1984–2006, is now chief operating officer of a biotechnical company.”

Margaret Bryan Hakimian sent a quick note—“We had a busy spring and summer with travel and school activities. My kids (Christopher and Megan) and I traveled south over spring break and saw Heather Cutting Munk and her beautiful 8-year-old triplets (Andrew, Neil and Kathleen). It was great catching up and sharing a bottle of wine here and there! This summer, my family traveled to London for two weeks to tour and spend time with my husband’s family. Then we returned to the states for a week with my family (including Felix ‘88 and Mary ‘82) at Pawley’s Island, SC. A great time was had by all!”

Peggy Wood Townsend says, “I am entering my second year as a business owner after having left a 20-plus-year career in the nonprofit arts administration field. I have been traveling to lots of trade shows in the craft, hobby and art material industry to exhibit our products (townsendatelier.com). It is great fun and lots of hard work and I cannot believe how much time I spend on the computer. Our son Samuel is in second grade at our local museum magnet school. I am apparently one of the last to discover the wondrous world of Facebook and have had a blast reconnecting with a lot of Rhodes classmates. After 20 years of losing touch, I can see what they’re doing and share photos on a daily basis.”

I checked out Peggy’s site and it has some very cool and beautiful stuff. I hope everyone has a great autumn—keep in touch.

’87 Compadres:

Mea culpa, mea culpa, mea maxima culpa! I know, I know, you got your last issue of Rhodes, tore to the back pages to devour the class notes from 1987, and ... there was nothing. But, being the troupers I know you are, you managed to soldier on, heartache notwithstanding. I missed (i.e., totally forgot) the deadline for the last issue, so I’m hoping to make it up to you all with this one. You get the added bonus of hearing from some folks we haven’t heard from before. (HINT HINT to the rest of you!)

I’m writing this column in the heart of busy, bustling Manhattan, where I now live. I’ve been hired by the New York City schools to teach special education. The city is awesome and fearsome, loud and smelly and alluring. It’s certainly taking some getting used to! If you find yourself up this way for work or for pleasure, drop me a line.

In the meantime, let me remind y’all how this works. I send out e-mails three times a year, asking folks to report news so that I can type it all up into a breezy, conversational tone. I send that in to the Rhodes magazine editor. So if I don’t have your e-mail address, just drop me a line at mott.brian@gmail.com and get on the list. It’s painless, I promise. And you Memphis-area folks (Rick Melton, Alice McCarthy Finn, Leslie McCormack Darr) who had e-mail addresses that ended in midsouth.rr.com, those addresses no longer work. So drop me a line so I can keep you in the loop.

I’m not the only one with some life-changing goin’ on. Katherine Bres Ware reports, “I finally have something sunny to report: (husband) Alan and I finally made time for a vacation—and what a vacation it was! We took a complete break from our current reality, spent a week on Grace Bay in the Turks & Caicos Islands. White sand, blue, blue waters, peace and quiet and cold, potent, fruity drinks—nirvana!” Has anyone actually seen Katherine since August? Maybe they didn’t come back!

Alan Harris writes to report his professional development thusly: “In April, I started my own law firm, Harris Law Firm PC in Houston. My practice focuses on representing financial institutions and their investors in regulatory and corporate matters.”

I am so happy to hear from Mimi Swords Fondren who says, “I am finally using my MSSW! I’m the house manger for the Hospital Hospitality House of Nashville. We provide housing and supportive services at little or no cost to folks who have to travel to Nashville for medical treatment.”

And this just in from Regina Murphy: “I spent the summer as a Kansas City Certified Barbecue Judge. My partner Andy Houchins and I traveled from festival to festival in Kansas and Missouri honing our skills. Perhaps Memphis in May will be next! I’m also conducting a community-wide food drive to benefit the local food pantries. Emporia has been hit particularly hard by the economic bust, and through my ‘Murphy’s Menu’ food column in The Emporia Gazette, I have launched an informative and creative plan to boost awareness, donations and a community spirit of ‘We’re all in this together!’”

Not all the news you send in has to be about life-changing events. Just a quick shout to your classmates with an update about how you’re doing in life works well, too.

For example, Carol Pierce Olson succumbed to my guilt-trip strategy to write: “All is well in the Olson house. Summer consisted completely of baseball (2 boys—5 teams!) and a few vacations to break up the games. Football has started, then wrestling, then baseball again—it is a vicious cycle for our household. On a Rhodes note, Pierce, my oldest, had so much fun at our reunion last fall that he has proclaimed he wants to be a Lynxcat! We are obviously a convincing crowd. I am still working as in-house counsel for a book publisher in Franklin, TN (not as fun as watching the boys sports, but I like it).”

And the ever-fitter, 5K-runnin’ Michelle Dry says, “This spring I joined a women’s recreational soccer team and really enjoyed it, despite not having played before and knowing very little about the game. I plan to play again in the fall. I’m sure that my classmates have 8-year-olds whose skills are better than mine. Right now I’m training for a 5K, which may not sound like much to people who run all the time, but it’s a challenge for me. My goal is to complete it without having to walk and not be last one over the line. This fall I will become a sorority chapter adviser at the University of Memphis, which could either make me feel young or really old.”

And from those folks who haven’t previously reported to this column:

Jackie Thacker Prester writes, “I’m a shareholder in the Memphis office of the Baker, Donelson law firm. I’m a business lawyer, which means I never get to act like Perry Mason, but my clients are usually happy with me since I help them get deals done. My son Ian (16) is currently thinking about going to Rhodes. My daughter Erin (10) wants to be an artist when she grows up. Between paying for Rhodes and supporting an artist in the family, I expect to be working hard at Baker, Donelson for a very long time to come.” (Jackie and Carol should talk!)

File this one under “I’M JEALOUS!” Hank Bremer writes, “I am currently president of Pacific Southern Wine Company, a small regional wine brokerage/marketing company. We market 12 different California, Oregon and South Africa wines in the Southeast to the wine distribution network. I also own a small wine brand called NO Vineyards and Winery with my wife Kathy. Web site is novineyardsandwinery.com. I travel a lot to California for meetings in wine country and Monterey. I have been happily married for 15 years and have a daughter (13) and a son (11), both of whom are very active in sports and school activities. Life is good!” I’m no wine-lover, but it sure sounds glamorous, yes?

And I am very glad to receive simple greetings from classmates, as the ones I got from Nell Fullinwider Bush, Karen Cagle York and Harriet Smalley Monnig. Lorna, I don’t have a current e-mail address for you. Drop me a line and get on my list, please?

Looking forward to serving your class notes needs more consistently in the future —Brian

Kendra Rogers Martin writes: “My husband Jim and I have been busy with a recent renovation of our 101-year-old Midtown Victorian cottage. We had the attic converted into a master bedroom suite, so now we have our own sanctuary from our very busy boys Jacob (12) and Matthew (7). Better yet, we have a Midtown house with closet space and two bathrooms! The renovation took 371 days but it was worth it! During the renovation I finished up my master’s in instructional design and technology. I have taught for 18 years in the Memphis City Schools. At this point I am the economics teacher at Melrose High School and am looking forward to designing and teaching a new course, Personal Finance. This will be a real challenge since the curriculum guide is the basis for the class.”

Toby Ballard still lives in Belgium, still works for Merck & Co. (subsidiary in Belgium is known as Merck Sharp & Dohme) and still deals with the numbers (her current title is sales effectiveness manager). She says, “My husband Guy Lefebvre moved from private practice to government work, and is now in the Federal Agency for Nuclear Control in Belgium (as I am not a physicist, I do not have the slightest clue what he does there). Our four children are growing up strong: Constance (10) speaks the best English of the four and is doing well in math and languages; Clarisse (9) is our musical expert; Gregory (6) is the cartoonist, but is beginning to take a broader interest in football (soccer); and Coralie (5) is beginning to enjoy the fruits of losing her teeth. We keep busy, but don’t see much of the Rhodes crowd. Last summer as we traveled through the U.S. to see family, we did manage to squeeze in visits with Lynn Lawson Cabell '87, Dave and Marti Moore Carter '90, Tom Horton, Salil Parikh and Bob Barnett. It was as close to a class reunion as I have been able to manage since going abroad to live (I have been in Belgium since the end of 1991)."

Valerie Gray Jordan says she "feels blessed with a fantastic husband, two great kids and working part time as a small animal vet. We live in the heart of Amish Country, which makes for really great cycling. We love to travel whenever possible—the best trips have been to France (saw Lance Armstrong's final ride into Paris!), Belgium and Italy. My parents don't live in Memphis anymore so I really don't get there, but I do love to hear about people and the city and Rhodes, of course. I always look forward to the next edition of Class Notes."

Chris and Carolyn Tatum Ray '90 and their sons Henry and John live in Jackson, MS, where they are restoring an old house that belonged to writer Willie Morris. Chris runs a marketing communications firm, Ramey, that specializes in premium brands. He is also a partner in Memphis-based Lokion, a Web development company whose CEO is Megan Jones '90.

Raina Adelman accepted a position as a language arts instructor at St. George's Independent School in Collierville, TN.

Matt and Mary Campbell Toussaint had a son, Jacob Finnegan, April 22, 2008, in Dallas.

Kate Dietzen and Curt Beaulieu married June 7, 2008, in New Orleans. Bridesmaids included Elaine Hardie, Lauren Deen, Lindsay Bond, Elizabeth Cooper, Rachel Luck Africk and Anne Schaberg Summerour. Patrick Browne was a reader. Many other Rhodes graduates attended. The couple resides in Washington, DC.

After staging his original blues/folk musical, "Lysistrata and the Death Of Cupid," for the McCoy Theatre at Rhodes, Kyle Hatley was offered a job as assistant artistic director of the Kansas City Repertory Theatre in Missouri. He will be directing his first League of Resident Theatres play this season as well as creating and cultivating new and original plays by him and other generative artists. Kyle also directed two original plays for the Kansas City Fringe Festival in late July, an audio theater piece called "Six" and a new one-act tribal musical based on Aeschylus' "The Libation Bearers" called "Watering the Grave." Kyle is also artistic director of Chatterbox Audio Theater, which recently won The Silver Ogle Award for best Horror and Fantasy Audio Productions in the world. The awards, presented by The American Society for Science Fiction Audio, were formally announced at the CONvergence Conference in Bloomington, MN, on July 3.

Mike McDorman writes, "Having completed advanced degrees at the University of Melbourne and the École normale supérieure in Paris from 2004-2007, I am now enrolled in the JD class of 2010 at Cornell Law School. Here I have also been admitted into a dual degree program in French and American law, jointly administered by Cornell and Columbia Law Schools, respectively, as well as the law faculty of the University of Paris-Sorbonne. Successful completion of the program (and the respective French and American bar exams) is sufficient to practice law in the U.S. and France, which is broadly what I am planning to do. I will be in Ithaca, NY, until summer 2010, at which time I will be moving back to Paris to complete the French half of the degree."

Karyn Spence and Paul Bondi married April 20, 2008, at Calvary Episcopal Church in Memphis. Fellow Rhodes students Elizabeth Serex Evans '02 and Brett Stauffer joined the wedding party. The Bondis currently live in St. Louis where Karyn is finishing her Ph.D. in physics at Washington University. They look forward to settling down in Memphis soon.

EvanBeth Goss recently moved to the legislative department of the Texas Classroom Teachers Association. TCTA represents Texas teacher issues at the federal and state levels and is a key partner in legislation development and advocacy. EvanBeth also is on the board of directors of the Austin Singers and is an active member in the Young Women's Alliance of Austin, an organization developed to give professional women a resource for opportunities to lead, educate, network and serve in the Austin community.

Carrie Osborne '06 and Stu Johnston married June 28, 2008, in Charleston, WV. Numerous Rhodes alumni and staff attended the wedding. Attendants included Catherine Birdwell '06, Ashley Crosland '06, Michael Lamb '04, Chad Jones and Robert Dove. Sarah Tuttle Edgcombe, Leslie Austin '06 and Laura Dallas '06 participated as readers.

Lauren Blalock Sefton was recently promoted to associate director of Admissions at Rhodes. She will also be assisting with international students and will spend several weeks in Asia for student recruitment. She and her husband Eric '02 continue to spoil their dog with walks along the Mississippi River. In addition to theatrical sound design, Eric continues to work as a media specialist at Le Bonheur Children's Medical Center.

David and Beverly Saffold Baer welcomed a new addition to their family, William Allen, March 10, 2008. They currently live in Dallas.

Lauren McLaughlin and Austin Carr married June 28, 2008, in Mobile. Shelley Fulghum, Lauren Blalock Sefton and Annie Givens '02 were members of the wedding party. Ben Chastain, Liz White '02, Brook Bissinger '02 and Lin Moses '02 were some of the Rhodes guests.

Shayla Purifoy graduated from the University of Memphis' Cecil C. Humphreys School of Law May 4, 2008.

Scott Holmes and Lauren Fay '05 married Oct. 13, 2007, in Fisher Garden at Rhodes. A reception followed in the Skyway at The Peabody. Many Rhodes alumni were members of the bridal party and in attendance. The couple currently lives in Northport, AL, where Scott works as a deputy district attorney and Lauren teaches high school science.

James '00 and Anna Fraser Underwood celebrated the birth of their first child, George Allen, July 11, 2008.

Melinda Phillips was recently promoted to development coordinator for the Owen Graduate School of Management at Vanderbilt University. She is focusing on stewardship programs for the Development and Alumni Relations office as well as developing affinity groups and opportunities for donors. She has been at Vanderbilt since July 2005, where she previously served as the alumni program coordinator.

Connections

By President William E. Troutt

One constant theme continues to emerge in all my conversations with Rhodes alumni. Whether you graduated in 1936 or 2006, you each tell a personal story about how you connected with Rhodes professors in ways that changed your lives. I continue to be inspired by these stories of how a relationship with a faculty mentor made the critical difference in your personal and professional lives.

I am especially inspired by the countless ways our late dean, Jameson Jones '36, affected the intellectual and spiritual lives of so many of you, both during and after his years at Rhodes. As John Gladney '74, who established the Jameson M. Jones Outstanding Faculty Service Award, has said, "Members of the faculty serve Rhodes in many ways that go beyond formal teaching duties and scholarship."

As I begin my 10th fall at Rhodes, I appreciate more than ever how excellence at our college indeed begins with our faculty. They are gifted teacher/scholars who challenge, engage and connect students in life-changing ways. As John Hugon '77, one of our trustees, says, "It's with our faculty—that's where the magic begins."

In this issue of Rhodes, you have read how faculty like David McCarthy, David Jilg and Judith Haas are making an impact in the lives of our students, and how our new Environmental Studies Program postdocs are reaching across the curriculum, all under the able leadership of Michael Drompp, our new Dean of the Faculty and Vice President for Academic Affairs.

When today's first-year students graduate in 2012, they will truly be connected with a talented and committed faculty. They will have taken full advantage of their Rhodes education, and without a doubt, they will have experienced the "magic" of a liberal arts education that for them, and generations of Rhodes students, began with our faculty.

The Charles E. Diehl Society

Deborah Legg Craddock '80, President

The Diehl Society is named for Charles E. Diehl, who served as college president from 1917-49. The Society recognizes individuals who have provided generous financial support for the operation of the college as well as leadership, loyalty, and expertise throughout the year.

Endowed Circle of the Charles E. Diehl Society

To ensure Rhodes' continuing financial strength, unrestricted endowment gifts can be made to fund perpetual memberships in the Charles E. Diehl Society. These unrestricted gifts may be either current or deferred or some combination of the two. They are recognized with membership in the Endowed Circle.

Endowed Guarantors

Mr.♦ and Mrs. James A. Thomas, III '62

Members of the Charles E. Diehl Society

Members of the Diehl Society provide annual unrestricted gifts. Membership levels in the Society are Philanthropists ($100,000 or more), Guarantors ($50,000 or more), Fellows ($25,000 or more), Benefactors ($15,000 or more), Sustainers ($10,000 or more) and Patrons ($5,000 or more). For those alumni who have not yet celebrated their 10th reunion, membership is offered for a gift of $2,500 or more. Gifts reflecting an increase to a higher level are marked with an asterisk.

The Red & Black Society

H. William Allen, III '66, President

Members of The Red & Black Society provide annual unrestricted gifts. Membership levels in the Society, which takes its name from the colors in the college seal, are Partners ($3,500 or more), Senior Members ($2,500 or more), Associates ($1,500 or more) and Members ($1,000 or more). For those alumni who have not yet celebrated their 10th reunion, membership is offered for a gift of $500 or more. Gifts reflecting an increase to a higher level are marked with an asterisk.

The Eggers' Hawaiian Home— A gift that's good for them and good for Rhodes

Larry and Tricia Butterworth Egger in Sedona, AZ

A busy career found Tricia Butterworth Egger '65 living in Chicago, California, Puerto Rico and Hawaii. Yet, her Rhodes education and good memories of college life have remained with her for more than 40 years.

So when Tricia and her husband Larry began thinking about using a condominium they owned in Hawaii to make a charitable gift in 1999, Rhodes was on the short list of institutions they considered.

"To tell you the truth, the people at Rhodes just showed more interest in receiving a gift of real estate than other people we contacted," Larry said. "Rhodes wanted the college to have the benefit, and they worked hard to make the gift work."

Tricia and Larry deeded their Hawaiian condo to The Egger Charitable Remainder Unitrust at Rhodes. The trust sold the condo, and the proceeds from the sale are used to pay income to the Eggers for the life of the trust.

"When we are gone, Rhodes can use the remaining trust assets for whatever needs they identify," says Larry.

"I've been really impressed with the college Rhodes has become," Tricia says, citing the caliber of faculty and students. "Also, working with people in the community lets students experience real life and gives them excellent training for the future. It teaches responsibility."

Tricia and Larry now live in Sedona, Az, where they plan to spend their retirement years.

"The unitrust provides retirement income for us while providing for the future of Rhodes," Larry says. "It's really a heck of a deal."

For some donors, there is a silver lining to the current down economy. Donors who give a remainder interest in their home or farm to Rhodes can continue to live there the rest of their lives and receive a larger charitable income tax deduction than they would receive during times of prosperity.

Mission Accomplished

Jennifer Thompson '08 in zero-gravity aboard NASA's 'Weightless Wonder' July 17, 2008. Thompson, along with Brad Atkins '10, Gavin Franks '09, Josh Fuchs '11, Lulu Li '11, Ben Rice '09 and Chase Sliger '10, designed and successfully completed their physics experiment—establishing an orbit between two oppositely electrically charged spheres during their reduced gravity flights. They also completed an experiment designed by Memphis' Central High School students. The first Rhodes physics team to go up did a similar experiment in August 2006. The "dream team" who supported students this year included Professors Brent Hoffmeister, Deseree Meyer Brittingham, technical associate Glen Davis and departmental assistant Eva Owens.
