April Fool Play To Be Fantasy About Hollywood

Movie-men, queens, kings, witches in red dresses—all will be parading across the stage of Hardie Auditorium Friday night, April 6, when the April Fool's play by Edith Jean Cooper. Edith Jean's play was selected from those submitted to the Publications Board, and she will be favored by the April Fool king, who will present her with a $25 award.

The play opens with two Hollywood press agents trying to decide how to produce the "special girl" that will put their tottering movie company back on its feet. Then we journey to Landau, a far-away place with a strange-sounding name, where we visit with the attractive princess of the bankrupt country and her companion who chews gum vociferously, swoons over movie magazines, and dreams of coming to America and falling in love with a screen idol. When the two remember the supernatural powers of a long dead grandmother,

'Antigone' Opens April 12 in Hardie

The Southwestern Players' performance of "Antigone," by Jean Anouilh, has been postponed. Professor George Touliatos, of the Speech Department, stated that it will be presented April 12 and 13, in Hardie Auditorium.

Joanna Kindig has the title role of Antigone. Others in the cast are Mary Jane Smalley, Malcolm Whatley, Jim Eikner, Ben Miller, Betty Sims, Ann Morrison, Scott Byrd, and Glen Milam.

Missing Treasures Arrive at Burrow

Miss Etta Hansen of the Treasure Room in the Burrow Library has recently returned from a trip to New York where she visited many museums and art shops.

While she was in New York, she was presented with an attractive collection of pottery. Thrilled at receiving such a fine collection, she immediately had it packed and sent to Southwestern along with a note notifying Southwestern to be on the lookout for the pottery. Miss Erma Reese, Miss Marys Martin, Miss Helen Bowld, Mr. Charles Pack, Mr. Johnny Rollow and the library staff were alerted, especially after the pottery failed to appear on schedule.

Telephone calls and letters kept the communications' systems hot, as an exhaustive search was made. The mystery deepened when empty boxes appeared in front of the Treasure Room on two mornings, looking as if someone had been removing some of the precious treasure within.

When Miss Hansen arrived, much grined that the treasured gift remained missing, she discovered a set of huge golden candlesticks which had mysteriously appeared in the Treasure Room.

The appearance of the empty boxes was never solved, but it was soon discovered that the art shop in New York had sent the candlesticks to Burrow Library by mistake. Soon after sending back the sticks, Miss Hansen received the pottery, and it is now on display in the Treasure Room.

THIS CANDID PHOTOGRAPH of Sir Richard Livingstone was taken at the recent tea in his honor. Sir Richard spent several days on the campus and spoke to the student body last Friday in chapel as part of the Free World Issues series.

English Scholar Visits Campus

Sir Richard Livingstone, noted classical scholar and author, was honored at a tea Monday, March 19, in the Adult Education Center of Burrow Library. Students of the classical languages were especially invited to come to speak with Sir Livingstone.

Miss Laura Robinson, Latin instructor, and Mr. Leonard Frey, Greek professor, served as hostess and host. Mrs. Frey served.

Several students of Latin and Greek from the University of Mississippi attended.

Sir Livingstone addressed the student body in chapel Friday, March 16; this was just one of the many talks which he gave while a visitor at Southwestern.

Mary Jane Crutcher is the recipient of the Gracey Scholarship awarded by Southwestern each year to an outstanding French student. Mary Jane was informed on March 16 of the honor bestowed upon her.

The scholarship provides summer schooling in France for its recipient. Enthusiastically disclosing her plans for the summer, Mary Jane said, "I'll probably leave New York on June 12 on the New Amsterdam and will land at Le Harve, France. From there I'll go to Paris by train." She will attend L'Universite Phonetique at Paris for four or five weeks, then continue studying at Tours, where she will live with a French family.

Man with Two Jobs

Little realized by many Southwestern students is the tremendous job that the head coach of our track team is doing. This man is donating a large portion of his time to readying our trackmen for the tough competition they must face this spring.

Besides his coaching position, he engages in full time practice as a lawyer. Consequently he is a very busy man. And there are few people who can carry such a load of two jobs simultaneously and do them both well.

Our head coach is a Southwestern graduate of '46. During his student days here, he was a member of the unbeaten Lynx mile relay team. Since he graduated in three years, we suggest that he re-enroll as a student here, and naturally, make a big attempt to become a member of the track team.

Seriously, he is devoting his time here to producing a winning team with the assistance of the other coaches. We feel that he deserves many grateful thanks from the entire student body, so we of the Sou'wester staff say, "Thank you, Freeman Marr; we're behind you one hundred per cent."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:
We are writing this letter concerning rule #5, page 20, of the Student Council Handbook. This states that "All entertainments after 8:00 p.m. which men and women students attend must be properly chaperoned — i.e., two couples (or individual faculty members) of chaperones are required. Married alumni(ae), who have been out of college for ten years, or parents may serve as chaperones, but it is necessary to have at least one faculty member present."

Our particular point of contention refers to the phrase "one faculty member present." But what is an organization to do when no faculty chaperon is available, and when the Dean of Women rejects a chaperon list, and leaves town before other arrangements can be made? The only alternative is to cancel a party when dates have been invited, and plans have been made.

....Not only is this rule a constant source of trouble to the organizations, but it is also a burden on the faculty. Let us hope that our faculty has something better to do with their time than sitting in corners watching boys and girls half their age indulging in pastimes that they have long outgrown.

When we were in high school it was considered entirely adequate to attend a party chaperoned by our parents. Rule #5 implies that our parents are not capable of chaperoning our parties. We are now in college and considered to be adults by our draft boards and, in many cases, by the voting polls. The students of this college are supposedly selected from "above the average" backgrounds. Let us assume that an "above the average" background includes proper breeding. Is it necessary, then, for us to be herded over by an unwilling faculty like a bunch of inmates in an institution?

Why then burden ourselves with a cumbersome rule, which is to no one's advantage? Let's change the rule to read "parents and/or faculty."

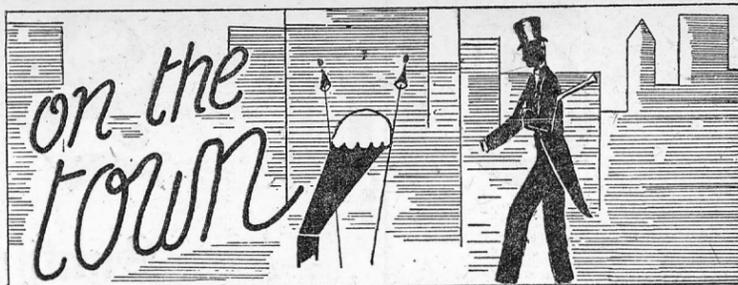

Sincerely,
Earl Z. Browne

Attention all single persons:

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary to rock and roll a little and, generally speaking, go native on Saturday night, then please accept the following suggestion as a sure fire winner. After receiving the signal that the paper is out, run (don't walk) to the cloister, snatch up your own handy free copy of the S'wester, flip quickly through the pages until a column entitled ON THE TOWN catches your eye, and then enjoy the sweeping sensation of unsurpassed peace as you seek to plot a sumptuous weekend.

Assorted Films

Like for instance, this weekend there are many forms of entertainment (good and bad) awaiting the choice of all who do not intend to stay in studying for finals. On the highly approved list are such movies as MARTY, with Ernest Borgnine and Betsy Blair (Palace); and NEVER SAY GOODBY, starring Miss Cornell Borchers, George Saunders, and the ever-popular Rock Hudson (Malco). Not to be left out of this group is THE ROSE TATTOO, with Burt Lancaster, Anna Magnani, and two new stars who do exceedingly well. The best place to see this show is the Strand.

Then too, many men students might possibly agree that it would be a pretty fine thing to accept the invitation of Cyd Charisse when she says, MEET ME IN LAS VEGAS. Boyoboyoboy! Dan Dailey also comes on pretty good in this particular presentation at the State.

Two Re-Runs

At the Warner this week is a double bill; the two shows being MISTER ROBERTS and REBEL WITHOUT A CAUSE. If you haven't seen either show then do yourself a favor and act now: this offer is good for a limited time only! Coming to the end of the list of good shows, we see that Anna Magnani is featured in another bit in BELLISSIMA, at the Ritz, which is an altogether top flight movie.

Moving beyond the scope of cinemas, it is always nice to know that a fine band is on hand at the Peabody to provide excellent music for all who can afford to go.

Travel in Crowds

Remember though, if you're going to the Peabody or the Silver Slipper or just anywhere ON THE TOWN, it is advised that students should always travel in groups of at least eight or more. At least two of this group should be over sixteen and the rest should be well armed.

Before closing out, let it not be forgotten that the Lynx thin-clads are having a big track contest with the group from Mississippi College, at Starkville, Mississippi, this Saturday. A cordial invitation is extended to all who can possibly drop by for quite a bit of high excitement.

And so, as the time begins to slip quickly by, just remember to grab your coat, and get your date, and leave your school books on the doorstep (shoes too, if you are from Mississippi), and fill your pockets with fives and scamper out and around and about THE TOWN.

By Elizabeth Rodgers

The Pi's all had a merry time at their initiation and slumber party last Saturday night. All the "goings-on" went on at Marian Cobb's and it seems the new initiates gave the old members a little trouble, hiding in the attic and on the balcony so that it took until about five o'clock Sunday morning to get everyone initiated and off to bed. Guess their party sparked enthusiasm for their little plan carried out in chapel this morning.

Wonder if the STAB's appreciated the Pi's little joke? Did you notice those flashy red ribbons and daggers the Pi's had on? Don't think the STAB's have ever looked as good in black as the green and white girls did today?

I can't find anyone newly pinned or engaged to congratulate but there are lots and lots of people to congratulate about other things so I'll just start and make a long list.

Congratulations to: All the newly initiated fraternity members. Every chapter has now initiated; the Sigma Nu's started and the Alpha Tau Omega's were the last to make their pledges "honest-to-goodness" fraternity men.

Sue Robinson, newly elected president of Tri-Delta, and to all the sorority's other new officers. Special congratulations to senior Sally Myrh Thomas who was recognized at the sorority's Shamrock Ball last Saturday night and presented with a gold cup for being "Ideal Tri-Delta" of the year.

Joanna Kindig, Miriam Heard, and Jerry Wittman who have been elected the new High Pi, Low Pi, and secretary-treasurer of Pi Intersorority.

Beth LeMaster, new president of the YWCA and to all the other new Y officers.

Dan McGrew, who pledged Kappa Sigma fraternity last week.

Alan Lutz is back at school now, having recovered from a very serious appendectomy. Glad to see you back, Alan.

I have been asked to announce that C. D. Kilpatrick has acknowledged his defeat in the bowling game located in the Lair. C. D. holds the midget boys' title at the present time but shows no promise of overtaking the combination of Bowen and Boals. (No wonder—what is this, two against one?) I wish I had some other announcements or anything else to put in this column but I can't find a thing so guess I will closeup for this week and just try to get around a little more before time to write this column again. Bye.

YWCA Elects Officers, LeMaster Heads Group

The YWCA met Tuesday, March 20, at the Zeta House for its regular monthly meeting.

A slate of officers for the next year was presented and accepted by acclamation. The officers elected were: president, Beth LeMaster; vice president, Anne Hixon; secretary, Jo Williams; treasurer, Gloria Smith; chaplain, Dianna Warren; PRC representative, Mary Ada Latta; social service committee, Lynda Hardesty and Nora Peterson; publicity, Betty Jean Payne and Pem Kremer; social, Lola Lyles and Natalie Moss; membership, Jerry Wittmann, and music, Sandy Calmer.

The program was presented by Mrs. Raymond Long, a member of the Story Tellers' League in Memphis. Mrs. Long told the Hodding Carter story, "The Day God Didn't Strike Us Dead."

Joan will be sent to Camp Minwanca on Lake Michigan for five weeks of training participation in the American Youth Foundation Leadership Program, and in the Danforth Faculty Associate Conference. Following this, she will be assigned to a university or college campus, not in her own section of the country, where she will aid in counseling, program direction of student religious councils and interdenominational work.

The Danforth Foundation Gift Award Fellowship includes a ten months stipend of $1,600 plus a $250 Stewardship Fund; the Foundation also cares for all travel expenses to and from all summer camp training, expenses while at camp, and all expenses to and from the university campus.

Joan, who has been active in W.F., YWCA, PRC, ZTA and was named to WHO'S WHO, was recommended for the award by Dr. Taylor Reveley who is a Danforth Associate.

Campus Challenges

When we were little, we had a habit of collecting and hoarding odd sorts of treasures, like string, chalk, bottle tops, stones, and what not. These were usually kept in a cigar box, and we were rather uncertain and secretive when questioned about their usefulness.

This practice grows up with us as we become college men and women. This is demonstrated every once in a while when we clean out our desk drawers, or trunks. Such a queer collection of odds and ends! What possible use for them could we have had in mind when we stuck them away?

The worthless junk that collects in our rooms is usually kept out of sight, and out of the way. When it does begin to overflow and interfere with our daily routine, we take time out to clear it away, saving the few items of value and discarding the rest.

Unfortunately, the "junk" that collects in our minds is not so obviously noticed—and not so easily cleared out. Prejudices, hates, misconceptions, fancies, and ideas as outmoded as stereoscopes, clutter up the minds of most of us. Usually this "junk" stays hidden in the "attic" of the brain, but ever so often it gets in the way to trip us up on some decision where clear, straight thinking is required. Look back at a few decisions that you now regret, and see how your thinking may have been warped by preconception and prejudice.

By taking fifteen or twenty minutes of our time each day to read our Bible and to pray to God, you and I will become fresh and alive again. The word of God is still our fountain of truth, if we will only drink of it. Our relationship with God will be strengthened each additional moment we go to God through prayer and Bible study. Although these things are basic, fundamental ideas that we learned in childhood, they are essential to the nourishment and the growth of our spiritual life. From day to day may we always remember, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus."

Netmen Defeat Southern Illinois

Monday afternoon, March 19, the Southwestern tennis team successfully opened their season by defeating Southern Illinois University. Due to the chilly weather, there were not many spectators witnessing the match.

Tommy Buford breezed past Omar Winter, 6-1, 6-1, in the number one singles, Eric Mount dropped the number two singles to Jerry Given of SIU after two gruelling hours of play. Hal Henderson also lost the number six singles. Lee Gibbs, Jack Biedenharn, and Walker Wellford won their singles matches to set up a 4-2 lead.

Buford and Biedenharn clinched the match when they took the number one doubles in two straight sets of 6-4, 8-6. Southern Illinois was no longer a threat from that point on.

Although the number two and three singles, the last two matches of the day, were lost by the Lynx, they rolled on to victory over the Illini 5-4.

All The Startling Facts— The Search for Murphy's Bride

(The following is taken from a tape recording made by H. Waldo Krunk, part-time hypnotist who has become famous for his daring explorations of the subconscious. H. Waldo, a faith healer by profession, is from Sheepdip, Nova Scotia, where his experiment took place in the back room of a laundry. Copyright 1956 by Q.T. Magazine—"Nobody's secret is safe behind the big yellow cover of Q.T."—publishers of those other best-selling journals of exposure, "Shhhhh" and "Smear!")

My name is Waldo Krunk. Tonight here in the laundry my assistants and I have taken our hypnotized subject, Murphy, far into the past, beyond what he can remember in a wakeful state. I am now ready to begin the experiment. I shall tell my assistant to plug in the tape recorder.

The machine is warming up. You can hear it going chug-chug, chug-chug, and the gentle slap of rinse water in the — wait a minute. There's been a slip-up. My assistant plugged in the washing machine. Turn that thing off, Smiley. It's playing merry hell with my goldfish.

Wait. Something's happened to Murphy. His complexion is green. It must have been the sound of the washing machine. What is it, Murphy? Are you seasick?

Murphy: Yes. Methinks I am on a ship. Odd's blood! It's a sailing vessel. Well, twenty-three skiddoo!"

"Where are you, Murphy? Do you know what year it is?"

"Wait. There's a calendar. I'll see. Hmmm. Blonde wench on the calendar. Very good, eh what? Indecently clothed, though. In fact, she isn't wearing anything. I say, good show!"

"The date, Murphy, the date!"
 "Oh, yeah. It's 1620. I see—I see the ship. Ship in harbor. Watch—ship. Cold."

"Yes. I understand. The Mayflower has landed. The pilgrims have put a boat to shore. They walk hesitantly about on the beach, looking around. And then—Murphy, I don't like that crafty look on your face. What are you thinking, Murphy? What are you thinking?"

"Ugh! Palefaces no takeum land from Injun!"

(I have the candle which I use to hypnotize Murphy. I must calm him. His warwhoops are taking all the starch out of the shirts back here. I hold it above his face, wave the flame gently. Murphy is calm, lulled to sleep by the soothing drip of hot wax on his chin.)

"Now, Murphy, we're going back to the days when you were Col. Slapdash Murphy of the U.S. cavalry. If you'll remember, Murphy, in the last episode you returned home to find your bride of a few hours had been kidnapped by redskins. So let's begin the search for Murphy's bride."

"Yes. I'm creeping along the prairie now. It's dark. Ahead are the tepees and the council fires. My bride is tied to a stake while hundreds of ugly savages dance around, throwing tomahawks at her. She appears disconcerted. There is only one way to rescue her. To horse!"

(The battle rages, and Murphy is victorious. Exhausted and bleeding he turns to his bride. His voice is choked with emotion as he speaks.)

"Bride!"
 "Murphy!"
 "Do you love me, Bride?"
 "Oh, yes . . . yes . . . I love you, Murphy."

"Then . . . come to me."
 "You'll have to untie me first, you jerk."

"Gee whiz—I'm sorry—I—"
 (Murphy's face is changing. There is something ferocious in his eyes. He speaks in a different tone!)

"See man and woman embrace by fire. Got to reach tomahawk. If I said it once, I said it a thousand times—palefaces no takeum land from Injun!"

(Murphy's getting up from the couch. I don't like the look in his eye. Time to bring him back. Come on back, Murphy! Too late. Maybe if I hold out the candle—oops. There goes the candle. Awfully sharp tomahawk he's swinging. Hope I can make it to the door. If anybody reading this sees Murphy, the way to bring him out of it is by snapping the fingers. Just snap the fingers, and—no, Murph! I'm your friend! Remember me, good old Waldo Krunk? Paleface likeum redman. Giveum Indian land back. Plenty wampum, too. Just put down that tomah—"
