Subject: This Week at Rhodes

•Ice cream is a time-honored ingredient of great celebrations so come out to the Diehl Court tomorrow between 2:30 and 4 to share some at the Rhodes Center for Student Opportunity expo. This event is the culmination of a two-year effort to study the way we deliver services to students and many of our colleagues have worked tirelessly to bring us to this point. I encourage you to attend to learn more about this exciting initiative that will culminate with the repurposing of Burrow as a one-stop student services center.

•This is a busy time for everyone but I hope between now and Friday you can pull together your nominations for the Archer Award (see attached nomination form). This is a good opportunity for our students as it carries both a cash stipend and an internship offer.

•Students from the Rhodes Biology department have been heavily involved in scholarly activity lately. Four—Frances Benoist, Jacquelyn Hancock, Stephanie Juchs and Dustin Long—presented at the Tennessee Academy of Sciences meeting while Tyler Cullender and Kelsey Dean co-authored an article in Marine and Freshwater Behavior and Physiology with former faculty fellow Keith Pecor.

•Don't forget to respond to the Chronicle of Higher Education/Modern Think survey if you received it last Friday via email. As Allen Boone said, our purpose in participating in this project is to ensure that Rhodes is a great place to work.
