Course Overview

Religious Studies 102 continues the Life sequence begun in Religious Studies 101 by examining the development and central themes of the traditions based on the Bible. The purpose of this course is to introduce students to some of the important facets of post-biblical theology and religious practice as well as the contexts in which they occur. Beginning with the close of the Bible and proceeding to the present, we will consider in chronological fashion some of the representative figures and issues of these traditions. Through careful reading and discussion of important writers, we shall develop an understanding of significant concepts, terms, and points of view in western religion. As a writing intensive course, Religious Studies 102 will also provide opportunities for the engagement of theological ideas and practices through a series of written assignments that are designed to stimulate critical thinking and improve students' skills to express themselves verbally.

In the first unit of the course, we will examine the early Christian world and the central issues faced by the first Christians. We will observe the great diversity among early Christians and study how the processes of institutionalization gradually shaped this diversity into orthodoxy, with special attention to Augustine's autobiography. We also will note some of the characteristic religious practices that developed during this era, including sacramental practices and asceticism.

In the second unit, we will see how these early theologies and practices shaped the religious outlook and activities of the medieval world. Our examination of this era will focus on monasticism, scholastic theology, the phenomenon of mysticism, and religious architecture. Unit three investigates the religious reformations of the late middle ages; in this section of the course we will encounter the ideas of Martin Luther and Teresa of Avila.

When we turn to theology in the modern world in the final unit of the course, we will meet decidedly new problems and new efforts to maintain Christianity's intelligibility. As we shall see, modernity causes a fragmentation in western culture that has profound effects on religious and theological communities. We will review the importance of religious experience for western Christians, the controversies between modernist and fundamentalist ideas, and theological responses to the moral dilemmas of the twentieth century.

Attendance Policy

Many important features of this course will be imparted in class meetings, through lectures, films, and discussions. It is essential, therefore, to attend class. Students with extracurricular activities (especially athletes) that will require them to miss one or more classes during the semester should talk to their professor in advance of their anticipated absence. All absences that are not approved in advance will adversely affect your grade. The attendance portion of the attendance and participation grade will be based on the following scale.

0-1 absences	A	3 absences	C	5 or more absences	F
2 absences	B	4 absences	D

Daily Writing

A one-page paper is due at the beginning of every class session. These daily writing assignments provide an opportunity for you to practice both formal, analytical writing and personal, reflective writing. At the close of each class session I will pose a question about the reading assignment due for the next class meeting. Your paper should consist of two parts: first, a one-paragraph answer to that question that is derived directly from a close-reading of the assigned text; second, a one-paragraph reflection on how the issue raised in the text informs your own thought and practice. Daily writing assignments are not due on class days when other writing assignments are scheduled. They will be graded on a ten-point scale.

Moodle Site

Many of the assigned readings are found on the Moodle Site for this course. The site can be accessed from the “Login” section on the Rhodes home page. You are required to submit a username and password. If you have trouble logging in, call the Rhodes Help Desk, extension HELP (4357). From the class home page (titled “RS 102”), you can access the readings; you will find a link to the reading under its title. Once you open the reading document, you should print it so that you can bring a copy with you to class. Please check your e-mail frequently for announcements and other matters (including changes) concerning this course.

Grading Scale

The final grade will be determined on the basis of this scale:

A (94-100)	C+ (77-79)	D- (60-63)
A- (90-93)	C (74-76)	F (below 60)
B+ (87-89)	C- (70-73)
B (84-86)	D+ (67-69)
B- (80-83)	D (64-66)

Grading Standards for Written Assignments

Papers received after class and before 5pm on the due date will be given a late penalty of a full letter grade; a penalty of a full letter grade will be given for each subsequent day that the paper is late.

1. The A paper or essay demonstrates originality of thought, independence of opinion and maturity of interpretation in stating and developing a central idea. Its basic notions and observations are clear, logical, and thought provoking. The evidence provided in the paper warrants its conclusions. The A essay contains all of the following characteristics: (a) concentration on a central purpose, demonstrated by an adequate development of its arguments and the specific support of valid sources; (b) careful construction and organization of sentences and paragraphs; (c) careful choice of effective words and phrases; (d) full understanding of the concepts central to the reading material used; and (e) correctness of mechanical procedures (spelling, typing, etc.).

2. The B paper or essay has a clearly stated thesis, has been logically argued, and has been supported by specific evidence from the texts read. Its ideas are clear and its organization is coherent because it contains most of the characteristics described above. It is relatively free of errors in the use of expository English prose. Although competent, the B paper lacks the originality, stylistic maturity, and the precision of thought of the A paper.

3. The average paper or essay will receive the grade of C. The essay has a central purpose and is organized clearly enough to convey its thesis to the reader. It demonstrates adequate familiarity with the concepts and material in question and it relates them to the course's reading assignments. It avoids serious errors in English grammar and usage. It may, in fact, require few corrections, but it lacks the vigor or complexity of thought and expression, which would entitle it to a higher grade.

4. The grade of D indicates a below-average achievement in the correct and effective expression of ideas. Most D papers contain serious logical errors and grammatical mistakes. The D paper fails either to present a central thesis or to develop and support it adequately.

5. The grade of F indicates a failure to state or develop a main idea. It may also indicate serious errors in grammar, spelling, punctuation, or sentence structure. Typing errors or poor proofreading are signs of haste and poor presentation. The following major errors are to be avoided: (a) misunderstood ideas used without discrimination; (b) poorly constructed essays without introduction, logical development, or conclusions; (c) essays that miss the point of the question(s) asked; (d) papers that demonstrate derivative use of source material; (e) comma-splicing or run-on sentences; (f) sentence fragments; (g) misspelling common words; (h) lack of verb-subject agreement; (i) lack of antecedent-pronoun agreement; (j) faulty use of tense or person; (k) misplaced or dangling modifiers; and (l) faulty punctuation.
