LIFETIME DIVIDENDS

Rhodes College
— 1848 —

A private college education is like any good investment.

It will appreciate in value
and pay dividends for a lifetime.

If concern about the troubled economy has kept your son or daughter from seriously considering Rhodes, ask yourself one question: Is there a more important investment I can make than my child's college education?

Sure, there are lower cost institutions that are more affordable in the short term. But the lifelong benefits of a Rhodes education will far outlast any savings you'd reap now.

You want them in school. We want them in school.
It's a perfect relationship.

We know college finances can be confusing, and even a little frustrating, especially in this unpredictable economy.

But the bottom line is, financial aid is readily available. In fact, over 80% of current Rhodes students receive some form of federal, state, institutional or outside financial assistance, with total assistance amounting to more than $26 million. Last year, the average need-based financial aid package for first-year students was $28,561, with an average merit-based scholarship of $13,895.

And we've helped families of all income levels afford a Rhodes education.
