Double Celebration

Homecoming, Parents' Day, Oct. 27

The fall's two major events, Homecoming and Parents' Day, will be combined this year in one large economy-size celebration on Saturday, Oct. 27.

Unification of the two will effect a tremendous saving in travel time for the increasing number of alumni who are also parents and like to attend both events — and a saving in valuable class time, for one holiday allows students and professors a free day for both events, with ample time for visiting.

Another innovation this year which promises to be a popular one is the post-game party, including supper in the Park Tower Clubroom, 57 N. Somerville. Homecoming will go on into the evening as alumni gather here to celebrate and reminisce.

Homecoming and Parents' Day separately have drawn several hundred in past years, so probably more than a thousand will attend the combined program, plus many who come through the campus just to see the fraternity and sorority lawn decorations, which are artistically and ingeniously executed on elaborate scales each year. They can be viewed from 10 a.m. on through the day and the public is invited to see them.

The day's football game with Maryville College at 2 p.m. at Hodges Field will inspire the themes. Henry Pope of Montgomery, Ala., student commissioner of social activities, is in charge.

Registration will be held in the Adult Education Center, where coffee will be served all during the morning by the Southwestern Woman's Club.

A varied menu of intellectual tidbits will be offered from 10 until 11 a.m. when several professors will speak simultaneously in three different locations — Hardie Auditorium, Room 6 of Palmer Hall, and Room 101 Science Building. Names and subjects will be posted and each visitor can make his own choice, either by names or by subjects. Most alumni will have a favorite professor they want to hear and parents will probably be helped by their sons and daughters in their selection.

The new Rick Mays Memorial Gateway on University at the north entrance to the gym will be dedicated at 11:15 a.m.

Both parents and alumni are invited to the Homecoming luncheon, 11:30 to 1 in Catherine Burrow Hall, which is jointly sponsored by the Southwestern Men and Southwestern Women of Memphis. The two presidents, William B. Allen '53, and Sarah Boothe (Mrs. T. J.) White '39, are in charge.

The luncheon will be over in time for all to get to the 2 p.m.

The luncheon will be over in time for all to get to the 2 p.m. football game and it's hoped there'll be much to celebrate afterwards, when both residence halls and fraternity lodges will be open to visitors between 4:30 and 5:30 p.m. Buses will furnish transportation between the campus and Hodges Field.

Final event of the day will be the student Homecoming dance from 8-12.

There will be other big games in Memphis on the week-end of Oct. 27 and Dr. W. Edward French '39, president of the Southwestern Alumni Association, anticipating a shortage of accommodations for visiting alumni, suggests that those coming from out of town secure reservations in advance at the hotel or motel of their choice. He also requests that those, either in town or out, planning to attend the post-game party make their reservations with the Alumni Office.

SECOND JOHNSTON TWOSOME AT SW

Wearing the traditional freshman beanies, twins Janice and Dick Johnston of Sheffield, Ala., are among the 280 members of the class of 1966. They are not the first son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Johnston to attend Southwestern. An older brother, Jim, is a current senior and a sister, June, was graduated this year and flew to Formosa to marry Ensign John Hungarland, a Southwestern graduate of 1961.

1962 Loyalty Fund

LANDSLIDE OR BACKSLIDE?

Will the Southwestern Loyalty Fund continue its steady upward trend of the past 10 years?

Or will a sudden drop cause a jagged scar in its smooth upward progress?

The answers to these questions will be found in the number and size of gifts received between now and Dec. 31.

So far receipts look good. Goodbar Morgan '31, director of alumni affairs, reported on Sept. 1 a total of $20,400, which was $700 more than had been received on the same date last year. There was also a gain of 46 in the number of contributors.

Also on the asset side of the picture is the impetus added by the leadership of Charles Freeburg '39, chairman, and some 135 class agents who are active in stimulating giving among their own classmates.

The great big difficulty lies in the amount received during November and December last year when several unusually large gifts pushed the year's total to an all time high of $65,804.

So last year's bonanza becomes this year's challenge. To finish the year with a respectable increase over last year, gifts during the last three months actually need to more than double those of the first nine months of the year.

Surely Southwestern alumni will want to move up permanently past last year's giving record and advance toward the level of support given each year by sons and daughters of comparable southern colleges.

New Conference, Doubled Manpower, Usher in New Football Era

Both power and prestige have been added in large quantities to the Southwestern football formula—one that should add up to some impressive figures in the win columns during the current and coming years.

With power from the more-than-doubled roster, which boasts many outstanding high school stars, and the prestige of the new College Athletic Conference of which Southwestern is a charter member, this year could well go down in history as the turning point in Southwestern's restoration as one of the nation's small college football giants.

The conference affiliation will associate Southwestern with four schools of comparable academic standards and athletic philosophy, and as soon as scheduling can be worked out, each member will play all the other conference members each year. A conference champion in each sport and an over-all champion will be named each year. Other members are Centre College, Washington and Lee, the University of the South at Sewanee, and Washington University in St. Louis

A distinctive symbol of the conference will be the old locomotive bell presented by the Norfolk and Western Railroad. The original bell will be the over-all championship trophy, traveling to each year's winner. All other trophies will either be replicas of the bell or will feature it in some way.

Fargason Field has seen more muscle in operation this season than in many a year. The current squad is 45 strong (compared with 21 last year) with the average line weight of around 200 pounds. There's no lack of depth in any position, either, especially since Coach Woody Johnson has made the interior linemen interchangeable and deep backs interchangeable.

True, Johnson depends heavily on newcomers, but they are much better than Southwestern's previous average freshmen players. Among them is Dick Torti, All-Memphis halfback who has proven himself very worthy of a regular berth on the Lynx 11. Another newcomer is Richard Thomas, All-State end from Mobile, Ala.

The interior line boasts such players as Ron Zumstein, transfer from Arkansas State and former All-Memphis pick; David Tyree, 215-pound center transfer from Wake Forest; Russ Didelot, 220-pound freshman; 222-pound Billy McLeod of Mobile; Paul Cox, former All-Memphis selection and transfer from Wake Forest; Vern McCarty of Laurel, Miss.; James Ball, three-year regular from Memphis' Tech; Alfred Hunt, transfer from University of Mississippi; and a host of other talent from all parts of the United States.

There are only three seniors on the team, and all three are three-year lettermen and starters. They are Jerry Manley, halfback, and Doug Meeks, 235-pound center, both captains, and John Ashcraft, former end and now a top-rated fullback and kicking specialist.

Halfback appears to be the Lynx strong point, with 10 men vying for a starting slot. They are Bill Harwood, last year's scoring and rushing leader; Manley; Torti; Winton Smith, a returning squadman; sophomore Kenny Brunson; Hugh Harwood, Bill's twin; Joe Dycus, former Central High School star and 1960 squadman who returned to Southwestern this year; Buddy Ratcliff, Central's starting halfback; Walter Forbes, former three-year starter at Munford, Tenn.; and Camp Ferguson of Madisonville, Ky.

Dycus also runs in the fullback position, along with Alan Cummings, Ashcraft, and Randy Kyle, transfer from Knox College, and outstanding Lynx javelin hurler last season.

So Southwestern has the men, coaches, and Conference interest that should make football an outstanding part of the Lynx' reputation.

This year's schedule includes four home games, two with conference teams. All of these battles should provide the Southwestern viewer with the ultimate in action and excitement.

Games remaining to be played are: Millsaps College, Oct. 13, Away, night; Georgetown College, Oct. 20, Home, (Hodges, 2:00); Maryville College, Oct. 27, Homecoming and Parents' Day, (Hodges, 2:00); Sewanee, Nov. 3, Away, afternoon; Washington and Lee, Nov. 17, Home (Hodges, 8:00).

Southwestern, which has much to brag about in its buildings, grounds, faculty, and academic reputation, suffers embarrassment when alumni support is tabulated. Compare its $65,804 with the following figures from other colleges:

Washington and Lee	3709,277
Centre
Davidson
Sweet Briar	140,384
Agnes Scott	188,363
University of the South (Sewanee)	119,605
Randolph Macon Woman's College	98,546
Austin College	80,874
Birmingham-Southern

Substantial alumni support has more far reaching benefits than the actual money in hand and the expression of loyalty which it represents, and the implications of meager support from a college's own products extend far beyond considerations of pride and prestige. In the college competition for grants from the large industries and foundations, one of the first measures of worthiness is the level of alumni support.

So it can truly be said that each dollar given to the Loyalty Fund multiplies itself in the other dollars it attracts from outside sources.

Active class agents from the classes graduating during the college's first four years in Memphis are (1926) Rife Saunders of Alexandria, La., and James O. Finley of Adams, Tenn.; (1927) The Rev. John M. Looney of Oxford, Miss., Mrs. J. R. Meadow of Lexington, Ky., Lewis Elmer Pierce of Bowling Green, Ky., and the Rev. Ralph Emerson McCaskill of Quincy, Fla.; (1928) Mrs. Robert O. Hurt, Jr., and Mrs. Richard O. Hunsaker of Memphis, Mrs. B. C. Patton of Murfreesboro, Tenn., Mary A. Parker of New London, N. H., and Price A. Patton of Highland Park, Ill., and (1929) Mrs. John K. Johnson, Mrs. H. W. Pritchard, and Mrs. Walker L. Wellford, Jr., all of Memphis.

From the decade of the thirties: (1930) Dr. Gerald Capers of New Orleans, Maclin Riley of Stanton, Tenn., and Joseph W. Crowley of Memphis; (1931) Mrs. W. D. Mr. Halliburton Presents:

Memorial Tower Dedication Oct. 17

The Richard Halliburton Memorial Tower and the adjacent Tower Building extending to the north will be dedicated at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 17.

Wesley Halliburton, retired Memphis engineer and real estate developer who erected the tower in memory of his son, will personally present the magnificent tower to the college.

A memorial tablet will be unveiled by the four Princeton roommates of Richard Halliburton who will come from four different scattered cities for the occasion — Irvine Oty Hockaday of Kansas City, Dr. Edward Lawrence Keyes III of St. Louis, John Henry Leh of Allentown, Pa., and James Penfield Seiberling of Akron, Ohio. Mr. Seiberling will give a tribute to his former schoolmate who gained international fame for his explorations, adventures, and best selling travel books.

Dr. Peyton N. Rhodes, Southwestern president, will express an appreciation of Mr. and Mrs. Halliburton; Dean Charles I. Diehl '31, will read the memorial inscription; and Stephen Richardson of Shreveport, president of the student body, will give an expression of appreciation. The invocation will be offered by Dr. Henry E. Russell and Dr. W. J. Millard '20 will pronounce the benediction. Music will be by the Southwestern Singers.

A. Van Pritchartt, chairman of the board of directors, will read the Clough Plaque recognizing gifts of the late S. DeWitt Clough of Chicago and Mrs. Clough which aided materially in erecting the Tower Building. Mrs. Clough will be an honored guest at the ceremonies. Guests will see on display in the ground floor rooms of the Tower Building selections from the Jessie L. Clough Art Memorial for Teaching which was given in memory of Mr. Clough's sister.

Dean Jameson M. Jones '36, will read the litany of dedication and the ceremonies will be concluded by the ringing of the Richard Halliburton Bell.

A reception and tour of both buildings will follow.

Also present for the dedication will be members of the college board of directors from the Synods of Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Tennessee of the Presbyterian Church, U.S., who will hold their annual meeting on the campus the following day.

Alumni and friends of the college are especially invited to the dedication and reception.

In a four hour drama that held some 150 spectators from breakfast until lunch on the morning of Sept. 18, the five ton Richard Halliburton Bell was raised 150 feet into the air and lowered into position in the new memorial tower which bears the name of Memphis' famous travel author.

Wesley Halliburton, donor of the tower and the bell, was among the onlookers as the 180 foot crane slowly maneuvered into position and carefully lifted the bell up, up, and over the finely cut stone filigree finials which top the beautiful Gothic shaft.

The fine bronze bell was made in France by the world famous bellfounders, Les Fils de George Paccard, and brought by freighter to the Port of New Orleans. From there three Memphis firms contributed their specialized services in getting it into its permanent mounting. V. Alexander & Co. expedited its entry through customs. Gordon Transports, Inc., unloaded it from the ship and delivered it to the campus. And Patterson Transfer Co. furnished the 180 foot crane and crew which raised it into the tower.

FACULTY, STAFF, ADDED

Seven new members of the faculty at Southwestern marched in the academic procession at the Opening Convocation of the 114th session Sept. 19. They will serve the college in five departments. Two of these professors hold the Ph.D. degree and three more will receive their doctorate this year.

Three additions to the psychology department include Dr. Margaret C. Donaldson, a Whitney-Fulbright visiting lecturer for the first semester, Dr. Allen O. Battle, who is also a clinical psychologist at Gailor Hospital, and James R. Morris, who has a background of extensive study in schizophrenic psychotherapy. Mr. Morris received his B.S. degree from Jacksonville State College in Alabama and his M.A. from the University of Alabama, where he is a candidate for the Ph.D. degree. Mr. Morris has worked at Veterans Administration Hospitals at Tuscaloosa, Ala., and at Battle Creek and Dearborn, Mich. He is married to the former Dethana E. Pennington and has one son.

Dr. Donaldson has taken three degrees and has since taught a number of courses at the University of Edinburg, where she was recently a lecturer in developmental psychology. Her main interest is in the study of language and thinking and her courses will be concerned largely with the formation of some of the main intellectual instruments and powers.

Dr. Battle attended college in Memphis and received his B.S. degree from Siena College in 1949. He was awarded the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from the Catholic University of America in Washington, D. C., and has taught at the University of Tennessee in addition to the work at Gailor.

Douglas P. Hinkle comes to Southwestern as assistant professor of Spanish with wide experience in his subject. He lived in Rio de Janeiro as a child and served with the United States Information Agency in Bolivia for two years. He has also taught English in Caracas, Venezuela. Mr. Hinkle received his B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of Virginia and has completed work for his doctorate there. He was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and the Raven Society at Virginia. He is married to the former Janet Matthews.

New assistant professor of sociology is Charles G. Oakes. He earned the B.A. and M.A. degrees from the University of California at Berkeley. Mr. Oakes is married to the former Carolyn B. Lawrence.

One New Prof is Alumnus

Following the tradition set by many of Southwestern's present professors, William Larry Lacy has returned to his alma mater to teach philosophy. He graduated from Southwestern in 1959 and has recently completed work for his doctorate at the University of Virginia, where he also was a member of the Raven Society. He is married to the former Carol Howell.

Mrs. Phyllis A. Tickle is teaching two courses in freshman English. A newcomer to Memphis, Mrs. Tickle is the wife of Dr. Samuel M. Tickle, a resident in internal medicine at a Memphis hospital, and she has taught at Furman University, where she received her M.A. Mrs. Tickle attended Shorter College in Rome, Ga., and was awarded the B.A. degree from East Tennessee State College. The Tickles have three small daughters and live at 265

N. Waldran Blvd.

Four members of last year's faculty have resigned and one has completed his year's residence. Mrs. Rose Link Mosby '53 of the Spanish department, Dr. Myrtle C. Nash of the psychology department, and the math department's Dr. Leland L. Scott have resigned and Dr. John C. Osoinach, was a visiting lecturer in sociology for last year only. Dr. Ross J. Pritchard of the department of International Studies resigned in June, as was previously announced, and has been appointed a special assistant to the director of the Peace Corps in Washington.

Five Alumni Join College Staff

Five alumni have joined the staff at Southwestern this fall and are working in various capacities. Mrs. Arthur B. Birge (Jeannette Hollenberg '42) is assistant to the director of alumni affairs. Last year "Jet" was alumnae secretary at Miss Hutchison's School and editor of the alumnae paper, The Highlander.

Delights, Dilemmas

Both Are Parts of College Experience

"A student can view his educational experience as a paradise of pleasure or as an arena of combat," remarked Dr. Laurence F. Kinney in his address at opening convocation.

Southwestern's 114th session was inaugurated Sept. 19 with the traditional academic procession into Fisher Memorial Garden. More than 830 students participated in the exercises, including 340 freshmen and transfer students. Beanies and posters identified the freshmen, who arrived a week before from 19 states and the District of Columbia.

In addressing both new and old members of the college community, Dr. Kinney stated that "Some people stay on a campus four years and never enter the community of learning" — to Dr. Kinney they dwell on an Elysian Field. College does present "the best four years of our lives," but those who interpret the delights of college life as meaning pleasure-before-responsibility seldom survive the four years.

If a student views college as an arena of combat, he can expect to struggle with many dilemmas, Dr. Kinney said. "Above the entrance to Burrow. Library, you can observe representations of the seven liberal arts. In keeping with a long tradition, logic (or dialectic) is represented by two dragons in conflict. This is not, as some suppose, a battle between professor and student. It is rather a conflict which takes place within every honest searcher for truth . . . and this activity demands man's most disciplined effort. It pits one thought against its opposite and champions each, yet all the time criticizing and evaluating both.

"We cannot receive uncritically from men of any age 'a transmission of truth.' Thought must be re-examined and refined by each new learner. And this is a joint enterprise, the common task which constitutes a community of learners. The learning community is an arena rather than an Elysian field. But paradoxically, there are delights: they are the delights which spring from engagement in the common struggle."

Dr. Kinney identified the second dilemma of the learning community as the tension which persists between tentativeness and conviction, between pursuing and finding. He cited the life of Dr. Albert Schweitzer, which is still being critically re-examined by the 87-year-old humanitarian. "The answer lies in a remarkable human capacity to abstract from life for study and re-examination even the fundamental values on which life rests. For values strive with one another. Competing loyalties seek to impel a person in different directions, demanding that he resolve these pulls by establishing some priorities. It is in these decisions that one's ultimate loyalty is determined; it is a question of what (or who) will be his God. The true learning community is the place where one learns not only about man and the world he lives in, but the place where he learns to be a man."

William V. Davidson '62 is field representative for admissions and alumni affairs for the coming year. Bill was president of the student body last year and during the past summer was one of ten Americans chosen to participate in the Experiment in International Living program. He spent three months in India, learning the history, culture, and language of the country, and even spent a night in the Taj Mahal.

Frances McDonald '62 is assistant to the admissions counselor and is continuing her musical studies. Nancy Myers '61 is a secretary in the Adult Education Center. Last year she worked with a Memphis bank translating Spanish and French.

Billy Jon Woods '57, who recently became choral director at Evergreen Presbyterian Church, is teaching one course for Southwestern's music department.

Another addition to the staff is Miss Margaret Wagner, who is secretary to the comptroller. She replaces Miss Helen Bowld who retired in June after 19 years as secretary to Mr. C. L. Springfield.

Southwestern History Department

Dr. John Henry Davis, chairman of the Department of History, says this of his subject and its handling at Southwestern:

History has a mediating role. It has aspects of both an art and a science, and is at the same time considered one of the humanities and a social science. The department believes that a knowledge of the past is necessary for an understanding of the present—but history eschews the role of prophet of the future.

In the past, this department—like many others—was perhaps largely oriented towards our European (Judaeo-Christian) background. Recent world developments have made it imperative that we enlarge the "traditional" approach to Western Civilization—by introducing courses on Russian and other non-Western areas, and by confronting the problem of the "new nations" which have sprung into existence with the decay of 19th century imperialisms.

The department, through the years, has been willing to try new techniques: for example, the combined course in Bible, history and philosophy entitled Man In The Light of History and Religion has been an attempt to develop both general interdepartmental and team teaching. By means of tutorials and honors courses it has been possible to provide students with experience in the study of special areas, as well as with some of the techniques of research.

Another function of the department has been of an auxiliary nature, that is, we have provided the background history for other departments such as English, political science, and international studies.

Finally, we note that the recent awareness of America's increasing influence in world affairs has quickened interest in our own past — our political, intellectual and social history. Thus new courses have been designed to meet this need.

DR. JOHN HENRY DAVIS, devil-may-care dresser and every-inch-the-Rhodes-Scholar who is one of Southwestern's most beloved campus characters, bills himself modestly as "faculty marshal and public orator for emeriti."

Actually, his marshalling and leading of academic processions on state occasions and his distinguished performance in bringing high comedy relief into farewell addresses honoring retiring colleagues have been among the least of his faculty responsibilities and services.

He is one of the originators of both the tutorial system and the "Man" course and edits the "Man" syllabus. He has made substantial contributions to many faculty committees over the years and serves currently as chairman of two, the committees on fine arts and on honors and tutorial courses.

A native of Lexington, Ky., Dr. Davis received his B.A. degree at the University of Kentucky, took both B.A. and M.A. degrees at Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar, and later earned his Ph.D. at the University of Chicago, doing his thesis on Robert Harley, secretary of state and prime minister under Queen Anne. English history has remained his special field of interest.

He takes pleasure in pursuit of a variety of hobbies—golf, painting (his chef d'oeuvre being the mural in his kitchen featuring medieval knights and monks), music, and a leisurely study of Russian—and is a dedicated worker in scholarly, religious, and civic organizations. He is a past president of Phi Beta Kappa, president of the West Tennessee Historical Society, a perpetual deacon at St. Mary's Cathedral, and a member of the board of trustees of both the Memphis Public Affairs Forum and the Memphis Academy of Arts.

His published works include a History of St. Mary's Cathedral and Richard Lodge as Historian.

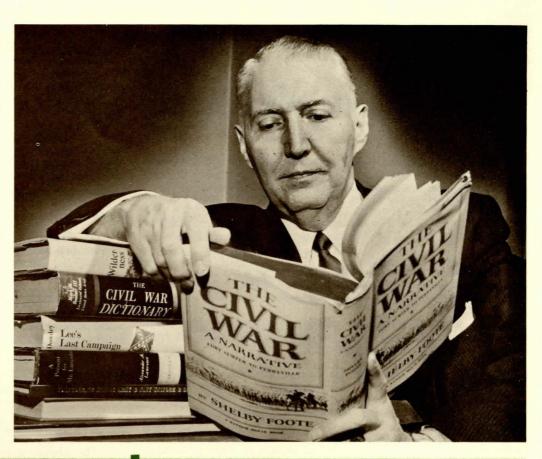

Dr. Granville D. Davis is a double title holder at Southwestern—dean of continuing education and professor of American history.

In the former capacity he heads one of the nation's leading centers for adult education. In the latter he teaches American history to undergraduates and serves on the "Man" faculty.

Although the Civil War period has been his principal area of research, his interests range from the ancient world to the planning of modern cities. He is offering a new course this year entitled "Intellectual History of the United States," which he terms a study of "the interaction between the time and the idea."

During the past summer he conducted the Adult Education Center's first Seminar Abroad, touring Greece and the Holy Land with a group of Memphians who had been studying the history and culture of these areas at meetings during the previous year.

Dr. Davis is immediate past president of the Memphis and Shelby County Health and Welfare Planning Council and current vicepresident of the Rotary Club. He holds the A.B. from the University of Arkansas, where he was a Phi Beta Kappa, the A.M. and Ph.D. from the University of Illinois.

John M. Hemphill II, assistant professor of history, began his higher education as an engineering student at Georgia Tech, continued it briefly as a midshipman at the Naval Academy during World War II, and shifted both subject and locale following the war, graduating from Johns Hopkins in 1948.

He has since received his M.A. and is completing work for his Ph.D. at Princeton. He studied for two years as a Fulbright Scholar at King's College of the University of London, spent a summer in Sweden with the Experiment in International Living, worked on historical research for Colonial Williamsburg, Inc. for five years, and meanwhile taught parttime at both Princeton and William and Mary. He is now at work on his doctoral dissertation entitled "Economic Development of Virginia under the British Commercial System."

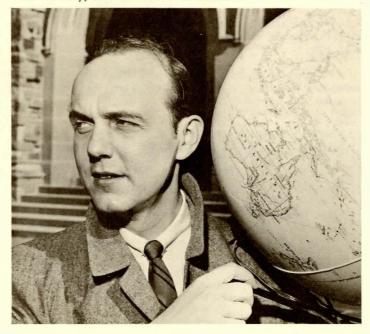

In the picture with him is a microfilm reader which he uses extensively in studying 18th century documents.

Mr. Hemphill has had articles published in several scholarly periodicals and has one forthcoming entitled "Study of the 18th Century Book Bindings in Virginia." Dr. Franklin M. Wright, a native of Iowa, became acquainted with Southwestern while assigned to the Second Army Headquarters in Memphis during World War II, returned as a Southwestern faculty member in 1956, and is now associate professor of history.

He received both B.A. and M.A. degrees from Cornell, where he was a Phi Beta Kappa, was a Fulbright Scholar for two years at the Institute of Historical Research of the University of London, and received his Ph.D. at Johns Hopkins.

He is presently working on the conversion of his doctoral thesis dealing with Richard Plantaganet, Third Duke of York, into a biography.

Dr. Wright's special interest is in European history and his hobbies encompass music, (he sings baritone in the St. Mary's Cathedral choir) inscriptive writing, and collecting Roman imperial coins, prints of the great caricaturists of the 18th century, and the works of Mozart.

W FACULTY IN THE NEWS

If's Fame Rides the Waves

Dr. John Quincy Wolf has long been known to Southwesternfor his multiple hobbies. Besides the expected literary interests in English professor he has been an avid photographer, collector natique furniture and glass, and sports enthusiast.

His latest addiction—ballad collecting—has brought him such spread renown that two of his public sent him during the past ner stories of his song hunting which appeared in ships' newsers on Atlantic liners.

The United Press International story which appeared in The an Post of the Nieuw Amsterdam with a Memphis dateline n:

"He sat on the porch steps of his tiny, rustic cabin, lazily nming a guitar. The only other sound was the call of a lark a the dense woods fringing the clearing.

"The man began to sing—slowly, softly at first. His Ozark ag dug into the heart of a lore-filled tune remembered from hildhood in the Arkansas mountains.

"Oddly out of place in the backwoods surroundings came her sound—the hum of a tape recorder.

"The machine, however, had been there before."

Its operator, of course, was Dr. Wolf, who spends much of his et time hunting down unrecorded ballads or new versions of known ones. This hobby was started many years ago around nome in Batesville, Ark. His scholarly curiosity was aroused in he found there was a wealth of musical folklore handed in from father to son and known only to the people who sanguallads in the backwoods areas.

So he began visiting, inquiring at country stores and post es about who in the neighborhood sings the old songs. He now on tape more than a thousand such ballads. He has discovered encouraged several talented singers who now are recording as and has become known as such an authority that people him in ballads from widely scattered regions throughout the h. One of his discoveries was Jimmie Driftwood singing "The ee of New Orleans," which has been a top-selling record for ral years now.

One of his special current interests is in the "Sacred Harp" ng which is still popular among country people in parts of issippi and Dr. Wolf has been instrumental in bringing much his country music to the city for city dwellers to know and

He continues to have many invitations to lecture and play his and often invites some of his mountain friends to appear him.

He also has introduced into the English curriculum at Southern a one hour course in ballads which has proven extremely lar.

Good College — P.N.R.

What is a good college? Dr. Peyton N. Rhodes gave one efinition at opening convocation: "A good college ought to ford a situation, a total environment, in which one can disver excitement in using one's mind." Not only is textbook formation important, but the ability to make sound and flective judgments and to exhibit a measure of true wisdom to the real values of using one's mind. "The more you seek ere," Dr. Rhodes told the students, "with enthusiasm and ersistence, the life of the mind and of the spirit, the more ou will make Southwestern the good college you want it be."

Mr. Warner Joins SW Board

Jack W. Warner of Tuscaloosa, Ala., has recently been named to Southwestern's Board of Directors, representing the Synod of Alabama. Mr. Warner's nomination came at the retirement of John M. McMillan of Stockton, Ala., who served on the board for eight years.

Mr. Warner is president and chairman of the board of the Gulf States Paper Corporation of Tuscaloosa. A sister, Mrs. Joan W. Arnold '48, is now living at Lemon Grove, Calif. Mr. Warner's address is Box 3199, Tuscaloosa.

Lyons Continues Medical Search

Dr. Harold Lyons of Southwestern's chemistry department received last month notification of a continuation of his grant from the National Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases which will allow him $14,831 for his research during the coming year.

He is seeking the possible chemical causes of slipped discs and other diseases of the connective tissue. His work is done in the Southwestern laboratories and his assistant is Fay Quinn, a 1961 Southwestern graduate.

Dr. Lyons, who holds a B.S. from the City College of New York and both M.S. and Ph.D. from Oklahoma State University, joined the Southwestern faculty in 1958.

Physics Department Rides Again

The physics department has packed up its mobile laboratory again and taken off for Climax, Colo., where they are studying man-made eclipses of the sun at the University of Colorado's High Altitude Observatory.

The Southwestern contingent on this scientific safari includes two alumni, Dr. Jack Howard Taylor '44, head of the physics department, and Prof. Robert M. MacQueen '60, also A. C. Emery, instructor in electronics.

They took along with them three infrared spectrometers and are studying the wave lengths and intensities of the radiation from the sun's corona.

Use of the University of Colorado's coronagraph, which is able to simulate an eclipse, Dr. Taylor explains, "gives us many opportunities for study under weather conditions of our own choosing without having to wait months or years for a natural eclipse then perhaps be disappointed by cloud interference."

It also affords valuable experience and information preparatory to the study of natural eclipses when they do occur, he said. The department was greatly pleased to be the first invited to share Colorado's fine new equipment.

This is the department's third expedition. The first was to participate in observation of the solar eclipse in the Canary Islands in 1959 and the second to take part in the government "Project Firefly" at Santa Rosa Island, Fla., in 1960. All were made under the research grant from the Air Force Cambridge Research Laboratories.

Two Southwestern coeds of recent years are teaching at Harvard this year while pursuing their Ph.D. degree studies. Mary Jane Smalley, who got her B.A. from Southwestern in 1958, and Charlotte Hogsett, who graduated in 1960, also have several other distinctions in common. Both were French majors and both made both Phi Beta Kappa and Who's Who in American Colleges. Both received Fulbright grants and studied in France for a year then came back to work on their master's degrees on Woodrow Wilson fellowships. Charlotte got hers at the University of Toronto and Mary Jane's is from Harvard.

Now both have set the same goal—the Ph.D. in Romance Languages-and each will teach undergraduate classes in French. Mary Jane's degree work involves seven languages— Latin, Greek, German, French, Spanish, Italian, and Portuguese. Charlotte's taking fewer languages, but hopes to find time to brush up on the side on her Russian, which she learned at Southwestern and taught at Central High School for one year while she was a student here. Mary Jane also had some Memphis teaching experience as a member of the faculty of Miss Hutchison's School for one year and as primary French teacher while she was still in Southwestern.
