Not pictured: Mrs. Kenneth Harper; The Reverend Mr. James V. Johnson, Jr.; Mr. Earl W. Mallick; Mr. Orrick Metcalfe; and Dr. W. J. Millard '20.

Southern Bell Saves the Day Watkins Speaks from New York

July marked the beginning of Southwestern's drive to meet a Ford Foundation challenge grant of $1,900,000. It will be necessary for the college to raise at least $3,800,000 in a three year period in order to receive this amount.

An Alumni Chairmen Conference was held on campus October 15-16 to discuss plans for the Challenge Campaign.

Dinner Meeting

The Conference began with a dinner at Catherine Burrow Hall, presided over by Dr. Alfred O. Canon '44, dean of alumni and development.

Henry C. Watkins '35, National Chairman of the Alumni Challenge Campaign, was unable to attend, but managed to provide the highlight of the evening by addressing the assembly via amplified long distance phone. Jefferson Davis '31, vice-president of Southern Bell Telephone in Atlanta, was in attendance and smiled happily throughout the "telephoned speech."

Henry Watkins

Following the dinner, Alumni Association President Jim Breytspraak '38, presided over a meeting in the Adult

Challenge and a Plan

Mr. A. Van Pritchart, chairman of Southwestern's board of directors and executive committee, addressed the group, discussing "A Challenge and a Plan," after which the new Southwestern color movie, "To Meet Tomorrow," was shown.

The following morning, the group met in plenary session for an explanation of region and district organization, and then divided into regional group discussions. The conference concluded on Homecoming Day; therefore those attending continued with the planned activities.

Regional Chairmen

Working under National Chairman Henry Watkins are: John Farley '37 of Westfield, N. J.; Schuyler Lowe '31 of Washington, D. C.; Jefferson Davis '31 of Atlanta, Georgia; Dr. U. S. Gordon '15 of Gainesville, Fla.; Frank A. England, Jr. '41 of Greenville, Miss.; Dr. Andrew H. Miller '46 of Nashville, Tenn.; Sidney F. Davis '27 of Toledo, Ohio; Dr. R. P. Richardson '17 of Pine Bluff, Ark.; John B. Reid, Jr. '44 of Dallas, Texas; and James E. Ratcliff, Jr. '52 of San Francisco, Calif.

Homecoming—1965

Southwestern's Homecoming Day for 1965 was on October 16, and although Southwestern did not fare so well against Millsaps on the football field, the day still proved thrilling for many students, parents, and alumni.

The new Southwestern movie, "To Meet Tomorrow" drew a large crowd in Hardie Auditorium at 11:00 a.m., and was followed by the homecoming luncheon at 12:15 in William Neely Mallory Memorial Gymnasium. Guests of honor at the luncheon were the 1965 homecoming royalty and all former homecoming royalty. This year's homecoming queen was Miss Carol Pickens, formerly of Memphis. Miss Pickens is a member of Chi Omega sorority.

Following the 21-12 defeat, fraternities held open house for all alumni and guests. Later that night the "Trendells" played for the homecoming dance held at Rainbow Terrace.

UNIVERSITY LECTURERS

Southwestern annually joins with a number of distinguished institutions and their local alumni groups to offer all responsible citizens an intellectual experience and to strengthen the vital ties which bind the alumnus to his alma mater in mind and spirit.

In charge of this University Lecturers Series is Dr. Alfred O. Canon, Southwestern's dean of alumni and development.

The Series began on November 2, when Dr. Robert I. Crane, professor of history at Duke University, spoke on "Problems of Independent Asia." Smith College was represented on November 11, 1965, when Dr. A. B. Overstreet, professor of government, spoke on "The American Foreign Policy Response to Persistent Crises."

Other speakers coming up for the Series include:

JANUARY 12, 1966—George T. Reynolds, professor of physics at Princeton University. "Science and Human Affairs."

FEBRUARY 8, 1966—Wilbur C. Nelson, chairman of Department Aerospace Engineering, at the University of Michigan. "An Inside View of the Space Program."

All Southwestern alumni, parents, and friends of the college are cordially invited to attend these lectures.

"Splendid Teacher" EX-PROFESSOR DIES

A former Southwestern professor, Dr. Robert P. Strickler, died September 22, 1965, at Wychmere Nursing Center where he had been a patient more than a year. Dr. Strickler, who came to Southwestern in 1924, served as chairman of the Greek department and the curriculum committee, and was known as a "splendid teacher" to his devoted students.

Dr. Strickler was graduated from the University of West Virginia and studied in Oxford, England three years on a Rhodes scholarship. He completed his Ph.D. degree in Greek and philology at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

Financial Publication Book Authored by Bevis

A new volume in Studies of the Modern Corporation for the Columbia University Graduate School of Business, and published by The Macmillan Company, has been written by Southwestern alumnus Herman W. Bevis '30, a Senior Partner of Price Waterhouse & Company in New York.

Bevis

This original and valuable book, Corporate Financial Reporting in a Competitive Economy, provides the first thorough survey of corporate financial reporting in publicly owned corporations.

FALL ALUMNI MEETINGS

Peachtree Presbyterian Church, 3434 Roswell Rd. N.W., was the site for a special Southwestern meeting for the Atlanta area held on Sunday, October 3, 1965. Alumnus J. L. Jerden '59 was in charge of the arrangements including a dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Another meeting was held in New York at the Yale Club on October 4, 1965. Mr. Walter James Wade '44, vice president of J. Walter Thompson Co., handled the arrangements for this meeting.

Then on October 5, 1965 a meeting was held in Washington, D. C. at the Key Bridge Marriott Motel. A reception was held at 7:00 p.m. and followed by a dinner at 7:30. Alumnus John and Mary Pond, both of the class of 1940 were in charge of the arrangements.

New Movie Shown

At all three of these meetings the new Southwestern movie, "To Meet Tomorrow" was shown. Following the movie, President David Alexander '53 addressed the group of alumni, parents of current students, prospective students, and counselors, and outlined some of the interesting features of the 1965-75 Development Program.

Members of the Southwestern staff attending all three meetings were President David Alexander, Dr. Alfred O. Canon '44, dean of alumni and development, and Dr. Jameson M. Jones '36, dean of the college. Others able to attend some of the meetings were: Mr. Sam Drash '59, Dr. Ray M. Allen '44, dean of admissions, and Dr. Granville Davis, dean of continuing education.

Wesley Halliburton

Mr. Wesley Halliburton, retired real estate and farm land dealer, traveler, and friend of Southwestern, passed away in Memphis on November 1, 1965. He was 95.

He was among those instrumental in bringing Southwestern to Memphis from Clarksville, Tennessee in 1925, and was ardent in his support of the College over the years.

MALLORY GYMNASIUM

As one of his first "public" duties as new Deputy Director of The United States Educational Foundation in India, Eugene M.

Schaeffer '49 accompanied this year's group of American Fulbrighters on their annual visit with the President of India.

Spokesman for the group, Mr. Schaeffer presented the group of 100 or more to Dr. Radhakrishman at a public audience in the President's official residence, the Rashtrapati Bhavan.

See Class of 1949 section of "With the Alumni" for additional information on Mr. Schaeffer.

In 1958 Mr. Halliburton was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humanities degree, and in October 1962 he participated in the dedication of the Richard Halliburton Memorial Tower on the campus, a monument erected to the memory of his son.

Dr. David Alexander, Southwestern president, said of Mr. Halliburton:

"Few men are able to combine wisdom with the spirit of adventure as well as Mr. Halliburton. He believed in the ideals of Southwestern because he believed in students. He gave liberally of his substance and his spirit, and it is fitting that the lofty tower presides over the entire campus as a memorial to Richard Halliburton and now to Mr. and Mrs. Halliburton. In the stones of the tower, its symmetry and beauty, his ideals are crystallized as a reminder to all of us of the adventurous pursuit of genuineness and excellence."

Dr. Peyton N. Rhodes referred to Mr. Halliburton as "an inspiration." "He was a rare individual who always looked to the future and never backward. He was always good company and was vigorous in everything he did."

ALUMNI SURVEY

Many of the recent alumni questionnaires have been returned; however, a larger return is necessary for proper evaluation and preparation of an alumni directory. Please fill your copy in immediately and return. If, by chance, you failed to receive a copy, notify the Alumni Office.

Miss Alice Woods, daughter of the late Dr. N. M. Woods, chancellor of S.P.U., attended Southwestern as its first co-ed. Retired after a career of 40 years of teaching, she resides at 633 Rozelle. She holds a bachelor's degree from Sienna College, and has done advanced study at Maryland Art Institute, at Columbia University, and at the Universities of Chicago, Colorado, Tennessee, and Memphis State. Her contributions to the educational and cultural life of Memphis are legion.

Class of 1908

Edwin Lee Carney, retired, was formerly Plant Manager of General Foods Corporation. Genealogy and following the stock market are his favorite hobbies. He and Mrs. Carney live at 325 Franklin Street, in Clarksville, Tenn. Also living in Clarksville are his brother, N. L. '10 and C. G. '12.

Class of 1910

Richard Asa Bolling is pastor emeritus of First Presbyterian Church, Cleveland, Miss. A Rotarian, Mason and Shriner, he has been awarded the Silver Beaver, highest honor given by the Boy Scouts to volunteer workers, is a trustee of Belhaven College and Chamberlain Hunt Academy, and a former Moderator, Synod of Mississippi. Dr. Bolling was honored by Southwestern in 1933 when he received the Doctor of Divinity degree here. His special interests are still people and preaching; he includes auto trips among his favorite pursuits . . . with his unsurpassed energy, the inevitable conclusion is that he gets around quite a bit! He and Mrs. Bolling are the parents of a daughter and a son—the latter, Richard A. Bolling, Jr. '46, a resident of Memphis.

After graduation from S.P.U. Norfleet Lynn Carney attended the University of Tennessee, where in 1913 he earned the B.S. degree in electrical engineering. In 1931 he received the M.S. degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Kansas, and continued throughout the thirties to take further graduate work at George Peabody. A retired school administrator, he and Mrs. Carney may be addressed at Rural Route 8, Clarksville, Tenn.

Everett Woods, 1756 Glenwood Place, one of Memphis' most prominent architects, heads the architectural firm which bears his name at 212 Adams Avenue. President of the Board of Trustees of Brooks Memorial Art Gallery, Chairman of the Advisory Board of the Memphis Museum, and a member of the Code Revision Committee—Art Center Committee—City of Memphis, he is also an Elder at Second Presbyterian Church. His hobbies are sketching, painting, and hiking. He and Mrs. Woods are the parents of two daughters and a son, all loyal Southwestern alumni. (See Class of 1907.)

Class of 1911

Mebane Ramsay, 1212 West Mathews Street, Roswell, New Mexico, went from S.P.U. to the University of Omaha and thence to Princeton, where he earned the M.A. degree, and to Princeton Theological Seminary, where he graduated with a B.D. degree. Although retired from the active ministry, he continues active at Roswell Community College, where he teaches a course in the Humanities, and at the First Presbyterian Church, where he instructs a class of young married people. Classmates will remember his father, the late Rev. Franklin P. Ramsay, who was a professor at Southwestern in Clarksville, and his brother, the late Franklin P. Ramsay, Jr., who attended the university in 1909 and 1910.

Eugene Crampton Scott, 855 Artwood Road N.E., Atlanta, has served as interim minister in various churches for varying periods of time since his retirement, enjoys having time to indulge in his favorite hobby —reading, and to do a lot of work around home. A graduate of Union Theological Seminary, he was honored with the D.D. degree by Austin College, Sherman, Texas, in 1934. Dr. and Mrs. Scott are the parents of three married daughters, one of whom attended Southwestern.

Howard L. Smith, retired v-president of American Snuff Company, and Mrs. Smith live at 801 Pinetree Road, Winter Park, Florida, and frequently take Baptist Church Library Conference Assignments in other states. Mr. Smith is engaged in numerous other Baptist activities—Chairman of Counting Commission, Florida State Convention, member of the State Board of Missions, financial secretary, and member of the library staff.

Poytress William Bell is a retired passenger agent. With the exception of a year's service in France during the first World War, his entire "active" career was spent in association with the Illinois Central Railroad. Widely known and loved for his un-failing courtesy to everyone with whom he deals, Mr. Bell remains a particular favorite with former sixth grade girls at Miss Hutchinson's School . . . every fall for years he was one of the adults accompanying this group on an educational trip to New Orleans. He lives at 1763 Eastmoreland, is treasurer of the T. K. Young Class at Idlewild Presbyterian Church, an avid gardener, and one of the Memphis alumni who helped members of the Class of 1915 observe their 50th Reunion in June. His daughter Ann is a member of the class of 1941.

Irving P. Bright, merchant, is president of the firm which bears his name, at 407 Broadway, Paducah, Ky.

Kenneth Graves is a practicing physician in Roanoke, Virginia, where he is a member of the Roanoke Valley Heart Association, Roanoke Arthritis Medical Committee, former Secretary-Treasurer of the Virginia Board of Medical Examiners, and active in many other phases of community life. His special hobby is roses; he and Mrs. Graves reside at 35 Cardinal Road and have two married daughters.

John Turner Gray, 233 North Grand Avenue, Brownsville, Tenn., writes, "I have always appreciated my two years at Southwestern (S.P.U.) and am very proud of Southwestern's present record." Mr. Gray transferred from S.P.U. to Washington and Lee, earning his B.A. degree there in 1911. An Elder in the Presbyterian Church and a member of the Tennessee Historical Commission, he is Chancellor, Ninth Chancery Division, State of Tennessee, a former District Governor of Rotary, and a Phi Beta Kappa. He and Mrs. Gray are the parents of two daughters and a son, the latter a member of the class of 1953.

Solon Thomas Hill, although retired from the active ministry, continues to serve as a supply preacher. He holds the A.B., A.M., and B.D. degrees from Southwestern. He and Mrs. Hill are the parents of two daughters, one of whom, Irma Hill Smith (Mrs. J. R.), is a member of the class of 1942. The Rev. Mr. Hill should be addressed at 994 Colgate Road in Memphis.

Dr. Berthold Stamps Kennedy received the Doctor of Humanities degree from Southwestern in 1964. He earned the degree of Doctor of Medicine at the University of Chicago in 1917, practiced as a surgeon, and is now retired and living at Belle Mina, Alabama (P. O. Box 127). A member of the American College of Surgeons and a Deacon of the First Presbyterian Church, Decatur, his favorite pastimes are golf, travel, and fishing.

Of his "HOBBIES/SPECIAL INTERESTS," Isaac Stuart McElroy writes, "1. Tennis at 73 is a good game if one does not try to act too young. 2. Bridge. 3. Putting up shelves for my wife." After earning his B.D. at Union Seminary the Rev. Mr. McElroy was a missionary in Japan for five years. Upon his return he served pastorates in Tennessee and North Carolina, earned a master's degree at George Peabody College, and for the next twenty-five years worked with the American Bible Society as District Secretary for Virginia, West Virginia, and North Carolina, retiring in June of 1961. The McElroys' address is 2500 Kenmore Road, Richmond, Virginia.

Franklin Crane Talmage, retired but still in great demand as a supply preacher, lives at 2254 Lake Lucine Drive in Jacksonville, Florida. His favorite hobbies are cabinet making and gardening. In 1942 Dr. Talmage was honored by King College with the degree of Doctor of Divinity. He was Secretary of Church Extension, Atlanta Presbytery, from 1937-57; Moderator Presbytery of Atlanta 1927, 1933, and 1956; and Moderator, Synod of Georgia, in 1938. His published "History of Presbytery of Atlanta" and "History of the Synod of Georgia" stand as significant contributions to the Presbyterian Church in the United States.

Thomas Ford Raines enjoys fishing, hunting, and golf in his spare time. He is associated with the Davis Insurance Agency in Houston, Texas, (P. O. Box 22201).

Claude G. Partridge is pastor of Williams Memorial Church, Route 3, Troy, Alabama. After his days at S.P.U. he completed requirements for his bachelor's degree at the University of Louisville in 1915 and earned the B.D. degree the following year, at Louisville Presbyterian Seminary. He and Mrs. Partridge have two married daughters.

Frank C. Pinkerton retired from his practice of medicine four years ago when critically injured by a hit and run driver. Since then he has written many articles for various publications, had charge of the American Hospital, Guatemala, C.A., and kept busy with innumerable other projects. He and Mrs. Pinkerton and their daughter, Miss Martha Pinkerton, live at 3575 Seay Avenue in Norfolk, Virginia, and attend Second Presbyterian Church.

"Life by the mile, a trial! Life by the inch, a cinch! We all know this bit of doggerel; but anyone scanning today's scene might say no one's heeding it. In a new book, Theodore S. Smylie takes seriously the idea of living a day at a time. The new collection of meditations, 'Taking Stock: Help for Daily Living,' was published by John Knox Press on October 11." Also the author of "The ABC's of Winning Men" and a group of sermons under the title "Pocket Pulpit Series," Dr. Smylie is pastor emeritus of Oak Hill Presbyterian Church, U.P.U.S.A., in St. Louis, chaplain at Bethesda General Hospital there. He and Mrs. Smylie reside at 3477 Macklind Avenue, have three sons in the ministry, one in business. Dr. Smylie's father, the late Nathaniel Smylie, class of 1885 and later a member of the Southwestern faculty, was also a Presbyterian minister.

Class President and Valedictorian Polk J. Atkinson lives at 1200 South Arlington Ridge Road in Arlington, Virginia, is a retired Colonel, U.S.A., and has a master's in education which he earned at George Washington University in 1956. His grandfather, Mr. Q. C. Atkinson, was in the class of 1861 and his father, Quintus C. Atkinson, Jr., in the class of 1884; his son, Q. C. III, carries on a proud Southwestern name and follows in his father's footsteps . . . he's currently a Lt.Col. Col. and Mrs. Atkinson also have a married daughter.

Class of 1915

John Andrew Edmiston is president of Kelly Mercantile Co., Kellyville, Oklahoma,

FORTY YEARS AGO . . .

"...we drove down Jackson Avenue to Trezevant, turned down Trezevant to North Parkway. As we drove along Trezevant Avenue, I saw vast spaces, the only buildings then existing in the vicinity being the big Gage home on Trezevant and Snowden School at the corner of North Parkway and McLean Boulevard, only part of which had been built at that time. There was plenty of ground between Trezevant and McLean. There were dairy farms in that whole section. I said, 'You say there is no other ground except that way out east; what is the matter with this ground? who owns it?' Dr. Crowe said, 'I do not know who owns it, but I can take you to a man who will tell you.' I said, 'All right, let's go.' He took me to the office of Mr. E. B. LeMaster. I asked him if he knew the property opposite Overton Park, between Trezevant and McLean. 'Know it,' he replied, 'I certainly do. That is the most valuable property in Memphis.'"

In these words Dr. Diehl later recalled his exultation when final plans were being made in 1924 for the removal of Southwestern from Clarksville to Memphis. "A chance of a lifetime" he called it; we might prefer to call it a chance of several centuries. Surrounded by a stalwart band of Presbyterians and civic-minded Memphians, he built a college and built it well.

Forty years ago—a generation in the Biblical sense—Southwestern opened its five newly finished Gothic buildings. In that forty years a steady progress has lifted Southwestern into prominence and a national reputation for uncompromising excellence. The college now has twenty permanent buildings, more than eight thousand students have shared in its high academic and moral standards, and a national reputation for uncompromising excellence. The college now has twenty permanent buildings, more than eight thousand students have shared in its high academic and moral standards, and a full-time faculty of seventy-five now gives direction to the mental, spiritual, and physical development of almost 1000 students. It has grown in size and academic stature since 1925, but the goals were set and the aspirations declared then, and it has never deviated from those high resolves and noble ideals.

Surely there is no better way by which to commemorate the fortieth anniversary of Southwestern in Memphis than to read again Dr. Diehl's address of November 27, 1925, and to regain the excitement of those hope-brightened days in an album of contemporary photographs.

MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE

DECEMBER, 1925

FOREWORD

ON September 24, 1925, SOUTHWESTERN, The College of the Mississippi Valley, founded in Clarksville, Tennessee, as Southwestern Presbyterian University, opened its doors in Memphis, Tennessee. On November 26-28, SOUTHWESTERN held a "Jubilee and Inaugural Celebration," the two-fold purpose of which was to commemorate its fifty years of service as a college, and to solemnize its opening in Memphis. On the second day of the celebration, in Hardie Auditorium of Palmer Hall, the college buildings were formally presented to the Board of Directors of SOUTHWESTERN by the Reverend Albert Bruce Curry, D.D., of Memphis. In accepting the buildings on behalf of the Board, President Diehl took occasion to enunciate the aims and ideals of SOUTHWESTERN. To his address this booklet is devoted.

"The Ideals of Southwestern"

It may not be amiss at this time to say a few words about our ideals, about the motives which actuated us in our planning, about the purposes of this institution, to make clear what has been in our minds and what we are trying to do. A brief historical reference will enable us to do this the more understandingly.

Before the Civil War there was on the part of the Presbyterian Church a well-defined policy of higher education for this territory. The program was to have one first-class Christian college for each Synod. The state system of schools had not been elaborated, and the education of this section was largely in the hands of the Presbyterians. In each Synod there was a Presbyterian College, or the nucleus of one. Stewart College, LaGrange College and Oakland College were all doing excellent work, and were growing in endowment, in equipment, in patronage and in prestige. The effect of the war upon these institutions was pitifully destructive, and the hardships of the reconstruction age intensified the burdens. There was nothing but desolation and poverty. The colleges were closed; in some cases the buildings were literally torn down and the equipment destroyed. In other cases the property was confiscated and endowments were lost in Confederate money. But the Presbyterians did not despair. They determined to rebuild their schools along with their homes, their churches and their fortunes. There were no rich men who could heavily endow any of these institutions. The ground must be recovered inch by inch, a process which was slow and trying, but out of their poverty they gave even to the point of sacrifice.

In view of this poverty and the consequent impossibility of re-establishing all of the educational institutions owned by the Presbyterian Church before the war, Dr. B. M. Palmer, of New Orleans, and other prominent leaders of the Church, notably Drs. J. B. Shearer, John N. Waddel and Jas. A. Lyon, felt that it would be wise to change the ante bellum program. Their plan was that all these Synods should unite and pool their interests and build one university for the whole territory. This plan was finally approved, and after years of agitation and endeavor, Southwestern Presbyterian

Science Building

University came into being in 1875, having taken over as a nucleus the properties of Stewart College, a Presbyterian institution located at Clarksville, Tenn.

For the past fifty years this institution has functioned, and its record is honorable. It has never been a university in the proper sense of that term. It has been an excellent college of arts and sciences, to which for many years there was appended a theological department, which, by reason of lack of funds, had to be suspended in 1917. The college was never adequately endowed or equipped. Good, honest work was done, and there were high moral and educational ideals. There were great teachers on its faculty, men who were poorly paid, who served in sacrificial devotion for the love of Christ, just as truly as the missionaries who go to foreign lands.

Twenty-five years ago the church came to realize that the institution was badly located for the territory it was presumed to serve, and an attempt was made to move it. That proposed removal was defeated by the action of the Court, and as a result the Church lost much of its enthusiasm for the college and neglected it. Tremendous advances have been made in education during the past quarter of a century. Standards have been raised, new equipment has been called for, expenses of all kinds have multiplied, but there was little or no increment to the endowment. The tide was at low ebb, and then it was found that Memphis wanted the College and the Synods wanted Memphis to have it.

Here was the chance of a lifetime; a chance to set the standard of an institution for all time; a chance to go forth unhampered by past mistakes, architectural and other, and to launch an institution which was as nearly ideal for its purpose as painstaking investigation and careful thought and planning could make it. Realizing that the good is ever the enemy of the best, we did not seek merely the good, but the best. There was ever before us the idea of excellence. It was our purpose to launch here an institution which would endure for centuries, and which would command the respect and quicken the pride of succeeding generations.

The institution we were planning for was not a state or a municipal or an independent institution, but a Presbyterian institution; an institution which is avowedly Christian, and which as such is shot through with that passion for honesty and that hatred for all sham which is really fundamental in any interpretation of Christianity, and without which no institution can be regarded as Christian, whatever be its claims, its forms of government, its courses of study, or its ceremonies.

Further, this institution was not to be a university or a technical school or a professional school, but a college of liberal culture. We were not planning a university, not only because of the enormous amount of money necessary for such an institution—money which was not available—but also because we were not interested at this time in establishing a university. The institution we had in mind was one which was vitally concerned with scholarship, but which was even more concerned with character and manhood; an institution which believes in the life eternal, and, as a consequence, in real moral values; an institution which stands for the essential permanence of truth, beauty and goodness.

We were planning an institution which indeed some day may become a university, but which now seeks to give a liberal education; one which does not primarily concern itself with utilitarian values, but which contemplates a disciplined mind, a freed soul, a broadened personality, and an upright life. Cardinal Newman points out that there is no one word in the English language to express this objective of liberal education. We have the word "health" when used in reference to the body, and the word "virtue" when used in reference to our moral nature, but we must explain in many words what we mean by a liberal education. Kant says, "Man's greatest concern is to know how he shall properly fill his place in the universe and correctly understand what he must be and do in order to be a man." The college we were planning for was to attempt to teach its students something of human life, man, and the world, and to lead them to master human life; to know it as a whole.

Ashner Gateway and Robb Hall

A Bit of the Wooded Campus

We had before us ever the ideal of excellence, of the best for the purposes we had in mind. We did not and do not care at all about mere bigness or numbers. We have had much to say through the past years about the superiority of the small college, and we might have been making a virtue out of necessity, but we were not. We still believe what through the years we have been saying, and we realize that this College in Memphis could not remain small. Therefore, we sought in our planning to preserve the advantages of the small college, in spite of the fact that the numbers will increase, by adopting in large measure the Oxford plan of a cluster of small colleges, making such adaptations of this scheme as seemed wise and beneficial. The plan provided for unit colleges of from 150 to 200 students as about the ideal size for the helpful development of a common life, and, further, for the breaking up of this number into small groups for more intimate fellowship. This unit college was to have a common dining hall, but was to be housed in five small dormitories, each of which would care for some thirty-five men and an instructor.

To adopt this plan would not be the cheapest way to handle the situation, but it would be the best for developing men and women. We were not unmindful of the difficulty of securing funds or of the sacrifices represented by many of the funds entrusted to us, and we felt that it was our sacred duty to husband our resources, to make every expenditure count, and to secure the full value for every dollar expended; but we did not feel that economy was the only consideration, or even the first consideration, nor that cheapness is necessarily economy. Therefore, our Board of Directors nearly four years ago officially adopted this principle: "That, while every proper economy will be observed in the planning for and the administration of SOUTHWESTERN, the fundamental principle upon which all our planning shall proceed is the welfare, and especially the moral welfare, of the students, for whom the institution exists, even though the application of this principle proves to be more costly in dollars and cents."

With this general principle in mind we entered upon our task. We have studied other institutions and have profited by their excellences and their mistakes. We have received help from many sources, but we have copied nothing and we have slavishly followed no one. Each institution should have its own individuality, and should work out its own problems for itself.

In selecting the site we sought the best for our purpose—the ideal location and sufficient ground for the developments of the long future. It was not the cheapest ground available, but it was the best, and, as a matter of fact, as a result of the generous co-operation of Messrs. E. B. LeMaster, R. B. Snowden, J. T. Fargason, W. A. Hein and Mayor Rowlett Paine, it was secured at a remarkably low cost.

Having decided to build along collegiate Gothic lines because of the infinite variety and charm of that type of architecture, we sought to discover and ally with us the outstanding authority in this country on collegiate Gothic. We secured Mr. Chas. Z. Klauder, of Philadelphia, as our consulting architect. Because of his connection and training with Mr. Klauder, his accessibility and his experience in the South, we secured Mr. Henry C. Hibbs, of Nashville, as the architect responsible to us; and because of their outstanding ability and their familiarity with local conditions, we secured also the firm of Jones & Furbringer as supervising architects.

There is in this country much pseudo-Gothic architecture, a cheap imitation which may content the ignorant or untrained, but which calls forth the contemptuous ire of the enlightened critic. This we proposed to avoid. Genuineness is characteristic of the heart of this institution, and we wanted this note sounded everywhere, even in the construction of the physical plant. It was to be enduring, for we were building for generations to come. It was to be beautiful, for the aesthetic side of man's nature is important and a college of liberal culture dare not overlook it. It was to be genuine throughout, free from all substitutions and cheap, make-believe effects, for this college has a hatred for sham. It is a source of satisfaction to know that our architectural ideal has been realized, and that not even the most caustic and unfriendly critic can now or hereafter indulge in a smile of derision at our expense.

It is encouraging, too, to note that, while we believe these are the most beautiful college buildings in the South, they are not the most expensive, and they are much less expensive than are the same sort of buildings in those two colleges in the North where such buildings are found. This is due in part to the fact that we bought our own quarry at a very reasonable cost and that we quarry our own stone. Thus, in addition to having an adequate supply of ideal building material for the future, we are able to construct these buildings as cheaply as we could construct them of brick.

For years some men have thought of a college as Mark Hopkins on one end of a log and a student on the other. That day, however, has long since passed. We still need Mark Hopkins and the student, but in this day, for the sciences at least, there must be a great deal of equipment on that log. Through the past years this inadequate equipment has been our most conscious need. We determined now to provide properly for our sciences, and we have done so. Every proper economy was practiced, but nothing essential was omitted. Our laboratory, which still awaits a donor to be finally named, is probably the last word in a chemical laboratory for a college of arts and sciences. Eventually it will be used solely for chemistry, but at present it houses all the sciences.

*Graduates—Faculty—

If we had been planning an institution of a different type, it would have been possible to open the college without making provision for the residential group of buildings, but we could not be true to our ideal of a Christian college in Memphis without including at least the beginnings of the residential group. This group also is correct architecturally, and it is planned with the greatest care in accordance with our expressed ideal. The barracks or factory plan where the students are herded like cattle is cheap, but it did not conform to our ideal. Nor, on the other hand, did the plan of furnishing luxurious suites with private baths or with lavatories in the rooms appeal to us as wise. We had in mind the student, and endeavored to plan so that we could expect him to do his best work and attain his highest development. We had in mind the development, not only of his intellectual, but also of his moral and social and aesthetic nature. The dormitories were to be comfortable, sanitary, enduring and beautiful. They were to have about them the atmosphere of home. And thus there is nothing monumental about them. There is no suggestion of a horde or a throng, but the domestic note is sounded, as distinguished from the institutional.

For the most part there are suites of two rooms for two men—a common study and a common sleeping room, the arrangement which is best adapted for Southern students, and which is preferred by them. Some rooms are naturally more desirable than others, but the same price is charged for each, a system which we trust will encourage the spirit of democracy. A living room or social room is found in each dormitory, which we believe will mean a great deal in the social and religious development of the students. There they can gather for their hall meetings, for mission study classes, for keeping the morning watch, for teas, and for other social events.

This we felt was the minimum plant with which we could open a college of this kind, and we knew also, with the exception of a temporary provision for physical development, that it was the maximum plant until the present buildings are fully provided for, unless some one should give as a memorial other dormitories or faculty residences, which are sadly needed.

We recognize that man is a gregarious animal, and that it is natural that young men and young women should surround themselves with congenial associates. We believe that properly conducted fraternities and sororities are on the whole beneficial to the student. We approve the policy of having fraternity and sorority houses, provided that these are on the campus under college jurisdiction and that they are merely lodges, or club houses, but we do not favor residential houses. The college is quite willing to co-operate with these various groups in developing fraternity and sorority quadrangles, in each of which the college will plan to erect a building for the non-fraternity and the non-sorority students, houses which shall be quite as attractive as those of the other groups. In order that there may be no unseemly rivalry, the groups themselves through the Pan-Hellenic Council will determine the maximum and minimum cost of these houses, and in order that the plant may be a harmonious whole the President and the architect of the college will approve the plans and specifications of each structure.

The instructional cost of higher education is well-known, and it is impossible to do the work properly for less than the recognized minimum cost, which is from $400 to $450 per student. Where it is done for less, it is done either at the expense of the faculty or the student, or both. With the ideal of excellence before us, and with an utter disregard for mere numbers, it is not surprising that we should feel that we could render the largest service by training adequately a comparatively small number of select students, in accordance with our means, rather than by accepting all who desired to come, and then doing the best we could for them with the limited means at our disposal. It is our plan, therefore, to limit the number of students we accept by our ability to give them the best advantages. As our funds increase, more students will be accepted. We would rather do a limited work thoroughly and well than to attempt a larger work which we could not do in accordance with our ideal.

Since our student body must be limited we believe that we should be most careful in its selection. Why should we waste our time on those who are not prepared to do first-class college work or who are not motivated by a serious purpose? We seek not the rich or the socially prominent, but the worthy—those who are morally sound, who are intellectually fit, and who have the desire to excel. We believe that this college has a definite contribution to make to its students and to society, and that this can best be done in the lives of those who spend here four full years, and, for this reason, as well as for others, we shall not encourage the reception of transfer students.

It is our ideal to attempt nothing that we cannot do as well as it can be done in this country, and for this reason we are offering only the bachelor's degrees. We are conservative, but our faces are toward the morning. We know of few if any short cuts. We are not concerned with half-baked theories or with foolish experimenting. With regard to methods we believe, with Pope, that we should “Be not the first by whom the new are tried,

Nor yet the last to lay the old aside.”

Southwestern Student Body 1925-26

The time will never come when the teacher is not the most important part of the college. He is the college in the active sense; all other things are circumstances, machinery, arrangements. He is the mind that learns and teaches. If he does well, then all is well; if he does ill, the college is a failure. It is of the utmost importance; therefore, that the instructional force should be made up, not of immature and inexperienced teachers who can be secured at small cost, but of inspiring teachers, great personalities, who seek to advance knowledge not only among themselves, but among their students, who are anxious that their students should develop, not only in intellect, but in character, in their whole personalities. We believe, therefore, that it is for the best interests of the work to have a comparatively small faculty of well-paid, full professors rather than to have a larger faculty composed mainly of assistant professors and instructors who are serving on a lower salary scale. We desire in this college only professors who have a whole-hearted allegiance to Jesus Christ, but they must also be men of sound scholarship and men who are deeply interested in the well-rounded development of their students. Some institutions may be content with a perfunctory interest or professional relationship on the part of a professor towards his students, but we seek men who, in addition to the interest they naturally have in the mastery of their particular subjects, are interested quite as much in the welfare of these awkward, careless, foolish, thoughtless, but lovable boys and girls. Such a teacher has little time for the things which give him reputation among his colleagues, and often he is ignored or overlooked but such teachers are valuable to society beyond the price of rubies.

Not all of our ideals are fully realized, particularly those relating to the payment of adequate salaries to the members of our faculty and of providing for them comfortable homes, but for the most part we have carried out our plans as they have been briefly sketched, and we hope before long to be able to do for our faculty that which it so eminently merits.

With high resolve and honest purpose SOUTHWESTERN opens her doors in Memphis. She holds aloft the unpurchasables as the objects of desire and bears an unfaltering testimony to the value of spiritual ideals. She seeks to prepare for generations yet unborn by handing down unsullied to this generation our rich heritage of the past. She labors to send out men and women with strong characters and disciplined minds which are to be put at the disposal of the world's need for the solution of its desperate problems, for the alleviation of its myriad ills, and for the bringing in of that better day when wrong shall cease, and liberty and love and truth and right o'er all the earth are known as in their throne above.

William R. Atkinson, Ph.D., 768 Charles Place, prominent Memphis psychologist, heads the Psychological Service Center with offices in the Methodist Hospital Building. He is a former Professor of Psychology and Education (1922-47) at Southwestern and former Director of the Hutchison School (1947-59), a Fellow of the American Psychological Association, a Rotarian, and a member of the American Speech Foundation. His hobbies are reading and gardening, and he is the author of several pamphlets and articles on Mental Health, Discipline, How to Study, and Better Ways of Learning. He and Mrs. Atkinson, the former Amelia Appleton and a Southwestern graduate, are the parents of a married daughter, fond grandparents of two little granddaughters.

Richard Edward Davis, 822 High Street, Trenton, Tenn., is editor (also printer and publisher) of "The Herald-Register," 304 West First Street in Trenton. Music, tennis, and hunting are favorite hobbies. He is a past district governor of Exchange Clubs, Mississippi Delta, a past president of the Chamber of Commerce and also of the Trenton Rotary Club, of which he is a charter member. It was he who first proposed, and helped to organize and run, the Gibson County Stockyards, Inc. He is a former superintendent of the Methodist Church School, choir director, and a member of the official board of the Methodist Church.

George Grille has retired and is living in Clifton, Virginia, where he enjoys gardening and fishing.

Turner Joel Jones, also retired, resides at Idlewild, Route 1, Talladega, Ala. After earning a master's degree at the University of Alabama, he went on to a career in banking, insurance, real estate, and farming. At present a Director of Talladega National Bank, he has served as Deacon and Elder at the First Presbyterian Church and for several terms on the Board of Trustees of the Alabama Presbyterian Home for Children. He's a former chairman of the executive committee of trustees, Alabama School for Deaf and Blind; local post commander of the American Legion, and a director of the Chamber of Commerce, Kiwanis, and Talladega Citizens Hospital. Mr. Jones wrote that on the day he filled out his questionnaire he had received a postcard from Dr. George Lang '05, who was then making another visit to Scotland . . . Dr. Lang's address is Post Office Box 282, Tuscaloosa, Alabama.

Robert Marshall McGehee, Cherokee Drive, Centreville, Miss., enjoys woodworking and gardening. Though retired, he still serves on the Extension Committee of South Mississippi Presbytery. Dr. McGehee earned the Th.M. and Th.D. degrees at Union Theological Seminary and was honored by Emory University with the D.D. He has done additional graduate work at L.S.U. and Emory, written a still unpublished "History of Red River Presbytery" and a work titled "History of Young People's Conferences," used in four seminary libraries. He is a former Regional Director of Christian Education in Louisiana, in 1954 was named Rural Minister of the Year for that state, and has served as Chairman of Church Extension, Louisiana Presbytery. A member of all York

Rite bodies of Masonry and Shrine, for several years he was Grand Chaplain (he is now Grand Chaplain Emeritus) for the Grand Chapter, Grand Council, and Grand Lodge of Louisiana and for four years served as President of the Order of High Priesthood. He and Mrs. McGehee have four sons, three of whom are Presbyterian ministers and one, the Rev. Mr. Joseph A. McGehee, a 1943 Southwestern graduate.

John William Davis joined the ranks of the honorably retired in September, 1964, when he and Mrs. Davis returned to Kings-tree, S. C., where they had begun their married life and he his active ministry in 1920. Pastorates served by The Rev. Mr. Davis are: Williamsburg Presbyterian Church, Kingstree, 1920-44; Minden Presbyterian Church, Minden, La., 1944-54; and Trenton and Johnston Presbyterian Churches, Johnston, S. C., 1953-64. Fishing and hunting are his favorite sports. The Davises live at 207 Heller Street in Kingstree; their son, J. W. Jr., resides in Greenville, S. C.

Walton Lawrence Smith, 311 Kingwood Drive, Murfreesboro, Tenn., retired in 1962. The Rev. Mr. Smith earned the B.D. degree at Union Theological Seminary and the Th.M. at Princeton Theological Seminary. Mrs. Smith is a graduate of Tenn. College in Murfreesboro and has a master of arts degree from Columbia University in N. Y. C.

Arthur Lee Twila has retired after 38 years with Ely & Walker D. G. Co. of St. Louis, and he and Mrs. Twila live at 114 S. 5th St., Carmi, Ill. He takes particular interest in community affairs and is a past president of the local school board. Active in the Church of Christ, he is also a Rotarian and a Shriner.

Rhea Kuykendall, 1100 Santa Rita Street, Silver City, New Mexico, has been included for a number of years in "Who's Who in the West." A retired minister, his hobbies and special interests include archeology, genealogy, local history, deer hunting (he's part Cherokee), chess, and the study of Spanish. Included among his published writings are "My hoss-racing Cherokee Ancestors," the Kuykendall chapter in "Millers of Millersburg," the Pierce and Caruthers families in "Stirpes of Texas," a series of volumes titled "This is Silver City," and a newspaper column "Old Tales Retold."

Orion Mitchell writes that we may not find many imprints of his work, from an educational standpoint, at S.P.U., but that he was a member of probably the best baseball team in the history of the school. His career included eight years of professional baseball, teaching and coaching at Albany High School and later at Abraham Baldwin Agricultural College. For the past 15 years he has been associated with the Coca-Cola Bottling Co. in Albany, Ga., of which he is manager. He is also interested in cattle farming, and is active in the Chamber of Commerce, Red Cross, Cancer Society, Kiwanis Club, and the Methodist Church. The Mitchells' address is Byron Road, Albany. They have four grown children, three sons and a daughter.

Marion Leigh MacQueen, Professor of Mathematics at Southwestern and Chairman of the Department (of Mathematics) since 1955, earned his master's degree at the University of Wisconsin in 1923 and the Ph.D. degree at the University of Chicago in 1933. A Phi Beta Kappa, "Mac" is a member of Chi Beta Phi, O.D.K., Sigma Xi, and of the Mathematical Assoc. of America, Amer. Mathematical Society, and National Council of Teachers of Mathematics. He was Alumni Secretary and Editor of the Alumni Magazine from 1928-34; Secretary of the Centennial and Inaugural Committee, 1949; Chairman of the Burrow Library Dedication Committee, 1953; Secretary of the Faculty, 1945-65; Chairman of the Committee on Research and Creative Activity, 1949-66. He's been a Visiting Professor of Mathematics at the University of Tennessee during the summers since 1961 and has written innumerable research papers for national mathematical journals. Mrs. MacQueen is the former Grace Gilfillan, an alumna of Southwestern; their two sons are also alumni, as are their wives.

Edward Watson Wood is retired and living in Ocean Springs, Mississippi, a good place to indulge his favorite hobby, fishing. He is a member of the Board of Trustees of Belhaven College (of which Mrs. Wood is an alumna); President of the Board of Howard Memorial Hospital, Biloxi; and Stated Clerk, South Mississippi Presbytery. Before his retirement he was associated with the Chicago firm of Wood-Hutchinson. The Woods may be addressed at 219 Washington, Ocean Springs. Their only son, E. W., Jr., resides in Baltimore.

The most important thing is not always what happens to you but how you take what happens to you." Dr. Redhead says these words in regard to Jonah, and they exemplify the style in which the author relates biblical lives to our own. Dr. Redhead has been pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Greensboro, N. C., for the past twenty years. He is also known as the warm and convincing personality of the Protestant Hour, the National Radio Pulpit, and the Columbia Church of the Air on nationwide radio networks. Six books, radio and television appearances, and contributions to books and periodicals have widened his reputation as a popular interpreter of Christianity.
