The list above includes memorials and honoraria sent to Burrow Library and to the Meeman Center for Special Studies as well as to the college's development office. All unrestricted memorial gifts are added to the annual Memorial Scholarship Fund to provide financial aid to needy students. The development office accepts memorial and honorarium gifts and notifies either the next of kin or the honoree that a gift has been made. Gifts may be sent to: Development Office, Rhodes College, 2000 N. Parkway, Memphis, TN 38112.

Correction

The introduction to the Robert Penn Warren story in the April issue of Rhodes Today inaccurately stated, "In 1930 the young Warren, fresh out of Vanderbilt, accepted his first teaching position—at Rhodes." Warren graduated summa cum laude from Vanderbilt in 1925 and did post-graduate work at the University of California, Yale, and Oxford before coming to Rhodes.

J.L. Carmichael, the husband of Neva Kyser Carmichael ('60), is a professor at the University of Alabama in Birmingham. He was inducted into Phi Alpha Theta, the international honorary society for history. The honor was mistakenly ascribed to

Mrs. Carmichael in the June issue of Rhodes Today.

Eve Yeargin ('73) and her husband Lionel Berry are vice president and president, respectively, of The Marketing Works in Austin, Tex. In the June issue, the name of Ms. Yeargin's husband was incorrect.

Suzi Marten Cody ('75) represented Rhodes at the inauguration of Harold Hazelip as president of David Lipscomb College, not Davidson College, as reported in the October issue.

Also in the October issue, the In Memoriam section should have listed a gift in honor of—happily not in memory of—M. E. Grainger Williams by Richard B. Dixon.

Rhodes Today regrets the errors.

Zoe Caldwell captivating as 'Lillian'

Zoe Caldwell as Lillian Hellman

The Harry B. McCoy Jr. Visiting Artists Program traditionally brings the nation's top performing artists to campus, and this year is no exception.

In early December, three-time Tony Award winner Zoe Caldwell brought her triumphant Broadway play "Lillian" to Hardie Auditorium.

Based on the life of the celebrated and often controversial author/playwright Lillian Hellman, the production has played to packed houses at the Kennedy Center in Washington and New York's Ethel Barrymore Theatre. The play is currently on a nationwide tour, with Rhodes as the only Mid-South stop.

Written by William Luce and directed by Robert Whitehead, Miss Caldwell's husband of 17 years, "Lillian" is based on Miss Hellman's autobiographical books, Scoundrel Time, An Unfinished Woman, and Pentimento. The play depicts among other events her headline-making confrontations with the McCarthy-era House Un-American Activities Committee and delves into the turbulent, 30-year-long relationship with author Dashiell Hammett that was the core of her private life.

Though some of Miss Hellman's contemporaries, notably author Mary McCarthy, have challenged the truth of her memoirs in recent years, everyone involved in the production seems to appreciate the controversy. Playwright Luce, whose work Miss Hellman read and approved before she died in 1984, says, "In these celebrated autobiographical works, I believe Lillian Hellman prepared her life for dramatic portraiture. You might say, her own life was her greatest work of theatre."

Zoe Caldwell won Tony Awards for her Broadway performances in "Medea," also directed by Whitehead; "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie;" and Tennessee Williams' "Slapstick Tragedy." Originally from Australia, she has also acted in films and television. Her most recent film was Woody Allen's "The Purple Rose of Cairo."

Playwright Luce counts among his credits "The Belle of Amherst," a one-woman play about Emily Dickinson which starred Julie Harris. His most recent work was for the CBS television special, "The Last Days of Patton," starring George C. Scott.

In more than 35 years on Broadway Robert Whitehead has produced a substantial number of memorable plays. His first, "Medea," starred Dame Judith Anderson and Sir John Gielgud. Five others were New York Drama Critics' Award winners, including "The Member of the Wedding," "The Waltz of the Toreadors," "The Visit," "A Man for All Seasons," and "Betrayal." Last season he presented Jessica Tandy and Hume Cronyn in the two-character British drama, "The Petition."

Milk of human kindness pays dividends

David Lusk, Student Government Association president, milks for all it's worth while Charlotte McLain, instructor of music, smiles approval.

Teams of Rhodes students and faculty milked their competition for all they were worth in early November.

Following Rhodes' home game against Earlham, students and townpeople gathered in the shadow of Palmer Hall to take part in the college's first "Bovine Bash." The student-run festival included a milking contest and a Miss Bovine/Mr. Stud Bull "beauty" pageant followed by a dance in the Thomas W. Briggs Student Center that night.

The Bash was held to raise enough money to buy two cows to ship to an underprivileged country, where they will provide milk and other products for the hungry. The cost of buying and shipping each cow is $610.

The idea for the project originated with several campus organizations—the International House, the Religion Commission and Food for Thought (an interdisciplinary program that is studying world issues of food and famine). Students who coordinated the project worked through Heifer Project International, an organization that buys surplus livestock—some of it destined for slaughter—and sends the animals to underprivileged areas worldwide to breed and provide food.

"In Haiti many children only get milk once a month, and meat only once a year at Christmas," according to student Tom Horton, co-director of Rhodes' International House. "This is a heinous crime when U.S. government programs are killing millions of animals per year which could be used to feed them."

Horton explained that there is currently a national program by the U.S. government to slaughter up to a million and a half dairy cows in this country in order to reduce milk production. Heifer Project seeks to buy these bargain rate animals and send them to countries like Mexico, Haiti, Jamaica, Bolivia, Jordan and Egypt.

The Bovine Bash raised $800. Senior Laura Miller of Little Rock, Ark., was crowned Miss Bovine, and senior John Rosser of Germantown, Tenn., Mr. Stud Bull.

HOMECOMING '86

The fourth weekend in October meant fun, fellowship, and cherished memories for hundreds of Rhodes alumni. Below (clockwise), cheerleaders and Lynx mascot Catherine Bolger '89 urge the team to victory. At the President's Dinner held at The Peabody, Russell Perry '33 receives one of two Distinguished Alumni Awards. Duty called the other recipient, Dr. Ada Jane Walters, principal of Memphis' Craigmont High School, to attend Craigmont's homecoming game that evening. Catching up on the latest news before the dinner are Michelle Vick '83, Tucker Dewey '84, and Rachel Young '85, and Provost Tom Kepple unveils the portrait of Prof. W. Raymond Cooper.

Seidman lectures feature NPR favorites

"There's a sense of intimacy about somebody who's on the radio. Listeners feel that they really know you whether they're listening to you in their car or while they're preparing dinner."

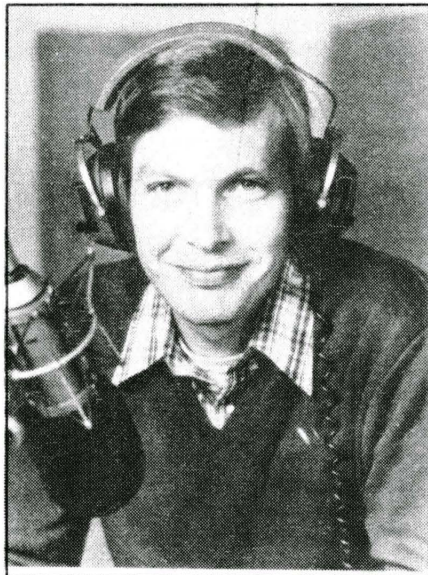

The words are Cokie Roberts', one of three award-winning National Public Radio program hosts scheduled to deliver this year's M.L. Seidman Town Hall Lecture Series.

Titled "News and Views from National Public Radio," the series will begin Feb. 19 with Bob Edwards, host of "Morning Edition" and former co-host of NPR's nightly newsmagazine "All Things Considered."

Ms. Roberts, who is heard regularly on both "Morning Edition" and "All Things Considered," will speak March 17, and Scott Simon, host of "Weekend Edition" and guest host of "All Things Considered," will speak April 21. The lectures, which are free and open to the public, will be at 8 p.m. in Hardie Auditorium.

Memphian P.K. Seidman provides the lectures as a public service and as a memorial to his late brother M.L. Seidman. The college hosts and administers the series.

Bob Edwards has hosted NPR's daily news program "Morning Edition" since its first broadcast in 1979. He conducts nearly 800 interviews a year covering politics, education, business, labor, economics, sports, the arts and entertainment. The 1984 recipient of the Edward R. Murrow Award from the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, Edwards has also written and produced several NPR documentaries and hosted a 10-part PBS-TV series on the 1981 Spoleto Festival in Charleston, S.C.

A native of Louisville, Ky., Edwards received a bachelor's degree from the University of Louisville and began his career at a small radio station in New Albany, Ind. After a stint in the army where he was a correspondent in Korea for the American Forces Radio and Television Service, he moved to Washington, D.C., where he earned a master's degree in broadcast journalism from American University.

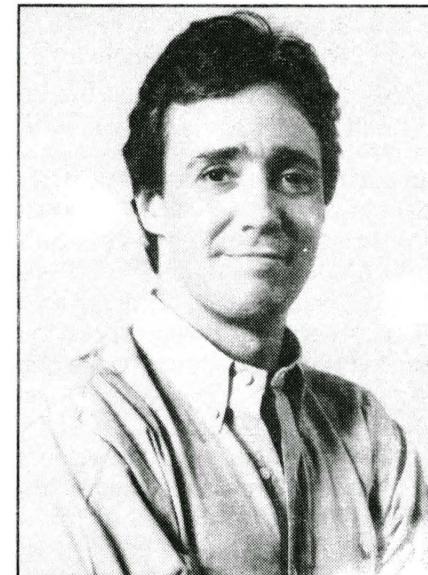

Before joining NPR as a general assignment reporter in 1978, Cokie Roberts worked extensively in the print and broadcast media. She produced and hosted "Meeting of the Minds" for WRC-TV in Washington, D.C., and from 1972-74 produced "Serendipity" at KNBC-TV in Los Angeles. The show was nominated for an Emmy in children's programming and won the San Francisco State Award for Excellence in Local Programming. From 1974-77 she reported for CBS News in Athens, Greece.

In addition to her NPR duties, Ms. Roberts co-hosts "The Lawmakers," a weekly report on Congress produced by WETA-TV in Washington. She has written for the Atlantic Monthly, Commonweal, New Leader, and The New York Times Magazine.

Scott Simon

Ms. Roberts is a 1964 political science graduate of Wellesley College.

Scott Simon, anchor and chief correspondent on the Saturday morning "Weekend Edition," was formerly head of NPR's Chicago bureau. He has reported from 44 states and from Europe, India and Central America and in 1978 received a Unity Award in Media for his political coverage on "All Things Considered."

Simon was also honored with an Emmy in 1982 for "The Patterson Project," a public television documentary that examined effects of Reagan administration budget cuts on the lives of 12 people in New Jersey.

Mitchener elected to Fed

Frank M. Mitchener Jr. of Sumner Miss., chair of the Rhodes College Board of Trustees, has been elected to the board of directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. He will begin his term Jan. 1.

Mitchener joins Rhodes alumnae Ruth A. Bryant ('45), who serves as vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, and Katherine Hinds Smythe ('53), who was appointed a board member last year.

With extensive farming and business interests in north Mississippi, Mitchener is president of Mitchener Farms Inc., Mitchener Gin Inc., and Hoparka Plantation Inc., and is secretary of Triple M Planting Company Inc.

Active in numerous civic and professional affairs, Mitchener serves as adviser to the board of the National Cotton Council, Memphis; president of the Oscar Johnston Cotton Foundation; member of the Commodity

Frank Mitchener

Policy Advisory Committee, Office of the U.S. Trade Representative; and director of the Yazoo City-Minter Oil Mill. He is a former chair and president of the National Cotton Council and has been a member of various trade missions to Europe and the Far East. He attended McCallie School and holds a B.S. degree from Davidson College. His wife Judith Deavenport Mitchener is a Rhodes alumna, and his daughter Julia is a member of Rhodes' class of '89.

Moss series includes top art historians

The second season of the Lillian and Morrie Moss Endowment for the Visual Arts got underway in the fall. The free lecture series which features renowned experts in the fields of art and art history is made possible by a permanent endowment by Memphian Morrie Moss and his late wife Lillian.

In a special presentation, Peter Draper, lecturer in the history of art at Birbeck College, London, spoke to a packed Hardie Auditorium in October in addition to his duties as visiting fellow in British Studies.

A frequent lecturer to Rhodes' summer British Studies at Oxford program, Draper took his degree at King's College, Cambridge, followed by post-graduate study at the Courtauld Institute of Art, London. The author of numerous books and scholarly articles, Draper has lectured at several American colleges and universities. Last January, he was invited to Paris to lecture at the Sorbonne and to the Société Française d'Archéologie.

In November, architectural historian William L. McDonald spoke "On the Durability of Classical Architecture." McDonald, who received A.B., A.M. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University, has also taught at his alma mater as well as Yale, Smith, M.I.T. and the University of California at Berkeley. A prolific author, he is currently completing a book on Hadrian's Villa in Rome.

The Moss series will continue March 3 with John Wilmerding, deputy director of the National Gallery of Art, who will explore the career of painter Winslow Homer. One of the foremost experts on 19th century American art, Wilmerding has arranged collections from that period for several museums including New York's Metropolitan Museum, the Museum of Modern Art, and the National Gallery. He holds A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard.

The timely appearance of noted Egyptologist T.G.H. James April 4 complements the April 15 opening of the Ramesses the Great exhibition in Memphis. He will speak on "Egyptian Painting and Ramesses the Great." A graduate of Exeter College, Oxford, James is Keeper of Egyptian Antiquaries at the British Museum, a post he has held since 1974. He is chairman of the Egypt Exploration Society and editor of the organization's Egyptological publications.

The series will conclude May 20 with a lecture on "Antiquity's Survival: Roman Art, the Italian Renaissance, and American Taste" by Cornelius Vermeule III, curator of classical art at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and professor of fine arts at Boston College. Vermeule, who received A.B. and A.M. degrees from Harvard and his Ph.D. from University College, London University, has taught at Yale and Bryn Mawr. An expert in numismatics, he is curator of coins for the Massachusetts Historical Society and a fellow in the Royal Numismatic Society. Vermeule is an authority on Greek, Etruscan, and Roman art and a life member of the Hellenic and Roman Society.

College seeks black students, faculty

Rhodes, along with every major college and university in the nation, is striving for a racially balanced faculty and student body. But faced with a declining number of blacks entering college—as well as the teaching profession—Rhodes is in a neck-and-neck race with other top academic institutions to attract black students and faculty.

Consequently, the Board of Trustees last year created a Committee on Minority Recruitment to come up with ways to attract additional black faculty. Headed by Gerald Duff, dean of the college, the committee also includes board and faculty members. A similar Committee on Enrollment to recruit black students is headed by Dean of Admissions Dave Wottle, and composed of faculty, staff, students, and one alumnus.

"All students benefit from interaction with those of diverse backgrounds, and Rhodes has long been committed to enrolling a larger number of minority students," said Dean Duff.

The board's stated purpose is for the total student population to be five percent black by 1990. According to Wottle, five percent of this year's freshman class—22 students out of 448—is black. "Last year there were five black freshmen and the overall student population was 3.5 percent black," said Wottle.

This year the faculty established two Dean's Scholarships that provide half tuition for minority students. Another black freshman received one of Rhodes' full tuition, room and board scholarships, and last year the Dallas investment firm of Barrow, Hanley, Mewhinney and Strauss established a scholarship for minority students with an interest or major in business/economics.

On the faculty side, Dennis Dickerson, First Tennessee Distinguished Professor of History, came to Rhodes from Williams College last year. And returning to her alma mater this year is Eleanor Venable '83, the college's biology laboratory technician.

One step toward attracting additional black faculty members is the Teaching Fellowship for a Minority Graduate Student to be implemented in the 1987-88 academic year. The fellowship provides salary, housing, and a research stipend for a black graduate student for one year to teach one class each semester while finishing his or her dissertation. Besides providing experience, the fellowship, it is hoped, will attract well-credentialed black graduate students to Rhodes on a permanent basis.

Smith and Williams Colleges offer similar fellowships. In fact, Rhodes' plan is patterned after the one Dennis Dickerson drew up for Williams while a professor there. "There were 40 applications the first year it went into effect. We selected two graduate students, one from the University of Chicago and one from Stanford University," Dickerson said.

Dickerson explained that while these fellowships are for those who have already decided to enter academia, few students—black or white—are going into the teaching profession these days. Sometimes, it's a matter of a student never having thought about it. "What we have to do at Rhodes is identify all students here who have academic talent and encourage them," he said.

Rhodes trustee Anne P. Wilson dies

Anne Potter Wilson of Nashville, Tenn., longtime friend of the college and member of the Board of Trustees, died Nov. 25 after a long illness. Her funeral was held Nov. 26 at First Presbyterian Church in Nashville. She is survived by her husband Pat and three sons.

Mrs. Wilson was first elected to the board in 1963. She and her husband were founding members of the Charles E. Diehl Society.

A graduate of Vassar College, she was active in church and civic affairs and a noted philanthropist. In 1977 she received the Brotherhood Award from the Nashville chapter of the National Council of Christians and Jews.

"Rhodes College and all members of our Board of Trustees have lost a wonderful friend in Anne Wilson," said President James H. Daughdrill. "She was a member of the board for more than 20 years and was one of the leaders of our board. She was a friend of many of our students, and chaired the board's committee on student affairs. We will certainly miss her."

Seminar presents 'Megatrends' authors

John Naisbitt, author of the best-selling books Megatrends and Re-inventing the Corporation, and his wife, co-author, and collaborator Patricia Aburdene will be the featured speakers at the C. Whitney Brown Management Seminar Feb. 6. The seminar, titled "Re-inventing the Corporation," will be held from 9-11:30 a.m. on the Rhodes campus. Registration will begin at 8:30 a.m.

Naisbitt is chair of the Washington, D.C.-based Naisbitt Group, an "information-age" company that specializes in social forecasting. Reports published by the group are intended to help businesses and institutions understand and make the most of emerging social, political, technological, and economic changes. Naisbitt's column "Trend Notes" appears three times a week in newspapers throughout the country.

Naisbitt has served as adviser to heads of corporations and state alike. During the Kennedy and Johnson administrations he served as special assistant to then-Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare John W. Gardner. Prior to that, he was assistant to the U.S. Commissioner of Education Francis Keppel and assistant to the chair of the Commission of Presidential Scholars Dr. Milton Eisenhower. Naisbitt also was a special assistant to the Johnson White House.

In his 30 years in the business world, Naisbitt has been an executive with IBM and Eastman Kodak, as well as a successful entrepreneur. He pursued studies in political science at the University of Utah, Harvard, and Cornell. He holds five honorary doctorates in the humanities and has been a visiting fellow at Harvard.

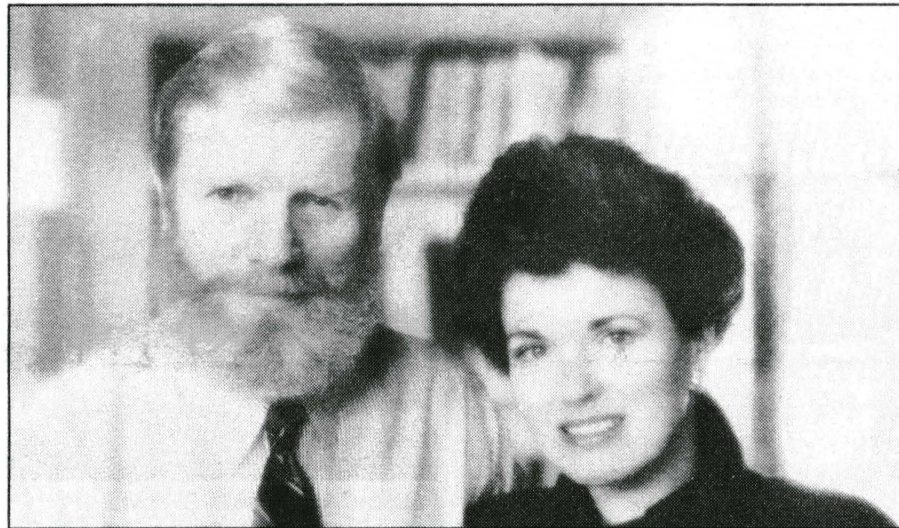

Patricia Aburdene is a leading authority on the future of the American corporation. As executive editor of "Re-inventing the Corporation" newsletter, a monthly update of corporate change published by the Naisbitt Group, she monitors new corporate policies and programs as well as innovative management practices. A major area of interest is the emergence of a new style of leadership evolving among small businesses and major companies in response to the new megatrends of today's business environment—the new workforce, changing demographics, deregulation, entrepreneurship, and the growing strength of the information economy.

Ms. Aburdene holds a B.A. degree in philosophy from Newton College of the Sacred Heart and an M.S. degree in library and information science from Catholic University of America. During the 1970s she was a freelance journalist for several business publications including New England Business, Small Business Alert, Directors and Boards Magazines. In 1978 she joined Forbes magazine as a reporter/researcher.

In 1979 Ms. Aburdene began her own writing and research firm and in 1980 began collaborating with Naisbitt on Megatrends, which was on The New York Times best-seller list for two years and has sold six million copies worldwide. A frequent lecturer, Ms. Aburdene also serves on the boards of several organizations engaged in information and social change.

Tickets for the seminar are $50 each and are available from the Meeman Center for Special Studies, Rhodes College, 2000 N. Parkway, Memphis, TN 38112. Tickets may also be purchased with Visa or MasterCard by calling the Special Studies office at (901) 726-3965. Sponsorships are available for $1,000 per sponsor which provide up to 20 admissions and an invitation for two to a special sponsors' breakfast at 7:30 that morning.

Dr. Amartya Sen (seated) was the recipient of the 1986 Frank E. Seidman Award in Political Economy. The world-renowned economist, who holds the Drummond Chair of Political Economy at Oxford University, was honored at a banquet in the fall. Standing are (left to right) Dr. Robert Solow, institute professor at M.I.T. and former Seidman Award recipient; P.K. Seidman, founder and chair emeritus of the award; Mel G. Grinspan, award director; Lawrence J. Seidman, chair of the Frank E. Seidman Award board of trustees; the Hon. P.K. Kaul, ambassador from India to the United States; and Rhodes President James H. Daughdrill.

Seidman winner Buchanan awarded Nobel

James M. Buchanan, the 1984 recipient of the Frank E. Seidman Distinguished Award in Political Economy administered by the college, received the world's ultimate honor in October—the Nobel Prize for Economic Science.

The Murfreesboro, Tenn., native was cited for his pioneering development of new methods for analyzing economic and political decision making. Buchanan, known worldwide as the leading researcher of public choice theory, currently heads the Center for Study of Public Choice at George Mason University, Fairfax, Va., where he is also a professor of economics.

More than 30 years ago Buchanan wrote of the impact of large federal deficits, emphasizing that borrowing imposed a great debt on future generations. More recently, his work on public budgetary policies has focused on the dangers of unlimited government expansion.

HON'S KIDS

Dr. Ralph C. Hon became an economics professor years ago. After that, they broke the mold

By Martha H. Shepard

How many "semi-meriti" professors do you know who are 83 years old but don't look anywhere near it, keep regular office hours, and manage investments destined to fund additional scholarships at Rhodes?

Top this with a long tradition of seeking the best students from area high schools, securing financial aid for them and encouraging them every step of the way, and you'll find the description fits the one and only Ralph C. Hon, professor emeritus of economics and business administration.

In his 55 years at Rhodes Dr. Hon has served the college fully: as teacher, recruiter, administrator. And undergirding his considerable skills in these areas is the love he and his wife Hazel have for hundreds of the "kids" they have seen through Rhodes.

Among these "kids" are three college presidents, (five if you include Emory President James T. Laney who attended summer school at Rhodes and is married to alumna Berta Radford Laney '50, and Charles J. Ping '51, president of Ohio University whose wife Claire Oates Ping '53 Dr. Hon recruited). The others are Pomona College President David Alexander '53, who was president of Rhodes from 1965-69; William Bowden '48, president of Rhodes from 1970-72; and George Harmon '56, president of Millsaps College.

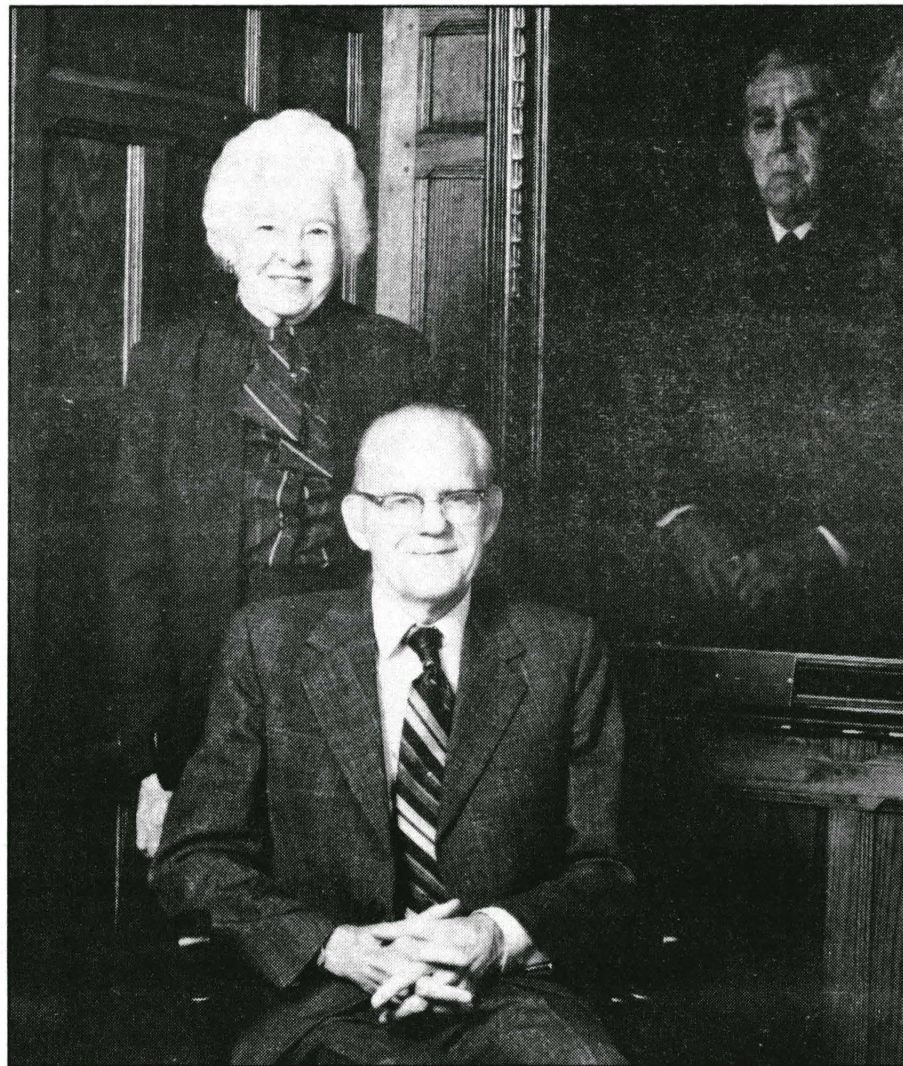

Count, too, many more top educators, bankers, doctors, and lawyers including past American Bar Association President Shepherd Tate '39 and current Tennessee Attorney General Mike Cody '58.

Dr. and Mrs. Hon are also close friends of Memphis lawyer Ed Hamlet '51, who has written their wills. Bill Murphy '41, professor of law at the University of North Carolina, currently serves as president of the National Academy of Arbitrators.

There is Ed Hutchinson '36 who has a distinguished record of service with the U.S. State Department. And of course, there are scores of highly successful businessmen and women throughout the country whom Dr. Hon once sought as students and who benefited from his guidance throughout their college days. Their faces now smile from Dr. Hon's voluminous photo albums that would rival those of the proudest grandpa. And the "kids" behind the faces will tell you they wouldn't be where they are today without Dr. Hon.

In the early 1940s the Faculty Committee on Student Aid was established with Dr. Hon as chair. Shortly thereafter Dr. Hon came up with the idea of establishing scholarships to attract top area students. Until that time, college President Charles E. Diehl had handled most student financial aid, and Dr. Hon's colleagues doubted he'd have much success in convincing Dr. Diehl to try a new way. Undaunted, Dr. Hon approached Dr. Diehl about it and came out of their meeting with Dr. Diehl's blessing.

Dr. Hon went right to work. He established an honor scholarship program that provided 10 half-tuition scholarships (tuition then was $250 a year), one for each of the six public city schools and three to other high schools in the county. The other scholarship went to a student at one of Memphis' private schools. Five full-tuition scholarships were provided for residential students from outside the Memphis area. Through the years the numbers of scholarships—and their value—have grown considerably.

But getting the program in place was only the first step. At the beginning, and in the years to come, Dr. Hon would go to each of the schools' guidance counselors and ask them the names of their most outstanding students. He would then talk to each one, advising them on no uncertain terms to come to Rhodes. To those who protested, citing lack of funds, Dr. Hon would reassure them that "something could be worked out." Usually, "something" did in the way of scholarships, work-study, or loans—whatever it took to meet the students' needs.

Step three was the clincher. Once the students were enrolled, Dr. Hon would make his final pitch. "You know," he would say, "I think you'd make a fine economics major." Of course, he won some and lost others, but he never cut his losses where his students were concerned: Dr. Hon's "kids" were his for life, no matter which majors they chose.

One alumna who did take Dr. Hon up on his suggestion is Vicki Gilmore Roman '75, assistant treasurer of Coca-Cola Enterprises Inc., the company the soft drink giant formed when it recently acquired several of its major bottlers. She and Dr. Hon met at Memphis' Southside High School. "I was leaning heavily toward going to Yale at the time," said Ms. Roman, "but there was illness at home and I decided to stay in Memphis. Once I had made my decision, Dr. Hon literally walked me through the application and admission processes. Part of my financial aid was to have been work-study, but Dr. Hon called me at home and said that it didn't make sense for me to work during my first year. He felt that I should get adjusted to college life instead, so he got me a loan."

Toby Bunn '51

Everything was in place for Ms. Roman the summer before she entered Rhodes. But Dr. Hon wasn't through. "He called me one morning and said he wanted to pick me up and take me to the bank. He took me to First Tennessee (the state's largest bank which is headquartered in Memphis) for a job interview. Dr. Hon did all the talking, and before it was over I had my first job. I worked at First Tennessee that summer and all the other summers during college."

Ms. Roman earned an M.B.A. at Memphis State University before going to work fulltime for First Tennessee where she was the first female lending officer. She soon caught the eye of another Memphis titan, Federal Express Corp., which sought and won her as a manager of corporate finance. In 1983 she moved to Atlanta as pension fund manager for the Coca-Cola Co.

"Dr. Hon retired after my second year at Rhodes, but we've maintained close contact," said Ms. Roman. "He attended my mother's and grandfather's funerals and my wedding. He is such a generous person and Mrs.

Hon is right in there with him. He has a 100 percent interest in you, and once he decides he likes you, that's it."

Besides being an astute judge of character, Dr. Hon is a noted labor arbitrator, an avocation he pursued for 30 years until last summer. The massive volumes that line his den bookshelves contain scores of his decisions. During his travels as arbitrator he always managed to visit former students as well as look for new ones.

One such prospective student was Nancy Huggins '74, now vice president at First Boston's Dallas office. "I met Dr. Hon when he came to my hometown of Corinth, Miss., on an arbitration case," recalled Ms. Huggins, who had her heart set on going to Radcliffe at the time. But Dr. Hon worked his magic and got her to Rhodes, although she insisted on majoring in political science. Finding the political science classes full at registration, she took an introductory economics course. "That convinced me," she said.

Dr. Hon and George Harmon, then a Rhodes faculty member, urged her to go for her M.B.A. at Harvard. "At the end of her first year there she had her choice of summer jobs with several major banks in Chicago and the East," said Dr. Hon. "She chose the World Bank. Then, after she got her degree, she went with Citicorp in New York and then with First Boston. She was the first woman vice president in her division at First Boston," he proudly noted.

A native of Jonesboro, Ark., Dr. Hon spent much of his youth in Thayer, Mo. He earned his A.B. degree at the University of Illinois, A.M. at Harvard, and Ph.D. at the University of North Carolina. Before coming to Rhodes in 1931 he taught at Nebraska Wesleyan University at Lincoln. In 1941 Dr. Hon served as president of the Southern Economic Association, a position later held by one of his "kids," John McFerrin '32. Dr. Hon left Rhodes in 1941 to be a visiting professor at Duke University and from 1943-46 was a senior financial analyst with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission which was located in Philadelphia during the war years.

Many students acutely felt Dr. Hon's absence. In fact, Charles P. Cobb, now a Rhodes Trustee, transferred from Rhodes to Duke in 1941 to be with Dr. Hon. His brother Bill '33 asked Dr. Hon to look after Charlie, which he did to the extent that Duke accepted Charlie without a transcript solely on Dr. Hon's recommendation.

In 1946 Dr. Hon returned to Rhodes. "I came back mainly to administer the scholarship program," said Dr. Hon. "It was progressing as it had been for a long time, though one scholarship didn't necessarily go to each school anymore. One year, for example, we took two outstanding students from Central and another year, two from Humes High."

One of Dr. Hon's Jonesboro, Ark., recruits around that time was Ronald F. "Toby" Bunn '51, a distinguished professor and former provost of the University of Missouri. His sister Millye Bunn McAtee '54 was another one of Dr. Hon's "kids" and a bona fide economics major. Her brother, however, stuck to political science, earned his M.A. and Ph.D. at Duke and was a Fulbright Scholar. Dr. Bunn taught at the University of Texas, Louisiana State University, and the University of Houston. Also at Houston he served as dean of the graduate school, associate and then interim dean of faculties. He has also served as vice president for academic affairs at the State University of New York at Buffalo.

A simple academic habit occasionally cast Dr. Hon in the role of matchmaker. He always seated his students alphabetically, which in the early 1940s happened to put Robert Meacham '42 and Katie Miller '43 together. They've been together ever since, and now the head of the Eckerd College mathematics department and his wife boast four children and eight grandchildren.

Credit also goes to Dr. Hon for bringing John and Neville Frierson Bryan '58 together. Neville, now a Rhodes Trustee, was one of his Jonesboro, Ark., recruits. She majored in music while John, who is Sara Lee Corp.'s chief executive officer, naturally studied economics. John, a former college Trustee, currently serves on the boards of Amoco Corp., First Chicago, and the University of Chicago. Two of their children are recent Rhodes graduates: John III '83 and Margaret '85.

Economics was serious business inside Dr. Hon's classroom, according to Bill Michaelcheck '69, a vice president of the Bear Stearnes investment firm in New York. "Dr. Hon dedicated every aspect of himself to the college and the students, but he maintained a very high degree of discipline in class," said Michaelcheck. The Tiptonville, Tenn., native who took Dr. Hon's courses "all the way" learned his lessons well, going on to earn an M.B.A. at Harvard. With an added boost from Dr. Hon's recommendation, he later worked at the World Bank first as a Latin American lending officer and in 1974 as a "present" to Saudi Arabia to help that government invest its considerable oil revenues.

While in New York at a meeting of arbitrators, Dr. Hon introduced Michaelcheck to John Sites '74 several years after both had graduated from Rhodes. In 1981 the two started the mortgage department at Bear Stearnes. Today, both are officers in one of the largest full-line investment firms in the United States.

The Hon touch continues to benefit the college from recruiting done years ago. Two distinguished faculty members are Dr. Hon's "kids"—Professor of Physics Jack H. Taylor '44 and Professor of Mathematics Marshall P. Jones '59. And he's still at it, with two first-year students and a sophomore to his credit.

Dr. and Mrs. Hon's generosity extends beyond Rhodes. They have established the Ralph and Hazel Hon Scholarship at Millsaps in honor of their close friendship with that college's president.

The stories go on, each one better than the last. So many people are indebted to Dr. Hon, yet he typically claims that he owes the college. "I don't know of any other place where I could have the fun of knowing so many promising students," he said.

How does a group as large and diverse as the Rhodes family express its gratitude for such magnanimity? Perhaps the words of the 1956 college annual which was dedicated to Dr. Hon say it best. Editor John McKinney (now a senior planner at IBM Corp.) wrote:

"To you, Dr. Ralph C. Hon
...for your untiring effort in improving (the college)...
...for holding high the standards of your department...
...for taking part in every campus activity no matter how large or small...
...for pushing us on when only you saw the wisdom in doing so...
above all
...for your interest in students as individuals..."

High tech teaches international negotiation

International intrigue, border disputes between unfriendly nations, drug trafficking, terrorism, clandestine arms sales. The story unfolds on a small computer screen in Assistant Professor Bruce Stanley's office.

There, amidst maps of the Middle East, historic charts of the Muslim world, and stacks of computer print-outs and class papers, 10 students—all of them international studies majors—have gathered religiously this fall to direct the fates of foreign nations. They are Rhodes' first participants in a high-tech experiment in international negotiating: a computer-assisted simulation that pits college teams around the world in a game of diplomatic marksmanship.

The project is called ICONS—International Communication and Negotiation Simulation—and it originated more than three years ago at the University of Maryland. A satellite-connected computer network links college teams around the nation and abroad, each of them representing a particular country. Rhodes, which entered a team this fall for the first time, represented Pakistan.

The five-week simulation opened with a given set of circumstances—a hypothetical but credible scenario that included an epidemic-level proliferation of international drug trafficking and a major trade dispute between the United States and Central and South American countries. Issues of human rights and terrorism also punctuated the scenario.

Rhodes students involved in the simulation congregated several times weekly in Prof. Stanley's office, huddled before an amber-screened computer, their umbilical cord to 10 other nations: West Germany, India, Cuba, Mexico, Cameroon, Argentina, Peru, in motion their foreign policy strategy—ever mindful of how the "real" Pakistan would act and react to the turn of world events.

"There aren't many colleges offering this kind of thing," said Prof. Stanley, the tradition for simulation experiences is well-grounded on campus, according to Prof. Stanley.

"Our students learned a great deal about Pakistan and its role in the Third World as a proxy for U.S. interests. They also learned that (in foreign affairs) improving relations with western countries can sometimes conflict with a country's own interests and with its solidarity with other Third World countries."

Another challenge for students was to think on their feet. Many of the diplomatic dealings occurred during real-time teleconferences with all nations on-line at the same time. Learning to respond quickly and in character put students to the true foreign policy test.

Participants devoted an average of 10 hours a week to the project, despite receiving no credit for it. One student, Cole Clark—affectionately known by his Pakistani colleagues as the Ayatollah Computer—logged in roughly 30 hours a week, said Prof. Stanley.

Starting in 1987-88, students will get credit for participation and a choice of when to participate. ICON simulations will take place in fall and spring. For budgetary reasons, the program was only offered in the fall this current year.

"I don't think there's any better way to learn about a country," said Patty Morris, a sophomore from Connecticut, never taking her eyes from the series of messages that scrolled down the computer screen. "You become that country."

Brazil, the United States and Nigeria. Three of the teams were actually located at colleges within the nations they represented (Peru, Argentina and the U.S.), and four teams communicated solely in Spanish.

Together, and with consultation from their faculty adviser Bruce Stanley, Rhodes' students planned and set up the simulation. Stanley, an international studies professor whose specialty is the Middle East and the Palestine Liberation Organization. "Rhodes and the University of Florida are the only ones in the South." In addition to the ICON project, Rhodes' international studies students have for many years engaged in Model United Nations programs, so

Briggs name stands for college, community support

The Thomas W. Briggs Foundation has pledged its continuing support of the the Thomas W. Briggs Student Center, which it largely helped to finance in the 1960s, with a new gift of $210,000.

The gift establishes the Briggs Student Center Fund, the principal and earnings of which will be used by the college for the benefit of the student center after the year 2000.

Shortly before his death in 1964, Thomas W. Briggs chartered the foundation that bears his name to aid youth, education, the arts, and community projects. Not only was Rhodes a beneficiary of the foundation with the construction of a new student center in 1966; the foundation has also helped with maintenance and renovation of the building over the years, according to Eleanor Prest, executive director of the Thomas W. Briggs Foundation Inc.

Rhodes was once again filled with the presence of the late Thomas W. Briggs, when the foundation he began in 1960 held its annual awards ceremony in the Thomas W. Briggs Student Center in October.

The foundation annually bestows a $10,000 award to recognize local organizations with an outstanding record of community service.

This year's recipient was the Memphis Food Bank. Mrs. Virginia Dunaway, its founder, accepted the check and a commemorative plaque on behalf of the organization during the campus ceremony.

Mrs. Dunaway, associate executive director of the Metropolitan Inter-Faith Association (MIFA), also serves as director of MIFA's food programs, which include the food bank, Home Delivered Meals, and Congregate Meals. In 1981 Mrs. Dunaway developed the

Men's soccer team clinches Division 3 title

The men's soccer team climbed out of a whopping 0-7 hole early in the season to finish with an overall 9-10-3 record. Besides evening the score, the Lynx went on to take the 1986 College Athletic Conference Division 3 title, finishing 3-0-1.

"We lost to some tough teams," said Coach Sepp Huber. "Of our 22 games, 10 were against Division 1 schools. They were close games against such teams as Georgia State, Emory, the University of South Alabama, and Memphis State."

The Lynx scored impressive 1-0 wins over Tennessee and Vanderbilt. "It was quite an achievement for us," said Huber. "And it marked the second straight year that we've beaten both of them."

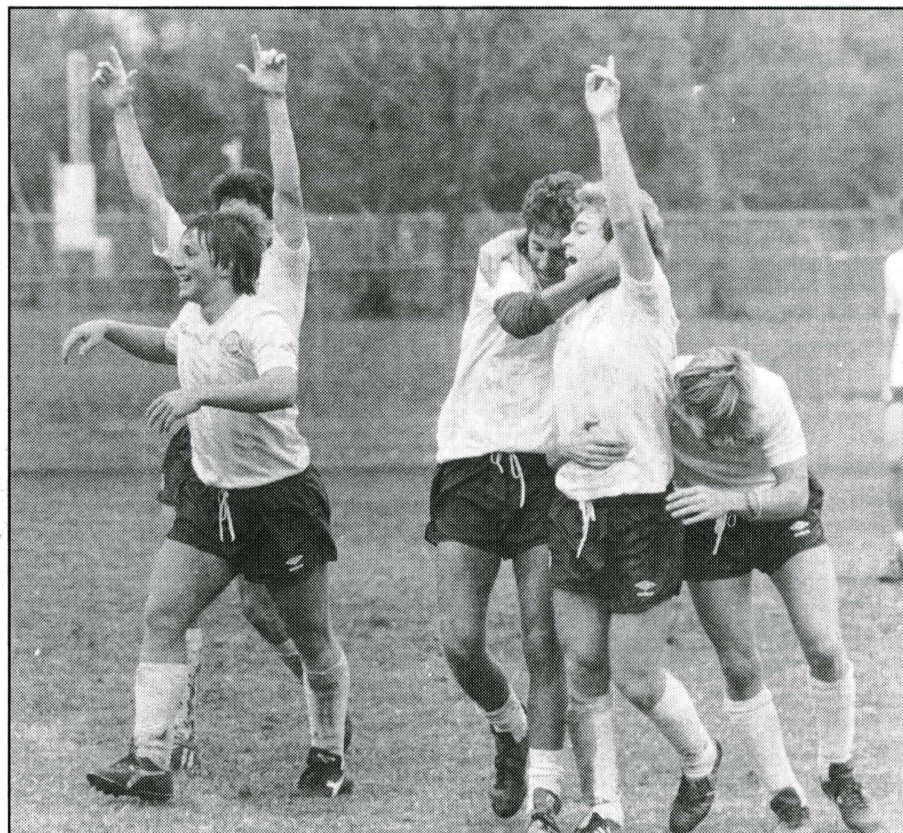

Junior goalie Eddie Fincher shut out both Tennessee and Vanderbilt, in addition to Rose-Hulman and Centre in the CAC. Sophomore forward Anthony Pietrangelo was Rhodes' top scorer with seven goals and eight assists and senior midfielder John Rosser provided four goals and 10 assists.

With youth on its side, the team boasted two freshman and two sophomore starters this year. Only two players are scheduled to graduate in June. "The kids are getting better every year and we're getting good athletes from high schools where soccer is played," Huber said. "I've even had calls from prospective students in New York and Connecticut asking about our soccer program."

The coach emphasized that Rhodes, which offers no athletic scholarships, plays teams that do. And often these teams are well stocked with students from countries where soccer is a national sport. "Skill-wise, Americans are parallel with Europeans, but are behind on the inner part of the game," Huber explained. "I think that's because soccer doesn't get the same exposure as other sports on American TV. But coaches are realizing that besides teaching skills, part of the job is to help a player develop a 'soccer mind.'"

Buoyed by this season's victory and the promise of more great teams in the future, Huber smiles when he says, "I think Rhodes should do well in the next few years."

Soccer team celebrates hard-fought victory

Men, women cagers start out even

The men's and women's basketball teams are starting out even this year. Both were runnersup to Centre in the CAC standings last year, the men finishing 12-10 and the women 13-11. But Coaches Herb Hilgeman and Sarah Hatgas are looking for a lot more action this season.

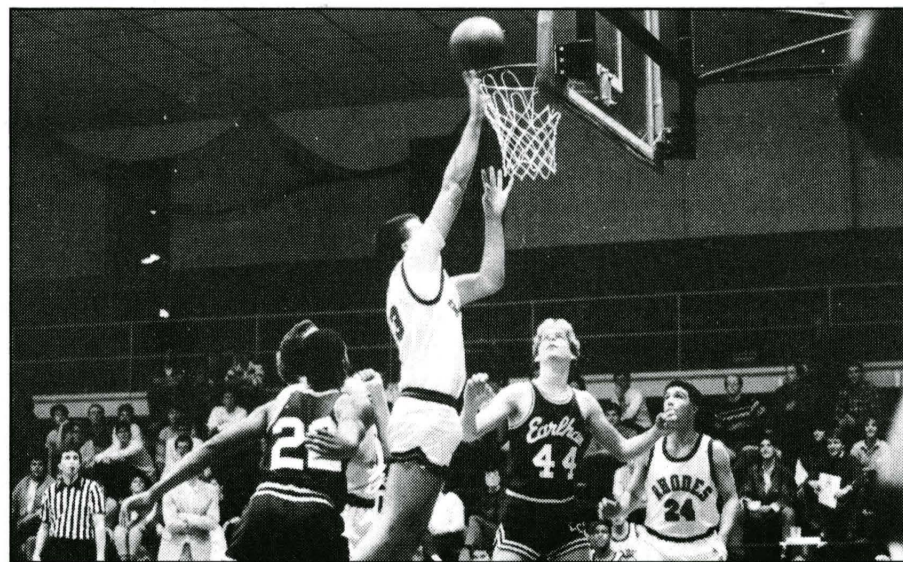

"We had a lot of young players on the squad last year who got some good experience, and we should benefit," said Hilgeman. Returning are senior guard Rodd Schutt, a four-year starter who averaged 7.6 points a game last year, and 6-5 junior forward Donnie Spence who led the team in scoring (16.6 points per game) and rebounding (7.7 average). In the backcourt is 6-1 guard Kevin Smith, sophomore who averaged 12.1 points per game last season.

Sophomores Ted Davis, Kevin McMillan, and John Tibbits will see some action along with freshmen David Lewis and David Perlis.

The Lady Lynx have two returning 5-6 starters in junior Ann Tipton, who averaged eight points last year, and senior Darleen Jordan, 11. Senior Julie Brown, who sat out last season, averaged five points a game two years ago, but in scrimmages so far has shot about 47 percent from the field, according to Coach Hatgas. Sophomores Clarissa Bradley and Kelly Nixon complete the starting five.

Also giving the Lady Lynx an edge are two 5-11 freshmen—Jan LaFollette and Sue Ellen Bennett.

Sophomore John Tibbetts puts it up for Rhodes. The Lynx were victorious in the home opener against Earlham.

Captains' Club names Kiely athlete of month

Star volleyball player Liz Kiely, who led the Lady Lynx on a five-game winning streak in October, was named Athlete of the Month by the Captains' Club at Rhodes. The junior was further honored by being named to the WIAC All-Conference Team as well as the All-Tournament Team at Maryville College in November.

CAC team picks 13 from Rhodes

The football team finished the season 6-3 with five players named to the College Athletic Conference All-Conference Team and eight awarded honorable mention.

Senior center Wright Bates and junior fullback Steve Becton were elected to the offensive all-conference team. Senior David Maddux and junior Johnny Moore, both tackles, were named to the defensive team along with senior center Robbie Baker.

Receiving honorable mention were senior linemen Rod Payne and Rusty Bourne; senior wide receiver Shawn Abel; linebackers Trey Clark, a sophomore, junior Jim Chase, and senior Kevin Schulte. Completing the roster were backs Scott Srnka, a senior, and junior Drew Myers.

"Going into this year I felt we had the potential to win all our games," said Coach Mike Clary. "Of course, we'd hoped to do better. We had the chance, but lost some close games."

Optimistic about next season, Clary looks forward to starting the season with approximately 80 players. "The squad has been growing during the last three years. We started with 55 players in 1984, 61 in 1985, and 71 this year," said Clary.

The Lynx have expanded their recruiting areas, particularly in Dallas, Miami, and New Orleans. "We now visit about 325 high schools in every major city in the South," Clary explained.

Focus on faculty, staff

An article on "Reflexive Narration in Contemporary Poetry" by John Bensko, assistant professor of English, recently appeared in The Journal of Narrative Technique. His poem "Virginia Beach" was published in the Florida Review.

John Copper, Stanley J. Buckman Distinguished Professor of International Studies, received top billing in the October issue of Vital Speeches of the Day. His speech "America's East Asia Policy" was printed in full.

Dudley Howe, director of the college physical plant, has been elected second vice president of the Southeast Regional Association of Physical Plant Administrators of Universities and Colleges (SRAPPAUC). He is in line to move to first vice president, president, then delegate to the national association for two years. Howe has been involved in both the regional and national associations for a number of years, having served as secretary-treasurer of the Southeastern group. As a result of Howe's involvement in SRAPPAUC, Rhodes has invited the association to meet in Memphis in fall 1988.

Ginger Howe, associate director of purchasing, was recently elected to a four-year term as treasurer of the National Association of Educational Buyers' southeastern region.

Mike Ledgerwood, assistant professor of French, recently presented two papers: "An Analysis of Folk Narratives as a Link between the Middle Ages and the Nineteenth Century Medieval Revival" at the Semiotic Society of America's annual meeting in San Francisco, and "Narrative Character-Function in Old French Lais" at the Southeastern Medieval Association in Athens, Ga.

Gail McClay, assistant professor of education, presented a paper "Why Do Away with the Education Major?"

Why Not?" at a recent meeting of the National Social Science Association in Tampa, Fla.

Valarie Ziegler Morris, assistant professor of religion, wrote a book review of The Household of Faith: Roman Catholic Devotions in Mid-Nineteenth-Century America by Ann Taves in a recent issue of The Christian Century.

Mike Shirley, assistant professor of history, is the recipient of a Beveridge Grant from the American Historical Association for his research project "Moravians and Millhands: Textile Operative and Patriarchal Authority in Salem, North Carolina, 1836-1865."

Don Tucker, professor of Spanish, represented Rhodes at the inauguration of Dr. Max Lennon as president of Clemson University Sept. 6. Dr. Lennon is the brother of Dr. Tucker's wife Sybil.

Dave Wottle, dean of admissions, was the subject of an article in the November issue of Runner magazine. The feature included pictures from his 1972 Olympic victory in Munich and his recent win at the Most Versatile Performer competition in Kansas.

Rhodes alumna takes resident adviser post

Kim Chickey '83 returned to her alma mater in July as director of student activities, a new administrative position in the dean of students' office. A resident of Glassell Hall, she serves as adviser to several student organizations, supervises student center operations, works with resident advisers and in conjunction with other college departments to plan campus events.

Ms. Chickey, a religion-sociology major at Rhodes, attended graduate school at Bowling Green State University in Ohio. As a participant in the College Student Personnel Program there, she learned "how to work with college students in the non-academic realm." As a student at Rhodes, Ms. Chickey served as an Honor Council representative and officer, resident adviser, freshman counselor, and Social Commission representative.

Trip to Russia planned

The Russian Program of the college's foreign languages department will sponsor a trip to the Soviet Union June 13-27, 1987, primarily for Rhodes students. There will be limited space for faculty, alumni, and friends of the college, according to Valerie Nollan, assistant professor of Russian, who is arranging the trip through Academic Travel Abroad Inc. of Washington, D.C., an agency which has packaged worldwide tours for 25 years.

The itinerary includes three days in Leningrad with visits to St. Isaac's Cathedral; the Hermitage; a performance at the Kirov Theatre; and Petrodvorets, Peter the Great's summer palace.

A day in Novgorod, one of the oldest towns in the U.S.S.R., will take visitors to magnificent medieval churches, the 15th century Law Court, and Yaroslav's Court, the economic center of Novgorod which dates from the 13th century.

During three days in Moscow visitors will take a city tour of the landmarks including Red Square, Moscow University, the Kremlin, State Armory Museum which contains a dazzling array of the Russian crown jewels and Fabergé eggs

Two additional days in Moscow are planned after a tour of the Sudzal area, a picturesque town frozen in time since the 15th century. Visitors will stop in Helsinki, Finland, on the return trip to New York.

The tour price is $2,395 all-inclusive from New York (round trip airfare, overnight train from Leningrad to Moscow, three meals per day, all excursions, and portage of one bag). Price is based on twin accommodations. The single supplement is $350. Accommodations in the Soviet Union are first class, as designated by Intourist. In Helsinki, participants will also enjoy first-class accommodations.

All participants will be encouraged to attend three briefing sessions on travel in the U.S.S.R., to be scheduled between March and May, 1987. Discussions, based on readings from selected texts, will seek to illuminate cultural differences between the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A., specific Soviet laws, and the protocol of customs declarations.

Dr. Steuterman, Colonel Likes

Two of the college's distinguished professors emeriti died in the past few months. Dr. Adolph Steuterman, professor of organ for 33 years, died July 31 at the age of 92, and Col. David Likes, professor of international studies from 1963-83, died Aug. 28. He was 72.

Dr. Steuterman was a nationally known organist and one of the Mid-South's most influential musicians. At Calvary Episcopal Church, where he was organist and choirmaster for 56 years, he instituted several musical traditions, most notably the annual performance of Handel's Messiah.

Dr. Steuterman was called "one of America's outstanding organists" as early as the 1930s. He gave frequent recitals (free ones during the Depression) and played with the Memphis Symphony in the 1940s. A native of St. Louis, he was the son of former St. Louis Symphony harpist Frank Steuterman. His brother Harry was also an organist.

Several times Dr. Steuterman was dean of the Tennessee Guild of the American Guild of Organists, and was vice president of the American Guild. He was also a world traveler and the recipient of an honorary degree from the University of the South. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Gladys Steuterman, of Memphis, two nieces and a nephew.

Col. David Likes was an internationally known expert on foreign affairs and the military. An Air Force officer for 22 years, he was involved in the planning of D-Day and the Potsdam Conference.

During World War II Col. Likes was involved in several major European and Middle Eastern campaigns. He was a member of the U.S. Military North African Mission in Cairo, the First Airborne Army, and the Air Force's War Plan Division. After the war he served as a member of the NATO standing group in Washington and the U.S. mission to NATO in Paris. From 1958-59 he worked under the Secretary of Defense as deputy director of affairs for the National Security Council. From 1959-61 he was on the faculty of the National War College in Washington.

Col. Likes was a consultant to the Islamic and Arabian studies section at Duke University, a research fellow for the Center of Middle-Eastern Studies at Harvard, and a frequent international lecturer. He was former director of research and studies at the Aerospace Studies Institute at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama and author of the 1963 book The Role of Air Power in Guerilla Warfare.

Col. Likes received numerous awards and military decorations, including the Bronze Star with oak-leaf cluster, the National Defense Service Medal and Victory Medal. He leaves his wife Mrs. Adeline Lee Likes, two daughters, two sons and eight grandchildren.

Correction

The introduction to the Robert Penn Warren story in the April issue of Rhodes Today inaccurately stated, "In 1930 the young Warren, fresh out of Vanderbilt, accepted his first teaching position—at Rhodes." Warren graduated summa cum laude from Vanderbilt in 1925 and did post-graduate work at the University of California, Yale, and Oxford before coming to Rhodes.

J.L. Carmichael, the husband of Neva Kyser Carmichael ('60), is a professor at the University of Alabama in Birmingham. He was inducted into Phi Alpha Theta, the international honorary society for history. The honor was mistakenly ascribed to

Mrs. Carmichael in the June issue of Rhodes Today.

Eve Yeargin ('73) and her husband Lionel Berry are vice president and president, respectively, of The Marketing Works in Austin, Tex. In the June issue, the name of Ms. Yeargin's husband was incorrect.

Suzi Marten Cody ('75) represented Rhodes at the inauguration of Harold Hazelip as president of David Lipscomb College, not Davidson College, as reported in the October issue.

Also in the October issue, the In Memoriam section should have listed a gift in honor of—happily not in memory of—M. E. Grainger Williams by Richard B. Dixon.

TOULOUSE—ALBI—ROCAMADOUR—CARCASSONNE—NÎMES—AVIGNON—NICE—MONACO—AND MUCH MORE

This tour takes you to see marvels so astonishing and so incredibly beautiful that they will actually take your breath away! We will show you feudal towns perched high atop steep mountains, and cathedrals adorned with magnificent treasures. View the tropical splendors of the Riviera on the azure blue Mediterranean.

10 June: Memphis/New York/Toulouse

Departure from Memphis via New York's JFK—overnight flight to Toulouse.

11 June: Toulouse/Albi

Transfer to hotel in Albi. Balance of the day free. Vin d'honneur (wine tasting) and gala dinner.

12 June: Albi

Morning excursion to Gaillac to visit the Friday open-air market. Return to Albi via Senouillac and Castelnaud-de-Levis (medieval fortress). Visit the Museum of Toulouse-Lautrec. Here you see the largest, most comprehensive collection of the artist's work. Visit the fortified medieval cathedral of Saint-Cécile and the Maison Natale de Toulouse-Lautrec, a mansion in the grand style where the artist was born.

13 June: Albi

Excursion to the tiny hilltop village of Cordes, surrounded by a ring of massive ramparts, then to the prehistoric cave of Pech-Merle. Enjoy free time in medieval Rocamadour or Souillac. Return to Albi via castle of Najac.

14 June: Albi

Full day excursion to Toulouse with sightseeing to include Saint-Sernin (grand Romanesque church), the Gothic Cathedral of Saint-Étienne, and the Augustins Museum, the Capitole (medieval tower) and pleasant cafés. Return to Albi.

15 June: Albi/Carcassonne

Leaving Albi, stop in Ambialet with visit to Romanesque church. Walking tour of Carcassonne upon arrival. Europe's most perfectly restored medieval city, a never-to-be-forgotten experience.

16 June: Carcassonne/Nîmes

Motor via Autoroute du Soleil to Montpellier, via Grau du Roi to see Aigues-Mortes (medieval walled city) and the Carmague region. Explore the ghost town of Les Baux.

17 June: Nîmes

Morning city sightseeing to include the Maison Carrée, the most perfect Roman temple in existence. Les Arènes, a huge, unbelievably well-preserved Roman amphitheatre, and the garden of la Fontaine. Tour to Avignon to visit the Palace of Popes and the famous medieval bridge and walled city. Return to Nîmes via Pont du Gard and its three-tiered Roman aqueduct.

18 June: Nîmes/Nice

Tour via St. Rémy to Aix-en-Provence coastal routing to St. Tropez on the southern shores of one of the most beautiful bays of the Riviera. The little port of St. Tropez has become one of the best-known resorts of Europe, where movie stars and jet-set meet every summer.

19 June: Nice

Full-day excursion to Monaco, Èze and La Turbie. Drive along the middle corniche to Èze, a charming old village overlooking the sea, built high on a mountain with tropical gardens and ruins of the 14th century castle affording superb view over the Riviera. Visit La Turbie (the Alpine Trophy) which overlooks Monaco.

20 June: Nice

Morning excursion to St. Paul de Vence. Drive from Nice through Cagnes sur Mer to St. Paul de Vence, much favored by artists. Stroll through the hilly, winding streets encircled by the ancient city walls. Return to Nice via Cannes.

21 June: Nice

Day at leisure to bask in the sun of this subtropical paradise.

22 June: Nice/U.S.A.

Transfer to Nice airport for departure flight to U.S.A.
