A Well-Tempered Season

A note from the Music Department Chair

Welcome to a season of diverse and exciting musical events from the Rhodes College Department of Music! This is indeed A Well-Tempered Season, named in honor of J. S. Bach's The Well-Tempered Clavier for two reasons: Modeling Bach's composition of keyboard works in all major and minor keys, our season's offerings will cover all musical "basses" (pun intended); and the season-ending MasterSingers Chorale concert will feature Bach's Mass in B Minor.

Tony Garner, who was the heart and soul of music at Rhodes College for three decades until his passing in 1998, performed "The B Minor" regularly, considering it one of the greatest musical achievements of any era. We concur. The performance of that work on April 28, 2013, will be dedicated to Tony's memory, and to the memory of his beloved colleague, David Ramsey. Rhodes alumni and area singers who performed the mass with Tony and/or David are invited to participate in this concert, and may contact the department of music for more information.

The new calendar format reflects the growth of our programs. You could say we opted for a well-tempered calendar as well! Included inside are the department's fall events and information about a few select spring concerts. Full details for the spring half of the season will be published at a later date. A listing of the season's events may be found online at rhodes.edu/music/21569.asp

We encourage you to attend as many of these events as your musical palate desires, and find out which keys satisfy you best. We trust you will feel wonderfully tempered at the conclusion of this season. If one key doesn't suit you, we are confident another will strike the right chord. Mark your calendar now for "The B Minor," a fitting work to perform in honor of these two men who made such a difference in the lives of so many in the Rhodes family.

Warm regards,

William Skoog, Elizabeth Daughdrill Endowed Chair
