Alumni elect new officers

The new constitution adopted by the Alumni Association Nov. 2 provides for a nine-member Executive Board to serve as the administrative body of the Association.

In line with its goal of increased representation in Alumni Association business, the constitution also creates a much larger body called the Alumni Council. The Council will be the governing body of the Association and will provide a forum for its members.

The Council will be composed of the Board members plus a representative of each class since 1924, a representative of each local alumni group, a graduating senior, an undergraduate and the ex-officio members of the Board.

Board members will serve three-year terms, and a third of the members will be elected each year so that the terms will be staggered.

In order to initiate the staggered-term system for the new Board, alumni elected a slate of officers for one-, two- and three-year terms at the Association meeting Nov. 2.

Named to one-year terms were President Frank M. Campbell '39, Diane (McMillan '59) Wellford and Annabelle (Paine '42) Whittemore.

Serving two-year terms will be President-elect Walter B. Howell Jr. '66, Sara Jane (Bryant '52) Scott and James T. Houts '37.

Those voted to three-year terms were Secretary-Treasurer Marion Birge '69, Elder L. Shearon '42 and Mary Ann (Kimbrough '60) Volmer.

The Board's non-voting, ex-officio members represent the faculty, students, administration and Board of Trustees.

Homecoming '74 Alumni return for festive weekend

An estimated 1,000 returning Southwestern alumni found Homecoming '74 an exciting blend of business, pleasure and nostalgia.

For many alumni the Homecoming festivities began on Friday night, Nov. 1, as old friends renewed acquaintances at reunion parties. Gatherings were held Friday and Saturday nights for the classes of '24 and '29, '34, '39, '44, '49, '54, '59, '64, '69 and '74.

On Saturday, Homecoming day, alumni met in Frazier Jelke Science Center for the annual meeting of the Alumni Association.

Heading the agenda was ratification of a new Alumni Association constitution which makes important changes in the governing structure of the organization. The new document, approved unanimously in the meeting, provides for increased representation for alumni in the planning and governing of alumni affairs.

Also approved was a slate of officers for the Association's new Executive Board.

The meeting also featured remarks by President James H. Daughdrill Jr., who discussed Southwestern's progress in several areas. Dr. Daughdrill reported on this year's record-high enrollment, on The Southwestern Fund and on the college's plans and goals for the future.

The President described the work of the college's Long Range Planning Team in producing the Draft Ten-Year Master Plan. Thanking alumni for their past support of the college, he urged their continued involvement in Southwestern affairs.

The meeting also featured reports by Loyd Templeton Jr., Director for Institutional Advancement; Ron Yarbrough, Director of Development; and Mary Ann (Ramsey '50) Clarke, secretary of the Executive Council of the Association, who explained the changes represented by the new constitution.

Harriet (Pond '39) McLean, outgoing president of the Association, presided at the meeting. Mrs. McLean cited Jeannette (Hollenberg '42) Birge, former Southwestern News editor, for her work with the college. Mrs.

Birge will become executive secretary to Federal Judge Robert M. McRae Jr. on Jan. 1. Mrs. McLean presented Mrs. Birge a set of luggage, a gift from the Executive Council.

The meeting closed with the installation of Frank M. Campbell '39 as the Association's new president. Mrs. McLean was presented a Southwestern chair in appreciation of her work as the Association's president.

Homecoming luncheon was served in the Frazier Jelke Science Center. A brief shower chased some alumni from their seats in the amphitheatre and interrupted a sneak preview of "Godspell" which was being presented in the Science Center courtyard.

The performers, undaunted by the weather, moved inside, completing the presentation to an enthusiastic reception. The musical, a joint production of Southwestern and Evergreen Presbyterian Church, is scheduled for Dec. 1, 2 and 3 in the Fellowship Hall of the church. It is directed by Tony Lee Garner of the Southwestern Music Department.

The rain ended in plenty of time for Southwestern's football game against Washington and Lee University. The crowd of 2,900 cheered the Lynx to a 32-0 victory.

A postgame reception honoring President and Mrs. Daughdrill, Mrs. Birge and new Association officers also was well attended. Alumni talked with former classmates and present students about Southwestern then and now.

In the words of one alumnus: "We've all changed a little, but there's one thing I can say about Southwestern—it's still the same college, only better."

Hollingsworth joins Southwestern Board of Trustees

G. R. "Dick" Hollingsworth of Dallas, Texas, has been elected a trustee of Southwestern At Memphis by the Synod of Red River, one of the two Presbyterian synods with which Southwestern is affiliated.

Hollingsworth is president and director of the John E. Mitchell Co. in Dallas. The company manufactures Mark IV auto and truck air conditioners, Icee drink dispensers, LP gas vaporizers and MagiVac central vacuum cleaners.

Hollingsworth and his wife, the former Jane Mitchell, live at 8422 Garland Road, Dallas. Each of their three children attended Southwestern. Daughter Judy (Mrs. Jack D. Robinson) was a student in 1961-62, sons G. R. Jr. and Mark graduated in 1970 and 1973, respectively. Mark is attending law school at Southern Methodist University.

Hollingsworth is active in Presbyterian Church work in Dallas and the surrounding area. He has held various church positions within the city and county, and is a trustee of Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

He is a trustee of the Children's Medical Center and of Educational Opportunities Inc., an ex-officio member of the Dallas Area Young Life Campaign and a member of the Dallas Rotary Club (Downtown). Hollingsworth also is a director of the Fair Park National Bank, a member of the board of directors of the Dallas Better Business Bureau, a member of the Executive Advisory Council of the College of Business Administration of North Texas State University and director of the City Club. His background includes affiliation with numerous other community and business organizations.

Mosby, Eckert open faculty recital series

Pianists Charles Mosby and Robert Eckert opened this year's series of faculty recitals in November with programs in Hardie Auditorium.

Prof. Mosby is chairman of the Music Department. His program consisted of works by Haydn, Beethoven and Schumann.

Mosby, a native of Coahoma, Miss., is a Southwestern graduate and has been on the faculty since 1963. He holds a master's degree from Florida State University and also attended the University of Chicago.

Mosby studied under Carlisle Floyd and Ernest Von Dohnanyi at Florida State, and at Southwestern he was a pupil of Myron Myers.

His career has included playing as soloist with the Memphis Symphony Orchestra and teaching at Memphis College of Music and Memphis University School and in the public school system of Drew, Miss. During his service in the Army he was winner of the 3rd Army Talent Contest, which led to an appearance on the ABC television network.

Mosby is a member of the boards of Concerts International Inc., the Memphis Opera Theatre and the Memphis Youth Symphony.

Eckert, Southwestern's new pianist-in-residence, played works by Haydn, Chopin and Prokofief.

He is from Anniston, Ala., and holds the rank of Assistant Professor. Eckert holds a bachelor's degree from Birmingham-Southern College and a master's degree from Florida State, and is a candidate for a doctorate from Florida State.

Eckert has been a pupil of Hugh Thomas and Carlisle Floyd and was in the repertory class of Edward Kilenyi. He also has played as a soloist with the Birmingham Symphony and was winner of the Caldwell Young Artist Competition in Birmingham.

Prof. Eckert has toured with the Indian Springs Choir and has played as a soloist with the choir. He was winner of a scholarship to the Transylvania Music Camp, and has played as accompanist in the voice studio of opera star Eugene Tally-Schmidt. He taught at Davis College before coming to Southwestern.

Roten Galleries display prints on SW campus

Approximately 1,000 original prints from the famed Ferdinand Roten Galleries collection were on display last month on the Southwestern campus.

The exhibit and sale featured works spanning six centuries and included prints by such masters as Rouault, Hogarth, Goya, Miro and Picasso and by many of today's artists, famous and not yet famous.

A Roten representative was on hand to discuss the works, the artists and the various graphic techniques.

Gertrude Doud wins club's Fiction Award

Gertrude Doud, piano instructor at Southwestern, recently was chosen to receive the Tennessee Woman's Press and Authors Club 1974 Fiction Award for a short story which appeared last year in the North American Mentor, a literary magazine.

The story, "Another Night and Day," is set in a southern boarding house. Through her characterization Mrs. Doud examines the relationships between the manager and her tenants

Mrs. Doud, who describes herself as "only a beginner" as a writer, said the award was a "pleasant surprise" and said it encourages her to continue her writing hobby.

Mr. and Mrs. Alburty with students Susan Williford and Andy Scott

Alburty establish 10 new scholarships

Mr. and Mrs. Emerson A. Alburty of Memphis have established the Emerson A. and Emily Peale Alburty Scholarships of Southwestern with an endowment of $100,000.

The scholarships provide for 10 annual awards of $500 each to be administered through the college's Committee on Admissions and Financial Aid. Selection of the scholarship recipients will be based primarily on financial need.

Freshmen and upperclassmen will be eligible. Preference in the selection process will be given to Memphis and Shelby County residents, but the stipends will not be restricted to those students.

Alburty introduced Muzak to Memphis in 1946. Business Service Industries Inc., of which he is past president and current board chairman, is the Muzak franchiser for a 36-county area in and around the city. Mrs. Alburty is secretary-treasurer of the company. Alburty has been a member of the national Muzak Franchise Advisory Committee for about 20 years.

Mr. and Mrs. Alburty are members of the Second Presbyterian Church, of which Alburty is a deacon, and have been active in a number of other organizations.

Alburty's past civic posts include president of the Rotary Club and of Goodwill Industries, director of the Memphis Arts Council, state chairman of Radio Free Europe and chairman of the Salvation Army Advisory Board. He is a life member of the Chamber of Commerce and a life trustee of United Way. Mrs. Alburty has served as president of Bethany Home and is a member of PEO, Chapter F.

Alburty said he and his wife established the scholarships because they "feel it is essential that the small, church-related school be perpetuated and supported" and because both believe strongly in the value of education.

President James H. Daughdrill, Jr., accepting the scholarship endowment on behalf of the college, expressed gratitude for the "faith in Southwestern which Mr. and Mrs. Alburty have shown through the years. These scholarships will help the college extend its program to an increasing number of deserving students."

A chance to further the cause of education

What prompts someone to give $100,000 to endow a scholarship program?

With Mr. and Mrs. Alburty, the answer in an abiding belief in the value of education.

The true worth of education is perhaps best appreciated by those who have become well-educated through their own hard work and initiative, without the benefit of extensive formal schooling.

"Emily's the educated one; she finished high school," Mr. Alburty said with a smile. "I'm not a high school dropout; I'm a high school throw-out."

"The only education I have acquired has been through reading and emulating."

Besides their belief in education, the Alburty's stress the need to support the small, church-related college.

Why Southwestern in particular? Mr. Alburty said the caliber of the Southwestern graduates he has met serves as strong testimony to the quality of the educational program.

The Alburty Scholarships also reflect strong feelings about Memphis. "I came to Memphis in 1926," Mr. Alburty said. "I worked hard, and Memphis has been good to me."

"This is my chance to do something for Memphis, for my church and for education."

Annual Advent series scheduled

Southwestern and Evergreen Presbyterian Church have announced their annual Advent series of musical events.

In addition to evening presentations, this year's series will include organ recitals preceding each of the morning worship services. Guest organists will include Billy Jack Christian, organist-choirmaster of Idlewild Presbyterian Church, on Dec. 1; Kathleen Stevenson, a Southwestern junior from Pulas-ki majoring in music and psychology, Dec. 8; Martha McLean, organist at Evergreen, Dec. 15; and Charlotte McLain, assistant organist at Idlewild, Dec. 22.

All the morning worship services during Advent also will include guest instrumentalists. Southwestern faculty member John Wehlan will play at the 11 a.m. worship service Dec. 8. In addition to being principal violist with the Memphis Symphony, Wehlan is first violinist and director of the Southwestern String Quartet.

The Advent series will feature three performances of the musical "Godspell," to be presented at 8 p.m. Dec. 1, 2 and 3. All Advent presentations except "Godspell" are free.

Alfred Canon elected president of Queens

Alfred O. Canon, a Southwestern alumnus and former Dean of Alumni and Development and Professor of International Law and Government, has been elected president of Queens College in Charlotte, N.C.

Dr. Canon graduated from Southwestern in 1944. After earning his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Duke University, and serving in the Army and on the faculties of Birmingham-Southern College and Memphis State University, he returned to Southwestern in 1956 to become Dean of Alumni. In 1961 he assumed the added duties of Dean of Development.

Dr. Canon left Southwestern in 1968 to become president of Drury College, Springfield, Mo. He became dean and vice president for academic affairs at Queens in 1970, and later served as acting president before his unanimous election as president by the Queens board of trustees.

The Southwestern Singers will present "Mass in G Minor" by Ralph Vaughn Williams at 7 p.m. Dec. 8. This mass setting is for a capella choirs and will be conducted by Tony Lee Garner of the Music Department faculty.

On Dec. 15 the Evergreen Chancel Choir will present Ottorino Respighi's "Laud to the Nativity" with instrumental ensemble, also conducted by Garner.

Two works by Garner will be included in the Advent series. A Prelude for brass choir, two flutes and organ will be heard Dec. 1. His "Fantasy on Christmas Carols" for two unaccompanied flutes will be presented Dec. 15.

The only part of the Advent series not scheduled for a Sunday will be a presentation by the Youth Choir of "Christmas Jazz" by Kenneth Cartwright at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 11.

Mortar Board chapters discuss alumnae club

The Mortar Board chapters of Southwestern and Memphis State University met last month to discuss formation of a Mortar Board alumnae chapter for the Memphis area.

To organize a chapter, five alumnae must petition for membership, adopt a constitution and submit the annual dues of $10. The clubs then decide how often they will meet, the kinds of programs they will have and how they will finance the chapter.

There now are alumnae chapters in 51 cities. Most of them are in areas where there are collegiate chapters, and the alumnae clubs spend some of their time working with and supporting the active chapters. The clubs also serve their own members and provide the opportunity for interesting women to get together to discuss ideas and to share friendship.

One important function of an alumnae club is to establish an information service on job status or business and academic affiliations drawing on alumni resources.

SW mourns death of Duke Vincent

The Southwestern community is deeply saddened by the death of Duke Vincent, Director of Campus Safety and Security, who was killed in a hold-up Nov. 4.

The shooting occurred in a bank parking lot as Mr. Vincent returned to his car after withdrawing money for the college.

Mr. Vincent was a 33-year veteran of the Memphis Police Department. After retiring in June 1972, he came to Southwestern in January 1973 to head security operations. In May 1974 he left to become chief of police of the City of Bartlett. He returned to the Southwestern post in September.

Mr. Vincent supervised a security force of about 35 full- and part-time personnel at Southwestern. He came to the college at a time when improved safety and security programs were planned, and won the respect and praise of the college community in his efficient handling of the job.

One of Mr. Vincent's first tasks in connection with the new security measures was to supervise a program of increased lighting on the campus. Lights were installed in dark areas, and many existing lights were replaced with brighter units. Other goals undertaken by the security director were improved radio communications among security personnel, and training programs for members of the security force.

Mr. Vincent's 33 years on the police force included service in the traffic and internal security affairs divisions. He retired from the department as an Inspector.

He was characterized by those who knew him as a likeable and dedicated man and as an asset to Southwestern. President James H. Daughdrill Jr., upon learning of Mr. Vincent's tragic death, said: "Mr. Duke Vincent was a fine, fine man, much respected and loved by everyone at Southwestern. With his family, we share outraged helplessness and a great sense of loss today."

Mr. Vincent was a member of the First Baptist Church, the Shriners, the Fraternal Order of Police and the Internal Order of Chiefs of Police.

He and his wife, Mary, had recently moved to Bartlett. The Vincents had one daughter, Virginia Lively, and three grandchildren.

Mr. Vincent, a native Memphian, graduated from Tech High School. While with the Memphis Police Department he successfully attended the FBI Academy in Washington. He also completed a course in police management at Memphis State University and a traffic safety course from the Northwestern Traffic Institute.

Funeral services for Mr. Vincent were held Nov. 6 in the Poplar Avenue Chapel of Memphis Funeral Home.

SRO—The Communication Arts Department's first major production of the year, 'The Importance of Being Earnest,' played to a packed house last month in Palmer Hall's Theatre Six. In this scene Jack (in top hat) confronts Algernon after the latter's sudden appearance at Jack's country estate. Cast members pictured are Robert Hamilton as Jack, Robert Reynolds as Algernon, Debra Ellis (right) as Cecily, Ann Fair as Miss Prism and Michael Chamblain as Dr. Chasuble. The play was directed by Department Chairman Betty Ruffin.

Accrediting board of counseling group meets at Southwestern

The Public and Private Agencies Accrediting Board of the International Association of Counseling Services Inc. (IACS) met last month on the Southwestern campus.

The IACS is the only accrediting organization evaluating counseling services in the U.S. and Canada. One of the purposes of the meeting at Southwestern was to review applications of provisional members who want to become accredited members.

Fred D. Pultz, director of the Career and Personal Counseling Service on the Southwestern campus, is chairman of the accrediting board and vice president of the IACS board of directors.

The main objectives of the IACS are to provide impetus for upgrading professional standards and services through a program of evaluation and accreditation and to make the names and addresses of qualified counseling services available to the public.

The Career and Personal Counseling Service, operated in conjunction with the Southwestern Counseling Service, is sponsored by the Presbyterian Church, U.S.

POLICY MAKERS—Last year 40 Memphis leaders joined in the Urban Policy Institute's 10 day-long seminars to examine the critical policy choices confronting Memphis and the Mid-South. Among the participants were (sitting, from left) City Council mem-

Urban Policy Institute begins series

The Urban Policy Institute has begun its 1974-75 seminar series with one session on national policies, and another on the problems of downtown areas.

Since its inception in 1962, the Institute has brought together elected and appointed officials, business and civic leaders and visiting social scientists to study significant public policy issues. The Institute is a program of Southwestern's Meeman Center for Continuing Education.

Participants discuss the topic under study, then apply results of the discussion to specific situations in Memphis and the Mid-South.

The Institute's seminar series is conducted in conjunction with the Brookings Institution in Washington. This year's 10 day-long sessions again are being led by John Osman of Brookings.

Futures Center in second year

Program's future looks bright

A Southwestern program which specializes in "inventing the future" has entered its second year with bright prospects for its own future.

May Maury Harding, Director of the Center for the Study of Alternative Futures, said news of the Center's work last year has provoked inquiries from organizations throughout the area. She said other groups from across the country have written for more information on the futures-invention work of the Center.

A futures seminar on "Learning for Tomorrow," held in mid-November, drew 25 participants including interested citizens and public and private school representatives. The all-day seminar focused on the role of the future in education.

Futures invention basically consists of a thorough, orderly and realistic approach to the process of long-range planning.

The futures program was inaugurated last fall with an innovative workshop on "Inventing the Future Memphis." Public officials, business and professional leaders and other interested citizens attending the workshop studied the future of Memphis, established goals for the city and analyzed how future objectives might be achieved.

The Idlewild Presbyterian Church of Memphis also called on the Center last year for help in inventive planning. Working backward from the year 1985, participants in the project studied the evolution of the goals they had chosen for the church, examining the myriad factors involved in the church's future.

Another workshop dealt with the Vollintine-Evergreen neighborhood in Memphis, focusing on goals for the year 1990 and the ways in which personal involvement could make the desired futures happen.

Last year's final workshop involved the Junior League of Memphis. The incoming and outgoing boards of the League met at the Center to invent the future of the organization up to the year 1980.

The procedure followed in the futures-invention workshops is kept flexible so that it can be tailored to the organization involved, but a list of the futures-invention exercises employed by the center offers a view of how the process works.

Among the exercises are:

—Goal Identification, a statement of concrete intentions for the future.

—Formulation of Indicators, or listing of specifications which will show the goals have been reached.

—Identification of Consequences, both beneficial and harmful, of reaching the stated goals.

—Alternative Scenarios, combining goals, indicators and consequences into complete pictures of the intended future.

—Futures-History Analysis, planning backward from the future to the present and identifying factors which will lead to realization of the goal.

—Cross-Purpose Impact Analysis, examining the interaction of goals and how they diminish or enhance each other.

—Strategy and Tactics, devising specific actions to be undertaken now to make the desired future occur.

'Psychology of a Rapist' discussed

Allen Battle, University of Tennessee Professor of Clinical Psychology and visiting lecturer in psychology at Southwestern, recently conducted his annual seminar for women students on "The Psychology of a Rapist."

The purpose of the seminar, according to Dr. Battle, was to try "to help students protect themselves against problems they might face in the future."

The seminar was organized by Dean of Women Anne Marie Williford and Dayna Deck, cochairman of the Women's Undergraduate Board.

Board of Trustees honors opera star Mignon Dunn

The October meeting of the Board of Trustees included a special tribute to a Southwestern alumna of worldwide fame—Mignon Dunn, acclaimed as "the prima mezzo-soprano in America."

The college awarded Miss Dunn the honorary degree of Doctor of Music. In conferring the degree, President James H. Daughdrill Jr. traced the opera star's career from its beginnings on Memphis radio station WMC.

Miss Dunn made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera in 1958, Dr. Daughdrill said, "and since that time her star has continued to rise, not only at the Met, but with local opera companies throughout the country and through guest performances across Europe."

In April 1973 she made her debut at London's Covent Garden, singing "Aida" to cheering audiences and standing ovations. Her debut later that season with the Paris Grand Opera received the same enthusiastic reception. Last fall she received the greatest compliment which can be paid a Met artist in being asked to sing in the opening performance of the Metropolitan 1973-74 season.

The Board's tribute came as Miss Dunn prepared to travel to California for an appearance in the Los Angeles Symphony's presentation of the Verdi "Requiem." Her performances with the Met this year include roles in the "ring cycle" and in "Boris Godonov." In January she and her husband, conductor Kurt Klippstatter, will appear in concert at the Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts.

Klippstatter is conductor-in-residence of the Memphis Opera Theater and director-conductor of the Arkansas Symphony Orchestra. Miss Dunn, performing in concert under the baton of her husband, opened the Arkansas Symphony's current season in October.

'Greatest Gift' well done over-all, Farris says

Prof. Jack Farris, whose novel Ramey was used as the basis for a television movie last month, said afterward that he was generally pleased with the results.

The movie, "The Greatest Gift," was shown Monday, Nov. 4, on NBC's "Monday Night at the Movies." It starred Glenn Ford, Julie Harris and 13-year-old Lance Kerwin, who played Ramey.

Farris based his book on childhood recollections of Arkansas in the 1930s. The story centers on the relationship between Ramey and his father, the Rev. Holvak, played by Ford.

'Leatherwoods' offers look at early Ozarks

Those familiar with the work of the late John Quincy Wolf Jr., longtime professor of English at Southwestern until his retirement in 1971, will welcome news of a new book, Life in the Leatherwoods.

The book represents the work of Dr. Wolf and his father, a great writer and folklorist in his own right. Its setting is the Arkansas Ozarks of the late 1800s, and through the first-hand observations of the elder Mr. Wolf the book offers a unique glimpse of life in that isolated hill region.

John Quincy Wolf Sr. began writing late in life, specializing in short newspaper sketches. At his death in 1949 he left a large quantity of notes and other material.

Dr. Wolf did not begin the task of sorting and editing his father's notes until a few years before his death in 1972. Adding his own skill to that of his father, Dr. Wolf produced a collection of stories and reminiscences which preserve the flavor of the early Ozarks.

Dobson speaks on Middle Ages

Barrie Dobson, Reader in History at the Centre for Medieval Studies, York University, England, spoke last month at Southwestern on "Cathedral and City in the Middle Ages: The Case of York."

Dr. Dobson's visit to Southwestern was part of a lecture tour of the South which was to include an appearance at The University of the South, Sewanee, and a later visit to New Orleans.

Dr. Dobson currently is a British Academy Visiting Fellow at the Folger Shakespeare Library, Washington, D.C. He holds bachelor's, master's and doctoral degrees from Oxford University.

His lecture at Southwestern was related to the college's Oxford Programme. Under the program, students spend six weeks during the summer at Oxford studying a particular period of British cultural history. Dr. Dobson was one of the lecturers during last summer's program.

It's a record

Final enrollment figures from Registrar John Turpin confirm that Southwestern's fall enrollment established an all-time high for the college.

The official total is 1,095 students, an increase of 38 over last year's figure. The previous record of 1,090 was set in 1972.

Farris said the story was "changed in many ways" in the film version and said several specific points in the production could be criticized, but added that over-all he felt the movie was well done.

He singled out the performance of Lance Kerwin as being especially good ("He carried the movie," said Farris), and said Ford also performed well after a slow start. Farris was pleased with the casting of Julie Harris as Ramey's mother, but was surprised at how few lines she was given in the script.

The largest obstacle encountered in producing the film apparently was selection of a title. "Ramey," Farris said, was ruled out because it didn't have the "right kind of ring" in the judgment of Universal and NBC officials.

The next choice was "Holvak," but

Roper gives 'darkest history' a light touch

An entertaining collection of pun-laced limericks by Southwestern Prof. James Roper has been published as The Decline and Fall of the Gibbon.

The book, subtitled "Through Darkest History with Pun and Chimera," is a collaborative work by Roper and Draper Hill, whose cartoons illustrate the collection. Hill, a former editor of the Harvard Lampoon, currently is cartoonist for the Memphis Commercial Appeal.

The book is billed as the "maiden offering of The Inadvertent Press." It

Katie Early joins Bookstore

Katie Early, new assistant to the manager of the Bookstore, is no stranger to Southwestern. Miss Early, a native Memphian, said she believes she knows "more people at Southwestern than in the rest of Memphis."

Her mother, Lady Margaret Craddock Arnold '44, an aunt, Annah Lee Early '35, a sister, Peggy Early Williamson '68, and her brother-in-law, James Williamson '68, currently a part-time faculty member, all attended Southwestern. And the Rev. Van Arnold, minister of Evergreen Presbyterian Church since 1960, is Miss Early's stepfather.

Miss Early replaces Aaron Foster, who recently accepted the position of Minister of Music at the First Presbyterian Church of Greenville, Miss.

Foster, on campus for Homecoming Nov. 2, reported he is busy but happy

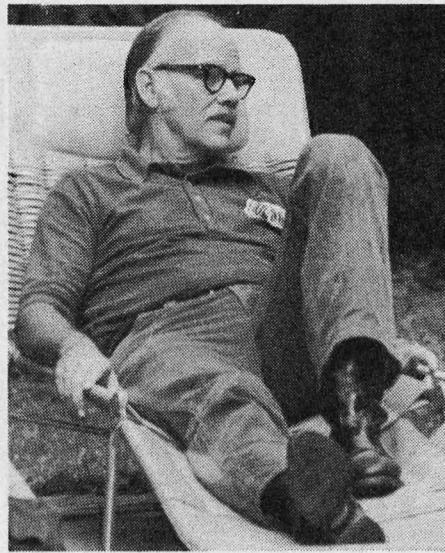

Arnold Ravin lectures on scientific research

Arnold W. Ravin, professor of biology and microbiology at the University of Chicago, discussed "Science and Society: The Basic and the Applied in Research" in a recent talk at Southwestern.

Dr. Ravin's lecture dealt with the absorption of scientific data into the lifestyles of society as a whole.

Dr. Ravin is widely published in scientific journals. His research has centered on bacterial genetics and evolution and on DNA-mediated transformation.

His talk was part of a lecture program sponsored by the Society of the Sigma XI, the country's largest honorary scientific research society.

Prof. Jack Farris

that name was scrapped because of the surfeit of similar-sounding names in existing TV shows, such as "Kojak," "Kolchak," "Kodiak" and "Nakia."

Farris asked to suggest other titles, submitted three which contained the word "gift." None was "The Greatest Gift," but one of the three apparently inspired the final choice of title.

Most of the verses deal with events from history or literature; for example:

Said Nero, just after the fire,
"These viol rumors stir up my ire!
When the government's got
In a spot that's too hot,
We employ a believable lyre."

Basketball season gets under way

Basketball coach Don Duckworth is optimistic about the 1974-75 squad.

"We've got a taller team," he explained, adding that there also is more depth and experience on the squad.

Duckworth said this year's team hopes to do a lot better than last season's record of 4-20. More than half the schedule is against colleges which give athletic scholarships, Duckworth said. All the teams in the Collegiate Athletic Conference follow the policy of not giving financial aid for participation in athletics.

The Lynx open the 1974-75 season Dec. 2 against Tulane University in New Orleans. (Plans for a Nov. 30 game had not been completed at press time.) The first of 12 home games will be Jan. 3 against Spring Arbor College.

Football team ends frustrating year

"It was a very frustrating season," said Athletic Director William Maybry, referring to the football team's conference record of 2-1-1.

The Lynx ended the 1974-75 season in second place behind Rose-Hulman Institute, which finished with a 3-0-1 mark.

Maybry continued, "It was a better team than to deserve a 3-3-3 (over-all) record." Many of the games were close-fought contests that ended with the Lynx on the one- or two-yard line in control of the ball and trailing by a touchdown.

"A team without as much character could have easily given up; the team and coaches are to be complimented," Maybry said.

Final statistics at the close of the season put the Lynx among the top five teams for defense in Division 3 of the NCAA. The division includes more than 260 schools.

Campus station seeks classical records, 78s

George McClintock, manager of campus radio station WLYX, is seeking donations of any unwanted classical records to expand the station's library and to help prepare for a second FM station now in the planning stage.

McClintock said the station also would appreciate gifts of old 78 RPM records for its "Old Record Shop" program, which is broadcast from 9 to 10 p.m. on Tuesdays.

Records can be mailed to McClintock at the Southwestern address, or pickup can be arranged in the Memphis area by writing McClintock or WLYX.

Ruth Duck's ordination to the ministry of the United Church of Christ was celebrated in services held July 21 at Pilgrim Congregational Church, Oak Park, Ill. (She graduated from Chicago Theological Seminary with the Master of Divinity degree in 1973.) Since joining the Pilgrim staff last February as director of adult programming, most of her ministry has been devoted to elderly parishioners who were either hospitalized or homebound, though she expanded the work to coordinate a youth canteen program and include a folk workshop chapel. Now, as an ordained member of the clergy, she is qualified for service in the full range of ministerial functions.

David Elmore has been picked for a select team that starts intensive work this fall at Sacramento Peak Observatory, N.M. Using two new solar telescopes created especially for this project, the team will study the sun's magnetic field. Sacramento Peak, located beside White Sands at Sunspot, N.M., is one of three major U.S. observatories operated under the National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR). Before moving to Sunspot, where he's one of a community of 70 professionals and their families, Dave took part in an orientation program late this summer at the High Altitude Observatory (HAO), Climax, Colo. He had previously worked at HAO in the summer of 1968 and later, as a University of Colorado graduate student, when he was on an infrared light detector team that accomplished its study with the detector (which can see a match at 700 miles) mounted in an airplane. After graduating with honors from Southwestern he took the M.S. in astrol-geophysics from the University of Colorado in 1971. Since then, until accepting the current appointment, he had been town astronomer of Ward, Colo.

Sharon (Forrest) and David Graham live in Atlanta, where Sharon is a media person (audio-visual technician: photographer, cinematographer, video engineer) for the in-service education and patient education departments of Emory University Hospital.
