the military action against invading guerrillas, the Cuban radio said. Fidel himself, who has been reported by some sources as incapacitated, however, was expected to make a public appearance on radio or television.

East and West X-Way Will Be Built Last

To See If Others Can Serve Instead

State, federal and Memphis officials are going to allow time for the other expressways to be given a chance to show that the east-west expressway may not be necessary, City Engineer Will Fowler said today.

He did not volunteer the remark; it was in answer to a question. "That's the reason we are making it the last — or among the last — segments to be done," Fowler said.

Will the west end of the east-west, from the new Mississippi River bridge to the north-south interchange, be done before a start is made on the east end of the east-west?

Still Up in Air

"I don't know," Fowler said. "The bridge location is still up in the air, and there's no indication when we might get it approved."

When and if the east-west route is built, Fowler is convinced it will follow the route now planned. "We've tried to get every other possible route approved by the engineers, and they made at least 32 studies to avoid going thru Overton Park, and they found it impossible."

Northwest Section

Is there any likelihood that Memphis will get an expressway built around the northwest section of the city? From the junction of the north-south expressway near N. Bellevue and Wolf River with the northeast circumferential west to the vicinity of N. Second and on down to the bridge?

"Nobody's doing anything about that," Fowler said. "The reason is we don't think we can get it. Because the mileage has been frozen. Unless we give up other mileage, which I'm not suggesting, we can't do anything in that direction now."
