Subject: ACS Conference and Angela Davis's Keynote Address

Dear Colleagues,

As many of you know, the Eighth Biennial ACS Women's and Gender Studies Conference is taking place on campus March 6-7, 2009. It promises to be an exciting event. There will be 25 panels on a wide variety of topics, and participants are coming from colleges and universities across the country and overseas. I invite you to attend as many panels as you'd like; they are open to the Rhodes community.

Dr. Angela Davis, internationally acclaimed author and activist, will give the keynote address, "Anti-Racist Resistance and the Future of Feminism," in the McCallum Ballroom at 7:00, March 6th. All tickets not being used by conference participants are available free to the Rhodes community on a first come, first serve basis starting tomorrow, February 19th. You may pick them up at the McCoy Theater box office from 10-4 Monday through Friday. There is a one ticket limit for students and a two ticket limit for faculty and staff, The remaining tickets will be available to the Memphis community starting March 2nd.

For more information about the program or Dr. Davis, please visit our website: www.rhodes.edu/genderconference.

Please let me know if you have any questions.
