

PRESENT NEELY WITH GIFTS AT FAREWELL FETE

Studes Remember Coach With Watch, Bag GOES TO ALABAMA

Jess Says He'll Return In the Future

Southwestern's annual football banquet was held last Friday at Hotel Peabody. About 55 members of the team, student body, faculty and athletic association, were present.

The banquet was a suitable occasion for a farewell to Coach Jess Neely, who has resigned from Southwestern to accept a position as assistant coach at the University of Alabama.

Henry "Chi" Waring, president of the "S" Club, presented Jess with a gold engraved watch as a token from the members of the various teams of the school. Chester Frist, head of the student body, also presented Neely with a traveling bag as a token from the entire student body.

Mr. Sam Costen, president of the athletic association, acted as toastmaster, and called for speeches from various members of the association. Dr. Diehl, and others. Coach Neely made his farewell speech and expressed the determination to return to Memphis in the near future.

Captain Arthur Dulin, Captain-elect, Frank Trelawney, Assistant Coach, Pos Elam, and Wes Adams, coach of the Bobcats, also released great flows of oratory.

Prof Shoots Pedal

MOSCOS, Idaho—Howard Easley, assistant professor of psychology, suffered an injury to his right foot last Saturday afternoon when his rifle was accidentally discharged sending the bullet through his foot. The accident occurred while Mr. Easley was about three miles from the Hagaman ranch, where he was staying, when the accident happened. He stopped to rest, and while the gun was pointing at his foot the trigger was accidentally pulled.

INQUISITIVE

The inquiring reporter will ask five students or faculty members each week, picked at random, their opinions of important questions of campus talk.

Question—Do you consider final exams necessary? *

Harmond Ayres—Final exams should be required. It is the beginning of an experience that will follow at intervals thru life. *

Prof. W. O. Swan—The review in preparing for the final exam is always beneficial; however, as far as grades are concerned, I believe a student's status is determined in the weeks previous to the exam. *

Pat Johnson—Yes, final exams are necessary for some human gramophone that can record on paper what they have memorized. The final exam leaves no room for thinking, but gives some immature pedagogue the opportunity to establish the fact that they function as an automaton. *

Prof. J. H. Davis—I believe in longer and more exhaustive examinations. They should be given on the four years' college work, and not piecemeal as at present. *

David Pipes—No; I find that final exams invariably pull my grades down from A's to B's and C's. I am always under an intense nervous tension during exams, and contribute the fact that I have never made 100 on every subject to this unnecessary evil.

President Wilson's Father Was Once S.P.U. Professor

Noted Man Taught Bible To Dean McDougall At Old S. P. U.

Teacher-Pupil

Dr. Joseph R. Wilson, father of the late President Woodrow Wilson, once was a professor at Southwestern, the college of the Mississippi Valley.

"He was one of the most brilliant men who ever taught at Southwestern," says Dean E. D. McDougall. The dean received his first college theological instruction from the late president's father.

"My first year at Southwestern, then known as Southwestern Presbyterian University, at Clarksville, was the last year Dr. Wilson was actively connected with this college.

"I have an indelible mental picture of the great teacher. He was a large, well-set man, with gray hair, determined jaw, penetrating eyes, and an affable yet determined personality. He had a commanding way that made him extremely popular among the students.

ORATOR AND WRITER

"While teaching theology in the classroom he was the same philosophical thinker that made him one of the outstanding men of the Southern Presbyterian church. He was at all times deeply attentive to theology and the welfare of his students.

"But when class was dismissed he changed to his humorous personality. He was a born orator, and he employed his oratorical powers to beat the students at their own game—that of humor. His humor was not only spoken but written as well. He was a gifted writer, and his facile pen was constantly setting down the most subtle of witticisms," continued the dean.

"Dr. Wilson was a man who could quickly fit into any situation. His personality was such that he was in immediate control.

"He was at home in the pulpit, faculty meeting and classroom, on the campus, chatting with students and advising with the lovelorn, homesick and blue.

An old college catalog now at Southwestern states that Dr. Joseph R. Wilson was professor of theology and homiletics from 1885-1892. Dr. Wilson came to Southwestern from Columbia Theological seminary.

KNEW SON, TOO

Dean McDougall at one time was not only under the tutorage of Dr. Wilson, but he was a classmate of Joseph R., Jr., son of Dr. Wilson and brother of President Wilson.

"Joseph R., Jr., was my classmate for two years," continued Dean McDougall. He was a junior when I entered the freshman class. After he was graduated he worked on the Clarksville Leaf-Chronicle, later going to the Nashville Banner, where he distinguished himself as an editor.

Mrs. Joseph Wilson, wife and mother of the distinguished family, died in Clarksville in 1890, while Dr. Wilson was an active instructor. "The only time that I ever saw Woodrow was at his mother's funeral. He was erect, straight, with not a gray hair on his head. He bore a remarkable likeness to his father," the dean added. The body of Mrs. Wilson was taken to Columbus, S. C., for burial.

When Dean McDougall lived at Savannah, Ga., many years ago, he was a close friend of the relatives of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Dr. William C. Fitts, Southwestern alumnus, who delivered the commencement address last June in the college chapel, was assistant U. S. attorney during Woodrow Wilson's presidency, from 1914-1919.

We see that skirts are going to be higher than ever, and we raise the question: How is that going to be done? *

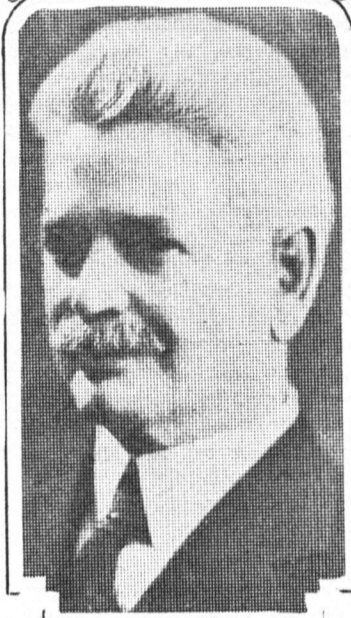

Hot: Here comes a friend of mine. He's a human dynamo.

Pants: Really!

Hot: Yes, everything he has on is charged. *

Hell hath no fury like a woman cornered. *

"The devil finds work for the idle—those wishing employment please see the dean." *

Dr. Joseph R. Wilson (top), father of the late Woodrow Wilson, once was a professor at Southwestern. One of those who remember him best is Dean E. D. McDougall (below), of Southwestern, who studied theology as a pupil of Dr. Wilson.

WHAT MANNER OF PARTY WAS THERE IN THE OFFICE?

Someone evidently thinks the Publication Room is run by the Park Commission. Last Friday night Wallace Johnston came back to school to get a book, which he had left in the Publication Room. He went up stairs and found the doors locked.

"Who's in there?" he yelled thunderously and officiously.

"Who's out there?" a disguised voice from within replied.

"Let me in! I want to get a book," said Wallace.

"Wait a minute," was the reply.

Wallace, after waiting about a half an hour, went over to the Science building and got an axe to break open the door, but when he got back the door was unlocked and the room was empty.

Be it hereby known that the Publication Room is intended for use in putting out papers only.

OBERLIN, OHIO—(IP)—Five college football players were killed in playing the game this year, and twelve high school or professional players died from injuries received in the game, making a total of 17 fatalities in the autumn sport this season.

There were 100 cases of major injuries also reported thruout the season.

GLADYS GIBSON LEAVES MONDAY TO SEE EUROPE

Will Cruise Over Mediterranean Sea

WILL GO TO EGYPT

Expects to Return Home by Aug. 1

Miss Gladys Gibson, junior co-ed of Southwestern, and a member of A. O. Pi sorority, will leave Memphis Monday night in company with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gibson, and brother, Billy, for a six-months' tour of Europe and the Mediterranean Sea.

The Gibsons have secured suites on the S. S. Transylvania, which leaves New York harbor on January 25. Their itinerary will carry them thru England, France, Spain, Italy, Greece, Palestine, Egypt, and Portugal.

SEE EVERYTHING

Cruising over the Mediterranean, they will stop at each country touching upon the surrounded sea.

While on the trip, Miss Gibson will study as well as travel. Her penchant in her college studies is Europe, and she will round out book lore with first-hand observations.

The Gibsons are expecting to return to Memphis about Aug. 1. They live at 1204 Peabody avenue.

Strange English

WARSAW, POLAND—(IP)—Abraham Noz, of London, asked how his brother, Moses set about first to learn English, says he hired a tutor who promised to teach him that British tongue in a few months, and then set out for London.

His brother met him, and Moses started to use his new tongue. "Salve, Abraham, frater tuus Moses te salutat."

"What?" said Abraham.

"Salve, Abraham," repeated Moses, "frater tuus Moses te salutat. Quid novi in familiar nostrat?"

It developed that Moses had been taught Latin. Now the brothers are suing the tutor who admits he was hard up and did not know a line of English.

"Did you see that Big tank in front of the Red Mill?"

"No, what was her name?"

Distinguished by a favor that places it first

It is a natural pride that Camel feels for its triumphs. Not only did it lead the field shortly after its introduction. It passed steadily on with each succeeding year until today it holds a place in public favor higher than any other smoke ever reached. Camel is supreme with modern smokers.

Obviously, there is a quality here that particular smokers appreciate. It is indeed the myriad qualities of perfection that are to be found in the choicest tobaccos grown. And the art of Nature is aided by a blending that unfolds each delicate taste and fragrance.

You will more than like Camels. You will find a solace in them every smoking hour. Their mildness and mellowness are an endless pleasure.

"Have a Camel!"
