

Winnie Winchel—

With a hi-di-ho and
And a hey-di-hay,
We start again on another day . . .

Greetings again, little ones, and how do you do? . . . The laurel of this week goes to the girl who seems to know best how to keep them all guessing—and an A. O. Pi, too; she plays it many ways with a Sigma Nu, two SAE's, and a "friend" at home—how's that? . . . Now I must make a correction to last week's column: Instead of Margaret Jones and Dickie Thomas, 'tis Virginia Jones from Padukky, Ky. . . . But while I'm giving honors, why not give a beeg petunia to "Jigs" and Helen Acroyd for continuing with one of the leading courtships of these here parts. . . . Mrs. Mills' little boy still remains dateless, and I want to know why—is there someone at home, or is it that we ladies just aren't good enough? (Nothing personal, Tom.) . . . A three-sided romance has appeared, but this time it's kinda backwards, being an AOPi, a Tri Delt, and Clark McDonald, whatta man! . . . Hear ye! Hear ye; At last one of the eds about these woods is useful . . . and I mean Joseph McCoy and his camerie—two photographs for 75 peozies. . . . Billy Bethea has succumbed to the charms of a verra blond freshette—now you know why they call him "Willie." . . . I wonder, Willie! . . . And D. G. McConnel is still one of the power-houses with the boys—this time 'tis the Don Juan of the campus who has fallen for the gal—by that I mean none other than Fohaber. . . . Ethel Taylor has seemingly forsook the men (or man?) from our school for a non-Southwesternite. . . . Where does Hi Lumpkin go most every nite? I don't really care, but some of his very closest friends have been asking, and when a man's best friends don't know, something must be wrong, don't you think? . . . Four of the boy scouts almost came to blows t'other nite. Seems two of them, pledges, were so late for their high school dates that Macon and Foley took pity on the goils and went by for them. All men arrived at the same time, and thus—anyway, the damsels chose the latter two and all went to the same place afterwards. The first two think they got the better of the bargain, after all, for they were with the girls all evening and the others had to take them to Fortune's. . . . The A. T. O.'s got together for a wee bit of a 'possum hunt, and tho' I haven't been able to find out much about it, someone remarked that those dogs must have gotten lonesome hunting the 'possums all by themselves. . . . AND now a statement to that "gentleman" who writes those "Sideglances:" I resent what you said, but I do want to assure you that I'm not very mad by saying, If I ever change the name of this column to Garbage Can, you will be the first one in it. . . .

And now to the Colonnade for a swellegant time. If you go, many of you will be able to read about yourselves in this column next week. . . . Now I'll say goo'bye, with a cheer for our team to win tomorrow, of course.

This Collegiate World

Today we have very sad news for proprietors of restaurants near college camp. It is beginning to look as if fasting is a considerable aid to study.
Drs. M. H. Elliott and W. C. Treat, Harvard University psychologists, have been experimenting with rats and have attained results that indicate the animals respond with a conditioned reflex, the most elemental manifestation of learning, twice as quickly when they are starved as when they have food in their stomachs. Even a tiny bite of food cut down their aptitude considerably.

Somewhat different studies on the same subject have recently been made at Colgate University, where Prof. Donald A. Laird tested groups of brain workers after light and heavy lunches. After light meals they were 8.6 per cent faster in learning and made 25.3 per cent fewer errors. The idea being that a big meal draws too much blood to the stomach and produces temporary "brain anemia."

Before leaving the question of psychological tests, we might inform you that a professor claims to have proved that most people do their best work immediately after a change of the weather—heat after cold, or rain after sunshine.

EVERGREEN HALL

"Lightning" was really streaking last week-end. Not the weather, but a certain Jones in town was the cause! At seven o'clock Sunday night Betty Hunt said that Logan hadn't come out of her daze long enough to say good morning.

Mothers of Hooker and of Wommack were up to see Eleanor and Mary Lane. Now Lapsey has met another of the Wommack family!

As a result of Spencer's specs breaking, the Fix-It Department—Powell & White—did a nifty job, a la hairpins and adhesive tape, and Marion sees all over again.

Those away: Mildred Poindexter to Cordova to see her eye specialist cousin, Dr. Minor.—Sara Gracey home to spend Sunday with Mama.—To Jackson, Mamie Rush Floyd.—Aubrey and Utelle and Hester and Floy spent the week-end out in town.—Away to Nashville to help L. S. U. take Vandy by storm went Nannice and "Sis."

"ESCAPE" TO BE GIVEN BY GROUP

Yerian Directs Galsworthy's "Most Human Drama"

Monday night, Nov. 4, Director Eugar Yerian of the Memphis Little Theatre group, will present John Galsworthy's play, "Escape." The play will run for a five-night engagement.

This nine episode play by Galsworthy has been acclaimed by critics "his greatest, most human drama." The leading role, that of the escaped convict, will be played by William Fielding, prominent actor in Memphis dramatic circles.

Guess Who's Who

Q. Where is your birthplace?
A. I'm not sure. It was in Arkansas, but the floods have probably washed it away by now.

Q. What, to you, has proved the most interesting phase of biology?
A. Making pictures of life in action.

Q. What have you observed about the students of Southwestern?
A. The purpose of a co-educational school is to get boys and girls together. I see so little courting around here I am astonished. I think that no restrictions on the girls accounts for this. When I went to school the only time we got to see the girls was when we sat by them in class. Our chief amusement was to write love letters back and forth. It was sweet.

Q. Do you realize that you are famed for your absent-mindedness?
A. It's not absent-mindedness—I just try to do too many things at once. I don't try to remain conscious of the non-essentials.

Q. A great deal of the fem students count you as their favorite professor. To what do you attribute this?
A. This is due to the fact that I am in my second childhood. I haven't grown up yet—or else it is my motherly instinct.

Q. Does a college professor's life appeal to you? Give its good and bad points.
A. Yes, I like it because it does not seem like work. This type of work is flexible, therefore you can make your own time and duties.

Q. Have you any children?
A. One boy.

Q. What is your favorite amusement besides raising Euglena?
A. The movies, and reading mystery stories.

Q. Why do you say of euglena, spirogyra, etc., that they are "wonderful little beasts"?
A. Because they are wonderful little beasts.

Q. What do you recall as most interesting in your college life?
A. The sweethearts of Sigma Chi.

Q. Where did you attend college?
A. At Emory—Atlanta, Georgia.

Q. When did you decide to teach a bunch of pin-feathers biology for the rest of your life?
A. An opportunity to be an assistant biologist at college was offered me. There was no other job in view, so I took it, and now I'm taken with it.

Q. Do you regret it?
A. No; there is nothing else I would rather have done.

Q. Are you happy that the girls admire you?
A. Of course I'm glad—it makes me feel that I have Accomplished Something.

Q. If anything of common interest to the students occurred during your late expedition, will you please recount it?
A. I found one thing of special interest. College boys do not know the facts of life. Strange as it seems, there was not a boy on the trip who could build a fire.

Q. What is the significance of the Key to Manassas hanging in your office?
A. It was presented to me by my colored friends at a banquet given in my honor at Manassas High School. The day I spoke the principal declared it "Baker's Day."

(Note: This professor is famed for his sarcastic jokes; for example: He thrust this upon biology lab the other day: "An old farmer went to the circus. He looked the giraffe up and down and said, "There ain't no such animal." (He has a store of these, which he uses as answers to dumb questions.)

Henry H.: "When the owner of the nudist camp asked for my resignation I called him every name I could think of."

Jug O.: "You should have kept your shirt on."

H. H.: "I did. That's why he asked for my resignation."

VIEWES & PHEWS

"The Crusades," or "Barnum Was Right."

The justly famous pass combination of Morton to Owens was thoroughly put to shame at a local cinema last week. The combine of King Richard to the mighty Saladin made several nice completions, using vast globs of Gulf Refining's special crude-burning oil pigskins. The Crusaders were going fine in the first half, mixing their deceptive aerial attack with dashes around end by King Oswald of Prussia and King Alphonse of Northumberland, until one of their passes backfired and caused their own private leaning tower to crash with noise enough to rival that of the combined alumni and publications office. The roles of King Richard (of the Lion Heart) and his Jolly Jester were very capably handled by Gus (the Punk) Pitt and Toto (of bubble eye fame) Houts. On second thought, it couldn't have been Pitt, because Hon. King Richard never could see that French princess, and her saccharic nature was such that Jack Frost Refinery's stock rose 12 points. The heart-throb sequences were built around a blond-wigged dame named Mauretania, but she looked more like an East River tug than that fair representative of the Cunard fleet. Her principal duty seemed to be quoting well-turned phrases about the sublime (see Prof. S. H. Monk's new book, p. 13, second paragraph), Publisher, Mod. Lang. Soc. Amer., price $1.98 cash, no terms). The closest approach to her appearance the writer ever saw was Little Liza waiting to cross the river with the hounds in full bay and the ice fifteen minutes late.

The high spots were the execution of the French second in command for offering to give away the Crusader's signals in return for a shot at Henry (Ug) Hammond's post at right end. He was turned over to B. C. (Bald-Conk) (Bone-Crusher) Scott—enough said. The way the holy man delivered his call to arms with arrows sticking out of his vital organs (innards to you) was good enough to land him a job with the circus when it came to town. Just who will replace this human pin-cushion has not been definitely settled, but the first in line seems to be Ownie (the Mug) Ellis—at present on vacation from Ripley's Believe It or Not Emporium. The way Saladin (the Mighty) escaped from the defeated city through Secret Gate No. Z-91 was certainly a neat job (even the editor of the Sou'wester didn't see him get away, and you have to be plenty good to put anything over on that fellow).

The picture was evidently sponsored by the American Tin Can and Boiler Works, Inc. Enough Tomato and Pork & Beans cans went to make all those shiny, undentable sets of armor that if they were placed end to end they would reach three times.

This column will be continued when the writer can sponge another pass off the editor.

Capt.—Boys, the boat is sinking. Is there anyone here who knows how to pray?

Parson (eagerly)—I do.

Capt.—All right, you pray; the rest of us will put on life belts. There's one shy.
