Health was once defined as the absence of disease. However, the definition of health has been reconfigured to mean physical, psychological and socio-cultural wellness. This means that health encompasses the body, the mind, and the social and cultural world in which one lives. Health is therefore an ontological condition that pertains to the quality and sustainability of one’s existence. This is the context out of which the field of medical sociology has emerged.

Medical sociology is the theoretical, empirical and applied study of the social dimensions of health, illness, disease and the provision and consumption of health care. Topics that will be covered in this course include epidemiology, social demography of health, the relationship between social stress and health, health and illness behavior, the sick role, the physician-patient relationship, the organization of health care and medical practice, and the moral and ethical aspects of health care practice and policy.

In this course we will also dedicate a lot of time to studying the work of Dr. Paul Farmer. Farmer views poor health as a human rights issue directly related to economic inequality and political oppression. Farmer challenges us to approach professional practice as a moral issue requiring great dedication, commitment and courage. Our goal is to draw out the implications of Farmer’s work for the practice of medical sociology in Memphis and beyond. It is possible that your intentions regarding your professional development may be shaken to the core by Farmer’s work and your experiences in this course. For this reason you should reflect on how willing you are to be problematized by experiences which may result in self change.

Attendance and Participation

This class will be conducted as a discussion/lecture course. YOU MUST COMPLETE YOUR READINGS, and each class meeting will begin with a brief discussion of the essay you have prepared in response to the question assigned for the week. We will then launch into a discussion about the reading(s) in relation to the day’s specific learning objectives. It should be clear, then, that preparation (reading) and participation (actively joining in class discussions) are absolutely crucial to the quality of outcomes in this class. For this reason, preparation, participation and class attendance are mandatory. Three unexcused absences will qualify you to receive an automatic “F” in this class, and poor participation will be reflected in your course grade.
Preparatory Writing Assignments

In preparation for each week of class you will write a brief essay in response to an assigned question. The questions are provided on the syllabus and your response essay must be submitted each Tuesday at the conclusion of class. Papers will be graded and returned to you the following Thursday. Your work should reflect a minimum of three hours of preparation, reflection and/or secondary research (in addition to the time spent reading the assignment.) Your written response to the question(s) should be single spaced (12 point Times New Roman font) and edited so as not to exceed one page in length.

Community Service Requirement

You are required to spend 20 hours over the course of the semester volunteering with the Rhodes Hollywood Springdale Partnership (RHSP). The partnership is an outgrowth of the recently completed Community Outreach Partnership Center (COPC) project, which included a community health component. Dorothy Cox, RHSP program manager, will assist you with scheduling and monitoring your volunteer service. Service opportunities will include 1) assisting with Healthy Thursdays at the Shasta Central RHSP community office (2375 Shasta Street), 2) assisting at a community health fair, 3) assisting with a community needs assessment (conducting interviews, assisting with other research tasks) and 4) assisting with community events (such as the annual Halloween Party). The purpose of these service activities is to provide you with first hand experience working within a community that suffers from structural violence, thereby giving you an experiential reference for making sense of course concepts. Each time you serve in the community you will write a reflective journal entry that 1) documents and describes your experience and 2) relates the experience to course concepts. Reflective journals will be submitted at midterm and at the end of the semester for evaluation.

Exams

There will be two exams in this course - a midterm exam and a final exam. Both will be essay exams taken under exam conditions. They are worth a total of 50% of your final grade.

Evaluation

Preparatory writing assignments 25%
Community service and reflective journal 25%
Midterm exam 20%
Final exam 25%
