COURSE DESCRIPTION, PURPOSE AND METHOD

This course is designed as an in-depth study of the formation of the New Testament and its related literature, and of their role in early Christianity. The course title, “Introduction to the New Testament and Early Christianity,” is descriptive of the content of the course, which will concentrate on four things: 1) the Greco-Roman pagan and Jewish backgrounds within which Christianity arose and with which it eventually struggled and broke; 2) the possibility of knowing anything about an “historical” Jesus; 3) the development of the distinct religion known as “Christianity” from its sectarian origins and the varieties of early Christianity; and 4) the sacred literature, both canonical and extra-canonical, produced within this framework, and the very diverse Christians to whom it appealed.

The method employed in presenting this course will be a combination of lecture and discussion. Some acquaintance with the New Testament (as gained in RS 101) is assumed. The close and critical method of reading and interpreting biblical texts is a requirement. The approach will be primarily historical and critical: that is, it will examine the plural contexts -- religious, historical, and cultural -- in which these sacred texts were developed. An important part of the course will be the examination of the conflicts, political and religious, that were experienced by the early Christians, and how those conflicts shaped the New Testament canon and the early Christian view of the world.

REQUIRED TEXTS:
1) Ehrman, Bart (Ehrman). The New Testament and Other Early Christian Writings: A Reader. Oxford and New York: Oxford University Press, 1998, reprinted 2005. (“Reader” on the syllabus) [Please note: This text contains the same version of the New Testament canon as the NOAB or New Oxford Annotated Bible, so all of the books in the NT canon appear in both places. There ARE, however, several readings related to the New Testament and Early Christianity that are contained only in the Ehrman reader. Page numbers in the Reader have been indicated for all books. Please use only the version—NRSV -- required for this class. Anything else results in confusion.]

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:
1) Weekly in-class quizzes: 30%. Each quiz will consist of several simple questions on the reading. The lowest two grades may be dropped, but all quizzes must be taken. Quiz dates are noted on syllabus
2) Attendance and class participation: 25%. A significant proportion of the participation grade includes the submission of a 3X5 card with comments or questions on the reading for the day. These questions or comments should focus on one of the following areas: What especially surprised, shocked, or intrigued you in the reading? It is your responsibility to keep up with your submissions, not mine to keep track of what you owe.
3) One three-to four-page critical research paper on a selected topic: 25%. Information about the paper and topics will be given out well in advance of the due date.
4) One final comprehensive examination: 20%

All quizzes and the paper due date are indicated on the syllabus. They must be taken when scheduled; all missed work must be made up. If you know you are going to be absent for a legitimate reason on the day a test, quiz, exam, or paper is due, you should make arrangements to do the work in advance. Please make all travel plans accordingly. Do NOT purchase (or let anyone else purchase for you) any airline tickets for flights prior to the final exam in this course, which is Wednesday, May 3, at 8:30 a.m.

Please note: All readings are to be prepared for the class period for which they are assigned.

OTHER IMPORTANT INFORMATION:

Determination of Final Grade:
The percentages of graded work are noted as above. The range of grades is as follows:

A (93-100), A- (90-93), B+ (87-89), B (83-86), B- (80-82), C+ (77-79), C (73-76), C- (70-72), D+ (67-69), D (63-66), D- (60-62), F (below 60).

Please note: Grades are not the result of a negotiation process between you and me. A grade will be re-examined only if there is substantial evidence that it was wrongly calculated. Scholars are not “given” grades; they earn them.

Honor Code:
All work for this course is to be pledged according to the Rhodes Honor Code. “Plagiarism” is a violation of the Honor Code and defined under Article III, Section C of the Code in your handbook. This definition also applies to any material taken from the Internet. As supporters of the Honor Code, we are all bound to report any and all cases of cheating or plagiarism as well as to refrain from them ourselves.

The following “Inclusive Language Policy Statement” is in effect in all Religious Studies classes:

In accordance with the editorial policy and practice of the majority of publications in our field, and consistent with the policy of official Rhodes publications, the department of Religious Studies will require students in their written work to avoid the use of the term “man” (including also “men,” “mankind,” “family of man,” “brotherhood,” and the compounds of “chairman,” “clergyman,” etc.) as a generic term, and to use inclusive terms (e.g., “human being,” “human,” “humanity,” “humankind,” “people,” “minister,” etc.) to designate both individuals and groups. [This applies to humans only and not to the deity.]

Consistent with this policy, the pronoun “he” is not regarded as generic. Sound policy is to use appropriate pronouns when the antecedent is known. The MLA Handbook is recommended as a guide to good inclusive style for both editors and authors.

Quotations are of course to represent the original exactly. Translations are to reflect as precisely as possible the translator’s understanding of the original text with regard to gender.

PLEASE READ ALL OF THE ABOVE INFORMATION BEFORE YOU PURCHASE BOOKS FOR THIS COURSE.
Please read the following declaration, sign it, and turn it in on Friday, January 13, 2006, if you intend to remain in the class.
