Federal Job Agency
Works To Curb Bias

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Federal Government's programs to prevent racial and religious discrimination in employment opportunities are beginning to produce results which indicate progress is being made toward eliminating discrimination throughout the nation, according to the President's Committee on Civil Rights.

The Committee was established to carry out the provisions of the Civil Rights Acts of 1960 and 1964, which prohibit discrimination in employment on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. The Committee was given the authority to investigate discrimination in employment and develop affirmative action plans for federal agencies, industries, labor unions, and educational institutions.

The Committee's efforts have resulted in the development of affirmative action plans for federal agencies and industries, and the establishment of affirmative action programs in educational institutions. The Committee has also conducted investigations of discrimination in employment and has issued reports on its findings.
