A photograph of a jazz band performing on a stage. In the foreground, two young men are playing saxophones; one is in a red shirt and the other in a dark shirt. To their right, a young man is playing a double bass. In the background, another young man is playing the drums. The stage is lit with warm, blue-toned lights, and the background shows rows of red seats in an auditorium.

What if there was a place where you could pursue all of your passions?

For Alex Wilkerson, that place is Rhodes College. Alex, an International Studies major from Little Rock, plays saxophone in the Rhodes Jazz Ensemble. He serves as a Big Brother in the Memphis community. He's learning to speak Chinese. And he's traveled the world. In short, he's Living Rhodes.

Take five minutes to learn more about how Alex has made the most of the many opportunities that Rhodes provides. Please visit Rhodes.edu/Alex.
