COURSE OBJECTIVES

This is an introductory course designed to familiarize students with many of the broad themes of modern European history. It is intended for those students who do not yet have significant exposure to the history and culture of Europe since 1715; those who do should not take this course. Students will leave this course with a good, general understanding of the important social, political, religious and intellectual developments of the Western world in the modern period. This course will also provide a solid foundation for those students who go on to take more advanced courses in modern European history. Students will be introduced as well to the critical reading of primary and secondary sources and to the nature of essay writing on historical subjects.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS

This is a lecture course with readings assigned for discussion nearly every session. Students must be prepared to discuss these assigned readings in an informed manner in class. Students who find it difficult to participate actively in class discussions are urged to keep a journal consisting of summaries of the assigned readings which may be submitted to be graded as partial compensation for poor performance in class discussions. Each student will also write a short research essay, which will be based in part upon course materials and in part upon additional readings. Detailed information about the essay assignment will be distributed well before the assignment is due. There will be two examinations, both largely essay in nature. Final grades will be determined as follows: class participation/journal - 25%; mid-term examination - 25%; essay - 25%; final examination - 25%. ALL ESSAYS MUST BE TURNED IN BY CLASS TIME ON THE DATE DUE. LATE ESSAYS WILL BE AUTOMATICALLY REDUCED BY ONE FULL LETTER GRADE
